It seems there is great preparation at the Lilley House for meals on Easter. A big dinner is in preparation and, indeed, all the meals for the day will receive special attention, but Landlord Blocher has been shy on eggs and in his extremity sent out Charles Bidwell to see what could be done. Charley scoured the town this forenoon and, after robbing several hen coops, secured a few, but forgot to take them from his pocket and, in sitting in the Lilley House chair on his usual after dinner trip, smashed the whole outfit Blocher is now utterly discouraged about eggs and says he should have known better than to have sent the old "chump" anyway.

With last Tuesday's HERALD came a new number and new volume which is the first of the 52nd year of the old paper. For its 52nd year the HERALD will as usual speak the truth about politics and all matters of which it speaks without regard to party or favor, but above all will endeavor to give ALL the local news as soon as it happens, and print each week more news than any other paper in Lenawee county for $1.00 per year. The HERALD is today a paper with practically a paid-up circulation and with the addition of 200 new subscribers put on in December and January without solicitation. The circulation is equal, for advertisers, to any in the county.

LITERARY NOTES.

The powerful and striking art of Arnold Bocklin, the Swiss painter who recently died in Florence, received detailed consideration in the Critic for April. Many of his most characteristic creations were reproduced, accompanied by an appreciation of his life and work by Christian Brinton.

E C. Peixotto ranks with Mr. Pennell as one of the most clever and interesting illustrators with pen and ink. A charming little article is that by him on "Little Journeys from Paris," which appears in the current magazine number of The Outlook; it is read with special interest by those who intend to visit France this year. A Terrible Tragedy Takes Place in in the Third Ward at Adrian.

Yesterday morning Darius C. Bachelder, who lives at 28 Greenly street shot his wife and then going to a room up stairs directly over the one in which his wife lay shot and killed himself. About 10:15 the neighbors heard the piercing shrieks of a woman and on investigating they saw Mrs. Bachelder going to one of the neighbor's uttering a piercing cry for help with the blood gushing from a wound in her neck. The doctor was immediately summoned but he could do nothing for the woman. They have one son Harrison, 15 years of age, who was down town when the shooting occurred. He seemed not at all surprised stating that he had feared the resusts for some time. It is probably the result of a family quarrel. Bachelder was about 60 years of age, while his wife was but 35. A jury was impaneled and met at the house at 1:30 but adjourned until Saturday at 9 a. m. at the office of Prosecuting Attorney Sampson.

A Russian military paper tells of a lieutenant who overheard a sergeant giving a recruit a short lecture upon his duties. "The military service," said the sergeant, "requires little prayer to God and a strict attention to the orders of a superior." Somewhat astonished at this singular definition of military duty, the officer ventured to ask the sergeant for his authority, whereupon the sergeant produced an ancient volume containing the following: "The military duty requires little; prayer to God, and strict attention to the orders of a superior."—Army and Navy Journal.

LIBEL IN ENGLAND.

Not Hard There to Give Cause For Actions at Law.

England's libel law is a terror to the defendants. A short time ago a young playwright sold a piece to a London manager and drew a small royalty each week, which was paid by check. One week when the playwright presented the check to the bank for cashing it was returned to him marked "No funds." The playwright had the check framed and hung conspicuously in his study. He took pleasure in pointing it out to visitors and making biting comments until one day the manager's lawyer called and told the young man that he was committing a serious libel on the manager, whereupon the check was taken down at once.

Over in England the railway companies, or at least one of them, put up in the station placards bearing the names of passengers who had violated rules of the road, with addresses, the nature of the offense and fines imposed. The offenders took the matter into court, and now the placards show only the words opposite the offense, "A passenger."

It frequently happens that names given to villains and ridiculous characters in fiction will duplicate in real life. A certain English novel had its scene laid on the west coast of Africa, and the villain of the book was a major in the army, supposed to be stationed there. To the novelist's dismay there appeared one day out of the unknown a real major, bearing the name of the villain of the novel, who also had been stationed on the west coast of Africa. In vain the unhappy author protested in the consequent action that he had never seen or heard of the plaintiff. A verdict for the latter was given, with substantial damages.

A Birmingham lawyer held that one could libel a man effectually enough by leaving out his name. He brought an action against a local paper for persistently omitting his name from its reports of cases in which he professionally was engaged. Presumably he imagined that the loss of the advertisement he would have obtained by his name repeatedly appearing was damage enough. He was nonsuited, however.

THE INDIANS PAID.

What the White Men Charged Them For Killing One Donkey.

In "Reminiscences of Old Times In Tennessee" a story is told of the good faith and honor of a party of Chickasaw Indians. While hunting one fall they shot a donkey, mistaking the creature for a wild animal. They sold the hide, and it finally came to the hands of John Barnes in Lipton.

When the Chickasaws returned to the region of Lipton for their annual hunt the next fall, Barnes invited them to a shooting match, the prize to be the skin of a very rare animal.

Thirty braves appeared at the contest, and one of them won the prize. When he saw the skin, he turned it over and said: "Ha, ha, me kill him! Me shoot him! See!" And he pointed to the fatal bullet hole.

Then Barnes told them that they had killed a donkey, a very useful animal, but he was sure that they had done it by mistake, believing it to be a wild animal.

The Indians listened attentively to the white man's words and then consulted together a few minutes. Finally they separated, each brave going to his pony, unhitching him and leading him to the spot where a gang of white men stood, Barnes in the midst of them. Then one of the Indians spoke:

"We sorry we kill donkey. We think he belong to the woods. We find him in cane. We think him wild. We sorry; now we pay. We take no white man's hoss, pony, nothing of white man. We honest. We have ponies, that's all. Take pay." And he motioned to the long line of ponies, held by their owners.

"How many?" asked Barnes.

"White man say," returned the Indian, "take plenty."

The honor of the red men was not equaled by the white men, for, be it recorded to their shame, they took from the Chickasaws 35 ponies to pay for the accidental killing of one donkey.

[illegible] A NAME

Something—Something—A [illegible] of Knowledge.

[illegible] old saying and a true one [illegible] know all men by their works." [illegible] has been imposed upon so many times by unscrupulous claims made for selfish means of profit, they look for something more substantial; they ask for deeds. The little conqueror has earned the reputation won in Michigan and no impostor can steal it. From north to south, from east to west, in every city, town and hamlet in the state, people stand ready to testify to merit. Gratitude for comfort brought to thousands of homes brings emphatic rejoicings and words of praise the like of which has not been equalled in modern times. Is it a wonder the name Doan is a familiar one in every household? Is it surprising the public appreciate Doan's Kidney Pills and will not be led astray by the ingenious efforts of would-be competitors? A Detroit citizen tells here why the name of Doan is dear to him:

Mr. E. N. Elliott, of 143 High Street, Detroit, says: "My knowledge of Doan's Kidney Pills dates back to five years ago. I was then living in the town where Dr. Doan was located. I was tortured with kidney troubles and inflammatory rheumatism. The doctor prescribed the pills for me which have since become so justly famous. Their use quickly eliminated the uric acid from my system and with its departure came the cure of the rheumatism and the end of the kidney troubles. It took but a few boxes to accomplish this end and I feel that I owe Dr. Doan an everlasting debt of gratitude for prescribing such a valuable remedy. I have taken great pleasure in recommending this medicine to a number of my friends. I always keep a box of these pills on hand so that should I take a severe cold and feel that it is settling on my kidneys a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills relieves all apprehension."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

When strength is ebbing and the road is long,
I would be the firm staff within your hand,
A pillar of cloud in a sun beaten land,

Last, at death's threshold, tender, faithful—nay!
What need to tell that which heart's truth hath shown?
Is not all said, beloved, when I say,

BETTER THAN LAW.

Julius Was Stumped, So He Concluded to Return the Property.

"I was in Mississippi during the carpetbag days," said the Pittsburg story teller, "and one night at a hotel I was robbed of watch and money. I found out next day that it was one of the colored servants, and I went to a justice of the peace and swore out a warrant. The justice was also a colored man, and he didn't seem anxious to do the right thing. I think he was in with the thief, though willing to give me a show. When the prisoner took the stand, he declared that if he had stolen anything it was while he was walking around in his sleep. The statement caught his honor, and he said:

"'How yo' gwine to hold a pusson 'sponsible fur what he does in his sleep? Dar ain't no law 'bout dat. If Julius dun took dat watch an money an didn't know what he was doin, den he's got to be discharged from custody.'

"I was pleading my own case," continued the Iron City man, "and I replied to the judge that the rule ought to work both ways. If Julius had taken my property in his sleep, he ought to return it while he was in the same condition. I wasn't blaming him for being a somnambulist and was willing he should go free, but I should expect him to enter my room in his sleep that very night and leave my lost property on a chair. That was a stumper on judge and prisoner, and after scratching their heads and wiggling around his honor replied:

"'Julius, dis yere case has dun got mixed up. 'Cordin to law yo' got away wid de stuff an can't be held, but 'cordin to de white man's dreambook yo's got to walk in yo'r sleep ag'in tonight an put yo'r stealin's back in his room. Dat will leabe everyt'ing jest as it was befo', an it 'pears to me dat yo'd better tackle some older man an do it wid yo'r eyes wide open.'

"Julius didn't wait to walk in his sleep again, but handed me my property before we left the courtroom."—Philadelphia Press.

Very Particular.

Mrs. Morse had never used a telephone until her husband had one put into the house so that he might talk with her from his office whenever he wished.

"I do just love to talk through the telephone!" Mrs. Morse declared after three days' experience. "The time doesn't seem half as long from morning till night as it used to when I never heard from you."

"I'm glad of that, my dear," said her husband pleasantly. "I've thought once or twice from the number of times I had to ring up before getting any answer that you didn't enjoy it."

"Oh, no, George," said little Mrs. Morse earnestly, "but you know sometimes when you ring me up I'm busy about my housework with my old apron on, and of course, knowing how particular you are, I always like to unpin my skirt and put on a clean white apron before I begin to talk to you, don't you see?"—Youth's Companion.

How Flags Wear Out.

It costs money to fly even two small flags every day in the year. The two small ones on the east and west fronts of the capitol, each about three yards long, which is small for such an immense structure as the capitol, fray out so fast that it costs $100 a year to replace them. They are darned every day and on windy days probably two or three times. Even with all these economies $100 worth of fine wool floats off into the air in such fine particles that never a trace of it can be found even at the foot of the two flagstaffs.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Wigs For Hire.

"Men do not hire street wigs," said a New York wigmaker. "The man who wears a wig constantly owns it. But there are nevertheless many wigs hired out. Actors, for example, hire wigs, and wigs are rented for masquerades and costume parties, and sometimes wigs are rented for surprises. So that after all wigs are included in the great list of things that can be hired, which list would be found, I fancy, to include pretty much everything that could be named."

PAINTING BIG SIGNS.

ARTISTS WHO DEVOTE THEIR TALENT TO ADVERTISING PURPOSES.

Some of Them Have Had Years of Training In Drawing and Color Work, and Some Have Studied In Famous Old World Ateliers.

Although the vivid advertisements of the excellences of foods, ointments, clothing, all mechanical appliances known to man and a thousand other things never dreamed of in the philosophy of a hundred years ago are continually catching the eye and possibly shocking the artistic sensibilities of the beholder, few of the ordinary observers give a moment's question to the makers of advertisements. The advertising craze has grown of late to such huge and unlovely proportions that any brief account fails to explain its workings. The office of a large advertising concern is one of the busiest places in town. Artists are constantly appearing with designs for the firm, a small army of men with paint pots and brushes are hovering about waiting to be sent out, and everywhere are gay evidences of the results of all this labor.

"Who are the men that paint these 'heroic' pictures one sees on unused walls and lofty fences?" asked a reporter of one of the men who keeps these subordinates busy.

"They are not the people you think them, I fancy," was the answer. "Instead of being daubers, with about the ability necessary to wield a whitewash brush, our best men are real artists. By this I mean that many of them have had years of training in drawing and color work. Several of them have studied abroad in the ateliers of well known men. A man whom I saw painting a head on a wall yesterday is a night instructor in a Brooklyn art school. Recently one of our men painted on a large wall the biggest portrait ever attempted. He had studied five years in the Paris art schools."

"Why do they take up this work?"

"The other doesn't pay. It's a case of 'commercialism in art.' They find that they can't make the real thing pay, so they come to this common calling. There's money in it. Why, our star painters get $50 a week. The daubers, who put in backgrounds, don't earn more than $10 or $15 a week."

The men who paint the designs in various inaccessible and conspicuous places have with them small copies of the designs to be reproduced. Long experience makes them expert in accurately tracing the design upon the chosen surface. Although the familiar advertisements scattered over the city seem exactly alike and one face seems the exact counterpart of another, yet closer inspection will show various points of difference. In the case of a very familiar picture which is displayed from one end of the United States to the other, when it was first brought out one man was hired for the sole purpose of painting that one design, and to do this he traveled from Maine to California.

"Not the least of our difficulties," said the advertising man, "is finding places to put our signs. We hire men who do nothing else but go about and obtain permission from owners to put up billboards on their premises, use a vacant wall or decorate a fence or a roof. It needs great tact to do this. When there are objections, they must be overcome, and after this is done the owner often gets the idea that his available space is worth thousands of dollars to us and to him. The experiences of advertising men among farmers and tramps would make a mighty interesting book."

"Why do you say tramps?"

"Oh, the tramps are our worst enemies. They build fires behind our billboards and burn them or else tear them down out of sheer wantonness."

When asked about the price a blank brick wall in a conspicuous part of New York would bring to its owner if he let it for advertising purposes, the advertising man laughed and said he could not tell that, but he did not mind saying that he was now paying $6,000 a year rent for a wall in the middle of the shopping district. "This is not an unusual sum to pay," he added, "for such prominent positions."

Advertising firms are liberal subscribers to all art magazines, particularly to those French art periodicals which display the newest drawings of the still popular poster. The ideas of the foreign artists are taken freely and converted into gaudy designs for advertising the latest song or a new cigar without the least compensation, since, as the advertisers assert, American ideas are assimilated abroad just as unceremoniously.

Not all the large reproductions of figures and faces on our streets and along the roof tops are handwork. Many of them are machine made. By a process akin to that of making lithographs machines have been invented to lay the colors automatically. The finished product, quite devoid of personality, presents accurately a copy of the working design.—New York Post.

Measuring Your Man.

Put this in your pipe and smoke it: There is always some chap smarter than the chap you think is the smartest on earth—meaning yourself. You are a wonderful judge of human nature, but don't measure your man too confidently, for 99 times in 100 you'll find the suit doesn't fit. Never play favorites. The lightweight today, in your measurement, will be the heavyweight tomorrow. Old friends, like old wine, will in the end prove best. Never go back on an old friend unless you have plenty of money well invested. Possessed of a big bank account and flushed with success—the mischief take friends, old and new!—New York Press.

RESOLUTIONS.

WHEREAS, it pleased the Almighty God to take to his Eternal Home Mother Borden, whom we as a church called "Our Mother," being among the first organizers of our church, supporting and sustaining it till her death by her means, efforts and prayer, therefore RESOLVED, at special meeting of the consistory of the Reformed church of Britton March 16, 1901, that we remember with gratitude to God her untiring efforts among us from the organization of the church till her death.

RESOLVED, that we recognize her as a real mother to our church in giving advice both as to its government and spiritual things and that we shall greatly feel the loss of her in the future. Furthermore, that though we mourn over the loss of her, we rejoice to know that our loss is her gain.

RESOLVED, that we express more by our sympathy to the bereaved family, to send a copy to those intimately connected with our church, and that they be spread on the minutes. In name of the consistory of the Reformed church of Britton.

DEBILITY WHICH PRECEDES COMPLETE COLLAPSE.

We Want Every One to Know How to Get Strong.

OUR VINOL IS A STRENGTH CREATOR.

The saddest sight on earth is a broken-down man or woman.

It is pitiful to see a man that should be in his prime dragging himself through life dejected, discouraged and broken down, due to some premature weakness. It does not make any difference whether this weakness is the result of dissipation, indiscreet living or disease; it can be overcome.

We have known of many very serious cases of debility quickly overcome by Vinol.

Vinol is a scientific rebuilder and strength creator. It contains the active curative principles of Cod Liver Oil in a highly concentrated form. The benefit that can be derived from the use of these properties is so well known that there is no need for us to enter into that subject.

We could quote many instances where Vinol has done good; as an example, here is one coming from Jane S. Fenfren, a prominent member of the W. C. T. U., and a resident of Suncook, N. H. She writes:

"I was run down, was in bed from May to March. Was so nervous and sickly that every one thought I was in a most precarious condition. My weight was reduced to 120 pounds. I was advised to take Vinol, which I did, and am now very much better, and am able to be about again. As a rebuilder and a strength giver nothing can equal it. Vinol is a God-blessing to anybody."

Because Vinol is delicious, and because it does contain these much-sought-after medicinal properties we endorse it, and we unhesitatingly proclaim that it is better than any preparation of cod-liver oil or tonic rebuilder we have ever had in our store.

BROKE THE RECORD

The Legislative Mill Did a Rushing Business.

WORKED WITHOUT A HITCH

Joint Committees Hear Arguments On the Bill to Classify and Regulate Rates for Carrying Freight On All Railroads in the State of Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., April 12.—The house yesterday afternoon made a great record in the way of passing important measures. The list includes the Chandler ad valorem tax bill, the Colby general bill to abolish political conventions, the Lowrey-Ward mortgage tax bill and the McMullen compromise open session extension fish bill.

The house went on record as being overwhelmingly in favor of the ad valorem system of taxing the property of railroad, telegraph, telephone, express, sleeping car and fast freight line companies.

Rep. McCallum's specific tax bill was defeated by a vote of 16 yeas to 78 nays.

Immediately afterward the Chandler ad valorem tax bill was passed by a vote of 81 yeas to 13 nays. Reps. Rodgers, G. W. Willis and M. Willis joined with upper peninsula men in voting against the bill.

Shortly after the house met Rep. Marks of Detroit had the rules suspended and the Chandler bill placed on its immediate passage. Rep. Chandler offered a few amendments. The most important provided that the actual cash value of the entire amount of the capital stock and bonded indebtedness of express companies be considered in determining the assessments of such companies.

Another amendment provides that the assessments of railroad and other corporate property shall not be considered complete until after a hearing has been granted interested properties and the review work finished.

The house and senate railroads committees yesterday noon began the consideration of Rep. Hard's bill to "establish and regulate classifications and rates for the carrying of freight on all railroads in the state of Michigan." Few of the committeemen understood the intricate freight classifications and rules, and it looks as though several days will be required for them to intelligently decide upon a bill that will be at all satisfactory.

Rep. Hardy indicated the importance of the proposed legislation by saying he believed the legislature should pass a bill regulating railroad freight rates in connection with an ad valorem railroad tax bill. Otherwise, he declared that the railroad people would arrange their freight rate classifications so as to practically make shippers between non-competing points indirectly stand the burden of the increased taxes of railroads under an ad valorem basis.

J. W. Potter, a local furniture manufacturer, and who has been an extensive shipper of logs and farm products, prepared the schedule of rates in Rep. Hardy's bill as originally drafted. Since then he has obtained additional data and arranged a new schedule.

Mr. Potter referred to a statement made by Attorney Stevens, representing the Pere Marquette, at the railroad tax bill committee hearing last week, to the effect that railroad freight rates had not been raised in Michigan in the last 10 years.

Mr. Potter then went on to show that under freight classification rules adopted within the last six years he had taken 144 articles of freight and figured out that the rates on 60 of them had been raised about 20 per cent.

Ashley Pond, attorney for the Michigan Central, frankly admitted that some freight rates have been raised in this state within the last 10 years.

The hearing was adjourned till Tuesday, April 23, with a view of securing more information relative to the "commodity rate" classification.

Don't Want Boer Prisoners.

Melbourne, Victoria, April 12.—The federal cabinet at its first sitting today, decided that it was unable to recommend the suggestion of Mr. Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, that Boer prisoners be sent to Tasmania.

A BIG TUG TRUST.

No More Competition on the Great Lakes.

Port Huron, Mich., April 12.—The tug trust is in practical control of the tug business of the great lakes, as at a meeting on Tuesday in Cleveland, the officials of the Great Lakes Towing association decided to purchase the 18 tugs owned by Chas. Maythem of Buffalo. The line has been the strongest competitor of the tug trust, and it was admitted that while the trust did not make any money during the past season it was thought that the Maythems had lost over $100,000. The tugs cost them over $200,000, but they will not receive that much for them. The deal for the purchase of the tugs has been completed, and with the exception of Milwaukee and Toledo, the trust has tugs in every prominent port.

The purchase of the Maythem line will also affect the Tugmen's Protective association and the present engineers' strike, as many of the stockholders of the tug trust belong to the Lake Carriers' association, and they will control the shipping interests of the great lakes. The tug combination, it was learned from one of the men directly connected with the inside work, no longer fears competition.

Grand Rapids Ripper Bill.

Lansing, Mich., April 12.—Grand Rapids outdid Detroit yesterday in the matter of hasty and "ripper" legislation. A bill was rushed through the legislature that is calculated to prevent two democratic officeholders in Grand Rapids from reappointment or re-election. Very quietly the legislative wheels were greased in advance by the Grand Rapids republican delegation, and when the judiciary committee reported the bill out in the house, Rep. Dave Burns rose and asked that the rules be suspended and the bill be placed on its immediate passage. He blandly announced that the Kent delegation was united in its favor. Then Rep. Totten of Kalkaska said:

"Inasmuch as this is a purely local bill, I move that its reading be dispensed with."

There was no opposition to the motion. The bill was then passed without its being read and rushed over to the senate.

Will Keep Them Shut.

Bay City, Mich., April 12.—As a result of a declaration that the laws must be enforced, made by Circuit Judge Shepard, an order was issued to the police yesterday to close up the all-night and Sunday saloons, and Chief Murphy says he will keep them closed if he has to put uniformed men in front of every place.

Drew the Salary.

Lansing, Mich., April 12.—Lieut.-Gov. Robinson yesterday drew $77.78 for seven days' service as chief executive of the state during the absence of Gov. Bliss in Washington last month.

Its First Annual Banquet.

NAMED A RECEIVER

For Michigan Savings and Loan Association.

THE CONCERN IS INSOLVENT

Detroit, Mich., April 12.—There was a little gathering of attorneys and state officials in the United States circuit court yesterday afternoon before Judge Swan, for the purpose of having a receiver appointed for the Michigan Savings & Loan association. John D. Conely appeared for the complainant, Edward W. Bishop of Muncie, Ind. The bill was brief and to the point. It alleged that the association was a Michigan corporation, organized in 1889, and that complainant was a stockholder to the amount of $2,000 and upwards. He charged that the last report of the company to the secretary of state showed the assets to be $622,344 and the liabilities the same. That since that time the company has suffered great loss at Galveston, Tex., and cannot profitably continue its business. No new loans are possible, as all the income of the association is expended in paying withdrawing shareholders, and many of the assets of the company, it is alleged, have been hypothecated for the purpose of raising money for the payment of the shares of withdrawing shareholders. There should be a board of seven directors, but since last November there have been but three. A receiver was prayed for, who should have authority to bring suit, marshal assets and wind up the affairs of the company.

The answer of the company, for whom appeared DeForest Paine, was largely a confession of the facts recited in the bill. It was said that the company did a large business and was prosperous until the time of the maturing of the first issues of stock and the withdrawal of funds consequent upon their being surrendered. The loans made to raise the money to pay these withdrawals were all duly authorized by the directors, it was said. The answer joined in the assertion that the affairs should be wound up. It says there are a thousand stockholders in Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Texas, North Dakota, Arkansas and Wyoming.

George H. Lord, state examiner, made defendant as being in possession of the office, filed his answer, Atty.-Gen. Oren appearing for him. He found the concern to be insolvent and recommended the appointment of a receiver.

Upon this showing Judge Swan made an order appointing Ralph L. Aldrich receiver, and fixing his bond at $10,000. Judge Swan was particular to have the order appointing the receiver contain a clause providing for quarterly reports, and the blank form already prepared was so amended.

Must Take Off the Boycott.

Chicago, April 12.—After a two days' session, the committee of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor selected to arbitrate the complaint of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union against Victor F. Lawson, publisher of the Daily News, yesterday rendered a decision. The decision is a recommendation that the pressmen and assistants officially declare off the boycott on the News. Until the pressmen shall have taken this action, the decision states that the council is not warranted in attempting to settle any other issue.

Naval Station at Port Royal.

Washington, April 12.—Admiral Crowninshield, who has just returned from an inspection of southern ports with a view to the establishment of a naval training station, has recommended to the secretary of the navy that the naval station at Port Royal, S. C., be utilized for this purpose. The secretary heartily approves of the recommendation and informed Congressman Elliott that the buildings at Port Royal would be used and improved for the accommodation of from 500 to 1,000 boys, chiefly from the south.

Will Go On the Stand Himself.

Frankfort, Ky., April 12.—The testimony in the case of Garnett Ripley brought out nothing sensational yesterday that had not already been anticipated. Judge W. H. Yost testified, corroborating the evidence given by former Gov. W. O. Bradley. It is said that at the close of the evidence for the prosecution the defendant will go on the stand himself and still further corroborate Bradley and Yost, and make other equally sensational statements.

Robbed a Monument.

Indianapolis, April 12.—Serious damage was done to the Thomas A. Hendricks monument, in the state house grounds, during last night, presumably by metal thieves. One of the granite ornaments, weighing 100 pounds and surmounted by a heavy piece of bronze shield, crossed with a piece of bronze representing a laurel leaf, was forced from its place high up on the monument and carried away, and the scales which the figure of justice held in her hand were stolen.

The Sealing Fleet's Trouble.

St. Johns, N. F., April 12.—The sealing steamer Iceland reached St. Johns last evening with 20,000 seals, being one of the heaviest laden ships of the fleet, despite her collision with an iceberg in the early days of the fishery, which injured her bows. The steamer Greenland, which has gone to the rescue of the crew of the Hope, is expected to reach Bryon island, in the gulf of St. Lawrence, to-night and to embark the castaways Saturday.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, but, he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1 1-2 boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." For eruptions, eczema, tetter salt rheum, sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them. C. A. Wright will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

TOOK HIS ADVICE.

A Veterinary Surgeon, of Battle Creek, Tells About It.

How many times in life a few words of good advice, coming from a friend one can depend upon, will save us hours perhaps months of misery. The following which coming from Battle Creek will interest our readers. Dr. Oliver Guiteaux, veterinary surgeon of that city, a well known man there, as well as in Kalamazoo and Marshall, speaks of his experience with the little conqueror and the result of a few timely words of advice, he says:

"I was standing in Amberg & Murphy's drug store in Battle Creek one day when a friend of mine came in and asked for a box of kidney pills. After he had made his purchase I said quietly to him, "You have made a mistake in buying these." His reply was "How is that?" I said Doan's Kidney Pills are worth all others put together. As he wanted my reasons for thinking so I told him my kidneys had bothered me for years, that I suffered from backache until I could scarcely stand it, that I had nearly every symptom to be found where the kidneys are affected, that I had used remedy after remedy including box after box of the one he had just purchased, and that until I used Doan's Kidney Pills I might have taken as many spoonfuls of water, in fact I think some of them hurt me. A couple of weeks after this I met him on the street when he said: "Doc., Doan's Kidney Pills are just as you represented. After using the box over which we had a conversation in Amberg & Murphy's drug store I was as bad as ever. I then procured Doan's and stuck to their treatment until they cured me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

MRS. CATHARINE BURDETT.

"There is a reaper whose name is Death
And he reaps the golden grain at a

Died in Macon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Malankton Smith, Tuesday morning, April 2, 1901, Mrs. Cathrine Burdett, aged 79 years 8 months 25 days.

The deceased was born in the state of New York, July 8, 1821, and came with her parents to Michigan when the country was new. A few years after she was married to Geo. W. Burdett, who preceded her to the better land March 10, 1884. To this couple were born four children, one daughter and three sons, all living except one son, who was a soldier and died at Jackson, Tenn., Sept. 26, 1862.

Mrs. Burdett was a kind and affectionate mother and will be missed and mourned not only by her children but by neighbors and friends and all who knew her. She was for many years a faithful member of the Free Will Baptist church of this place and she was ready and waiting for the Saviour to summon her to the mansion prepared for her in His kingdom.

The funeral services were held at the M. E. church Thursday, April 4 Rev. E. M. Moore officiated and chose St. John 17-4 for his text. The remains were buried beside those of her husband to await the final resurrection.

CARD OF THANKS.

The family of the late Mrs. Catharine Burdett wish to express their heartfelt thanks to the sympathizing friends and neighbors, who so kinkly assisted during the sickness and burial of our loved one, also to the choir for music and the W. C. T. U. for their beautiful floral offering.

Nerve Food

If you have neuralgia, Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will feed the nerve that is crying for food—it is hungry—and set your whole body going again, in a way to satisfy nerve and brain from your usual food.

That is cure.

If you are nervous and irritable, you may only need more fat to cushion your nerves—you are probably thin—and Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will give you the fat, to begin with.

Cure, so far as it goes. Full cure is getting the fat you need from usual food, and Scott's Emulsion will help you to that.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

It looks like a factory in the near future, as the beet sugar company have received 12,000 pounds of beet seed to be planted this year.

The G. A. R. and W. R. C. held a camp fire last Saturday evening attended by many of the boys in blue and their wives. The evening was spent in music, recitation, and war stories, with maple sugar and other good things for refreshments.

Mrs. Jas. A. Hess was surprised last Friday by some of her friends calling on her, and as they carried refreshments there was a grand supper. All had a jolly good time. Mrs. Hess was given a fancy plate to remind her of the occasion in later years.

Hon. Moses J. Howe has been supervisor for Milan township for many years and elected last week for the 30th consecutive term. Mr. Howe has always filled the place so well that the Milan people never think of having any one else, at least, it looks that way.

The Dundee people enjoyed a grand treat last Friday night. The Round Lady orchestra from Detroit were at the Haynes opera house and did fine work. Miss Gertrude Miller was a fine elocutionist and Harold Sprague Round sang the "Holy City." Harold has a fine soprano voice. High Chief Ranger W. E. Brown gave a talk in the interest of the Forresters. W. A. Crouch, the organizer, is doing good work in the county.

Every woman in the country ought to know about

Mother's Friend

Those who do know about it wonder how they ever got along without it. It has robbed childbirth of its terrors for many a young wife. It has preserved her girlish figure and saved her much suffering. It is an external liniment, and therefore absolutely no danger of upsetting the system as drugs taken internally are apt to do. It is to be rubbed into the abdomen to soften and strengthen the muscles which are to bear the strain. This means much less pain. It also prevents morning sickness and all of the other discomforts of pregnancy.

A druggist of Macon, Ga., says: "I have sold a large quantity of Mother's Friend and have never known an instance where it has failed to produce the good results claimed for it."

A prominent lady of Lamberton, Ark., writes: "With my first six children I was in labor from 24 to 30 hours. After using Mother's Friend, my seventh was born in 4 hours."

GET STRONG

Vinol Makes Weak People Strong.

WE GUARANTEE IT WILL DO SO.

WE KNOW OF NO TONIC OR REBUILDER LIKE IT.

Vinol does create strength.

We know that and have proved it in many instances.

The reason Vinol rejuvenates and strengthens a person is that it acts directly upon the stomach, strengthening and toning up this great vital organ and enabling it to obtain for itself, from the food that is taken into it, the elements which are required to make firm healthy flesh and muscle tissue, sound bone structure and pure healthy blood.

Vinol does this in a scientific way and is enabled to do it because it contains, dissolved in a delicate mild wine, in a highly concentrated state, the active principles of cod-liver oil.

Vinol does not contain any of the grease that formerly characterized cod-liver oil, hence is free from all the objectionable features which made it impossible for patients to take or retain that vile-smelling remedy into their stomach.

Vinol in its favorable action upon the stomach and other organs of the body acts also in a beneficial way upon the nerves and brain, and will be found to be invaluable to brain workers as well as body workers.

The following letter is from a well-known authoress. It reads as follows:

"I wish to acknowledge the receipt of the Vinol and testify to its great benefits. Since taking it I am much improved in health, and during the intense heat of last August I should not have been able to continue in my literary work if it had not been for the strengthening properties of Vinol. Yours in gratitude."—ELLA STARR, 106 W. 82d St., N. Y. City.

We wish any one suffering from weakness, a demoralized condition of the nerves, or a susceptibility to wasting diseases, to call on us and hear what we have to say in regard to Vinol.

Try it on our recommendation, and if you find it does not do everything we claim for it, we will gladly refund to you the amount you have paid us.

Miller—Schonberg

In the presence of about 175 guests, the wedding of Miss Henrietta Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Fred Miller, and Karl Schonberg was celebrated Tuesday. The marriage service was read by Rev. Woldt at one o'clock in the afternoon at the German Lutheran church of Lake Ridge, which was prettily decorated with floral adornments. To the soft strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march the bridal party proceeded to the altar.

The bride was gowned in a pretty creation of gray trimmed with white silk and lace. In her hand she carried a beautiful bouquet of pink carnations. The bridesmaids were the Misses Emma Karcher, cousin of the bride, and Anna Redhu They were attired in gowns of gray with pink trimmings. Messrs. Otto Bach and Will Miller, brother of the bride, acted as groomsmen.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon a dinner was served at the Miller residence. The gifts were numerous and elegant. There were many guests from away. Those from Tecumseh were Mr. and Mrs Seaton Andersen, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. U. Smith and family, Mrs. H. Smith and family, Misses Christine Leutheuser and Edna Smith and Messrs. Walter Lowry and Faron Anderson. The happy couple leave Monday for Ruby, Mich, where they will reside.

THE SCHOOLS.

It has been decided by the school board that the 17 graduates must have their usual commencement program of essays and music.

Janitor Saul is doing his annual yard raking and, as a result, we are beginning to look pretty slick.

From Miss Hartbeck's precincts there have been several absent this week, among them being Isabelle Case, Fred Frost and Blanche Roberts

A pocket book, containing a good sum of money, was dropped in front of the Central building Monday and Harry Corwin, who picked it up at once took steps to have it returned to its owner. That act will be worth a bushel of letters of recommendation to him in the future

The Rebekahs Visit Blissfield.

Wednesday afternoon about 30 of the Tecumseh Rebekahs, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. O E. Hawkins, took the Lake Shore train for Blissfield in response to an invitation from that lodge Upon arrival they were met at the depot by a number of ladies and escorted to the pretty I. O. O. F. hall.

After pleasantly spending an hour in renewing acquaintance with the sisters and brethren, the guests were ushered into the banquet hall where an elegant supper was served. Then lodge opened. Five candidates were initiated and the Blissfield degree staff certainly does the beautiful work well.

The visitors then bade adieu to their delightful entertainers and arrived home on the 8:24, having spent one of the most pleasant evenings in the history of the Tecumseh branch of the order.

THE CHURCHES.

At the Presbyterian church Sunday the pastor will preach in the morning on the theme "Christ's Pre-eminence." The evening service will be in charge of the Salvation Army and Major Jenkins, of Detroit, will speak.

The Salvation Army special meetings Saturday and Sunday led by Major W. F Jenkins are as follows: Salvation meeting Saturday evening at army hall at 8 p. m., Methodist church Sunday morning; army hall at 3 p m. and a union service at the Presbyterian church at the usual church hour in the evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all

The Most Stubborn Coughs

Resulting from an attack of la grippe or heavy cold, must yield to the wonderful healing properties of Foley's Honey and Tar, which strengthens the lungs and makes them sound. J. J. Orr.

The editor of the Fordville, Ky., Miscellaneous writes as a postscript a business letter: "I was cured of kidney trouble by taking Foley's Kidney Cure." Take nothing else. J. J. Orr.

People Say that Ruma-Katah Does Cure.

Mr. Miles Baldwin, one of Tecumseh's old and respected citizens, whom every one knows was so afflicted with nervousness that he had lost control of his hands, reports that after 4 days' use of wonderful Ruma-Katah, the excessive palsy and shaking was stopped and great benefit otherwise received. These facts are more worthy of note as Mr. Baldwin is a man past 80 years of age, and has lived in Tecumseh for almost 50 years. Others who have received benefit here are A C. Billington, stomach and nerves; F. M. Erskine, stomach trouble; Richard Goodall, rheumatism; John Burtless, stomach and heart trouble.

RAILROAD NEWS.

About 6:30 this morning as the southbound freight on the D. & L N was crossing the bridge between Merrick street and Michigan avenue in Adrian the piston rod of engine No. 6 broke off into the crossbar, knocking the front cylinder head out into the river. Engineer Dickens at once disconnected the valve rod from the rocker arm and covered the steam ports with the valve, which he fastened and worked one side of the engine. Word was dispatched here for another engine, and No. 58 was was sent on. The accident occurred near the center of the bridge. Besides several large dents in the wood work there are several bolt heads knocked off. The cylinder head weighs about 300 pounds, and on account of the escaping steam, it was hard to locate just where it went into the river.

Miss Bertha Fenton, of Adrian, will be a guest of Mrs. Bert Abbott over Sunday.

Bert Abbott is in Delray this week.

CUBAN CONVENTION

Still Fighting the Platt Amendment Hard.

Havana, April 12.—At the secret session of the constitutional convention Thursday several delegates offered motions that the convention should express its disapproval of the principles embodied in the Platt amendments, especially the clauses 1, 3, 4 and 7. Senor Giberga moved that the subject be indefinitely postponed, but this proposal was supported by only six delegates.

The effort of the radical element is to put the convention on record against the amendment before voting to send a commission to Washington. It was evident the radicals had a majority yesterday. The matter will be further discussed to-day.

It is the opinion of the Havana bar that the case of libel against La Discusion on account of the so-called "crucifixion caricature" will not come before the courts.

DE WET DISTRACTED.

Pen Picture of the Situation Surrounding His Troops.

London, April 12.—A news agency publishes a dispatch from Cape Town received by the Frankfurter Zeitung, purporting to be a true pen picture of the present situation in South Africa.

The dispatch says that De Wet is so distracted by the hopelessness of his cause that he can truthfully be described as insane. He goes in fear of his life amidst his own troops, and keeps himself surrounded, night and day, by a bodyguard of chosen adherents.

From his own ranks voices are now frequently heard calling imperatively for peace.

Big Wrestling Match.

St. Louis, April 12.—President C. H. Haughton of the West End Athletic club announced last night that he has matched Nouroulah, the big Bulgarian wrestler, who recently arrived in New York, and Charles Wittmer, the well-known Cincinnati wrestler. The men will meet at the exposition coliseum here on April 22 in a catch-as-catch-can affair. Wittmer is the only man in this country that wrestled with and was not thrown by Yousof, the original "Terrible Turk." Uouroulah tips the beam at 316 pounds.

"Regulated" the Parson.

Independence, Mo., April 12.—A number of negroes, made up of members of the faction in the Baptist church that is opposed to its pastor, Elder J. T. Fitts, seized the minister and his wife after prayer meeting last night, threw ropes around their necks, dragged them into a hollow beside the road and "regulated" them with barrel staves laid vigorously on their backs, Minister Fitts swore out warrants for six of the regulators.

Bad for Barnesville.

Barnesville, O., April 12.—Fire resulted in the destruction of the new plant of the Barnesville Hosiery Co. yesterday. Just how the fire originated is a mystery. A conservative estimate places the loss at $60,000 on building and stock, with $35,000 insurance. More than 100 employes are thrown out of work. It is not likely that the factory will be rebuilt.

Pennsylvania Will Be There.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 12.—A joint resolution was adopted in the senate yesterday appropriating $35,000 to a commission which shall represent Pennsylvania at the St. Louis exposition. The commission will consist of five senators, eight representatives and the president and the speaker of the two branches.

Won't Be Her Partner.

Glasgow, April 12.—Advices from Gourock, on the Firth of Clyde, say Sir Thos. Lipton has given up the idea of taking the Shamrock I across the Atlantic as a racing partner for Shamrock II for preliminary trials in American waters. Experts who have seen the new Shamrock unanimously agree that old Shamrock would never be able to push her in a windward race.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

The United States armored cruiser New York, with Rear Admiral Frederick Rodgers on board, has arrived at Port Said on the way to Manila.

The Vorwaerts, the socialist organ, asserts that the student demonstrations in Russia have spread to Siberia and that 300 students recently paraded in Tomsk, singing revolutionary songs.

The Lokal Anzeiger and the Frankfurter Zeitung confirm the report that 5,000 of the workmen of Herr Krupp have been dismissed, including 3,000 who were employed in the cannon works.

The decision of the Japanese minister of finance, Viscount Vatanabe, to postpone the railroad, telegraph and telephone undertakings, although the budget provided expenditures for this purpose, has created much public dissatisfaction.

Beautiful Women.

A clear complexion can come only from pure blood and a healthy liver and stomach Knox Stomach Tablets purify the blood and rid the system of the poisons that show on the skin in pimples and blotches. Fifty doses fifty cents at druggists.

Mrs. Esther Brown.

Esther Schreder was born in Ridgeway township August 16, 1838, and departed this life Sunday, April 7, 1901. February 22, 1860, she was married to Elias Brown and has resided since her marriage on the homestead in Raisin from which the funeral took place last Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Brown was a member of the Universalist church of this place, was an energetic, active worker, possessed of the courage of her convictions and ready at all times to defend them.

Mrs Brown is survived by three daughters, Mrs. E B Taft, Mrs. Thos. Brown and Miss Ella Brown, by two sons, Charles and Fred, and by one brother, John Schreder, of this village.

An active busy life like hers taken from the home circle, the neighborhood and the church, makes death seem particularly sad to those remaining and the only thought of consolation is in remembering

"Where the faded flower shall freshen
Freshen never more to fade,
Where the shaded sky shall brighten,
Brighten never more to shade,
Where the sun blaze never scorches,
Where the starbeams cease to chill,
Where no tempest wakes the echo
Of the wood or wave or hill,
Where the morn shall wake in gladness
And the noon the joy prolong,
Where the daylight dies in fragrance
'Mid the burst of holy song,
Sister, we shall meet and rest
'Mid the holy and the blest."

Running sores, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., quickly cured by Banner Salve, the most healing salve in the world. A sure cure for piles. J. J. Orr.

V. B Conklin, Bowersville, O., says: "I received more benefit from Foley's Kidney Cure than from months of treatment by physicians." J. J. Orr.

WHAT IS RUMA-KATAH?

A Wonderful Remedy for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Constipation, Stomach, Kidney and Liver Troubles, Nervousness and General Debility.

This wonderful rheumatism and catarrh cure, now on sale at B J. Pulver & Co.'s drug store, Tecumseh, Mich, is showing its great curative properties, and many persons who have been taking the treatment are reporting benefit and relief. Two hundred bottles already sold, and the sale of three large $1 size for $1.25, or single bottle 50c, sale continues until April 20. See large advertisement on the first page.

A Good Invention.

John C Schreder has invented a fruit gatherer, which will be a great thing to fruit growers, in picking fruit of all kinds. A man can pick with this machine any quantity of fruit and empty it into bucket at the foot of the tree without bruising a single one of the crop. The following advantages may be found in using this machine:

Ease of handling and adjusting.

Lightness, weighing less than 8 lbs.

Adaptability in gathering all kinds of fruit.

Rapidity of gathering fruit, requiring handling but once as the fruit is assorted when gathered and conveyed to the barrel, crate, basket or other receptacle without bruising in any way whatever.

Is not liable to get out of order.

Ease with which it can be repaired in case of injury.

Ease with which it is moved about, as it folds up and can be carried under the arm.

Can be stowed away when not in use and is always ready for use by merely unfolding.

Mr. Schreder manufactured a number of these machines and put them on the market.

'Tis Easy to Feel Good.

Countless thousands have found a blessing to the body in Dr. King's New Life Pills, which positively cure constipation, sick headache, dizziness, jaundice, malaria, fever and ague and all liver and stomach troubles. Purely vegetable; never gripe or weaken. Only 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

The prime essential to happiness is well directed industry.

Itching piles? Never mind if physicians have failed to cure you. Try Doan's Ointment. No failure there. 50 cents, at any drug store.

GREAT BANKRUPT CLOTHING SALE

Bought under a chattel mortgage foreclosure sale at about 25 cents on the dollar by Wile Bros. & Weill. We held the mortgage, bought in the stock at a fraction of its real worth, and will now give the people of Britton and surrounding country the chance of their lives to buy a nice new suit or overcoat at about 1-4 of the cost to manufacture. We are bound to sell this elegant stock in 8 days, and if prices will do it we will have nothing left at the end of this week. It will pay you to come miles to attend this great sale, even if you need nothing at present, and use your purchases later.

The crowd has been so large the opening days of the sale that we were unable to wait on them satisfactorily but we are now able to give satisfaction in every respect.

SOME HEAVY SENTENCES

Given Convicted Men in Oakland County Court.

Pontiac, Mich., April 16.—Charles Van Zant, Wm. Westbrook and Norman T. Bisbing, the bad gang captured at Farmington some time ago, were taken before Judge Smith for sentence, after being convicted of the charge of assault with intent to murder. Van Zant was sentenced to 15 years in Marquette prison, and Westbrook and Bisbing to 18 and 20 years respectively. The oldest criminal received the heaviest sentence. Van Zant and Bisbing took their sentences cooly, but Westbrook showed signs of nervousness. Great excitement prevailed when they were being taken from the court room after sentence had been passed.

Matthew Lentis, who pleaded guilty to the charge of burglarizing the store of R. Broughton at Franklin some time ago, was sentenced to serve four years at Ionia.

Rushed Them Into Office.

Jackson, Mich., April 16.—The republican majority in the new common council started a merry clip last night for the spoils of office. After electing Alphonso Straub president, with all the republicans and three democrats voting yes, the retiring mayor, Wm. M. Palmer (rep.), who lost to Frank E. Palmer (dem.) at the last election, sent in a list of appointments which have been held back during the year in the face of the retiring democratic council. They were the city physician, weigh master, police commissioner and poormaster. All were confirmed.

Fatal Runaway.

Marshall, Mich., April 16.—George Cole's team ran away at Burlington village Saturday night. Mrs. Wm. Dunlap was thrown from the omnibus, her skull crushed and her neck broken. She died in a few moments. Mrs. George Cole stuck to the omnibus, and was internally injured. She will probably die. Grace Cole, her daughter, was dragged 40 rods and was terribly bruised, but will probably live. The party was returning from Union City, where they had been attending an entertainment, and the 'bus was stand-

TAXES FOR THE CORPORATIONS

Senate Likely to Amend the House Bill —New Garnishee Law Generally Satisfactory.

Lansing, Mich., April 16.—As predicted in my last letter the house disposed of considerable important business last week and made a good start toward winding up the business in anticipation of a reasonable early final adjournment. It is altogether probable that some of this legislation will be amended by the senate and thus sent back to the house for further consideration, but the progress already made will go a long way toward definitely unloading the subjects.

Chandler Railway Taxation Bill.

The principal and most important measure passed up to the senate by the lower body was the Chandler railroad taxation bill so-called, which, however, also covers telephone, telegraph, express, sleeping car, fast freight and other corporations of like nature and provides for taxing their property on an ad valorem basis. A determined effort was made to exclude express, sleeping car and fast freight property and leave it to be taxed on a specific or capital stock basis, but a large majority of the representatives were for "whole hog or none," and the tail was permitted to go with the hide. As agreed to by the house, the bill provides that the state tax commissioners shall make the assessment, the provision providing that this work should be done by three elective state officers and that appeal could be had to the tax commissions having been eliminated on the ground of unconstitutionality. There was also stricken out the provision for an additional secretary for the commission to look after this branch of the work. The present legislation is decidedly averse to creating new offices or increasing salaries, and it was decided that the present secretary would have ample time to care for this additional work.

Senate Will Amend the Measure.

When the Chandler bill was received in the senate it was promptly referred to the committee on railroads, which is expected to report it this week. There is little doubt that the committee will report in favor of important amendments, the senate having already passed the Charles Smith bill taxing sleeping car companies on a basis of capital stock in the proportion that the Michigan mileage bears to the entire mileage of a company, and the chances are that a majority of senators who voted for this bill will insist on sleeping car companies being dropped from the Chandler bill. Then again, there is a decided sentiment in the senate in favor of a separate assessing board, and a stiff fight will be made to amend the board in this particular. It may not succeed, however, for the senators appear to be very equally divided on this proposition. The indications are good for a disagreement between the two houses and the appointment of a conference committee to agree upon a compromise measure.

Under the present law sleeping car companies pay practically no taxes at all, their total contributions to the state treasury last year having been the munificent sum of $82. The Smith bill passed by the senate is estimated, as previously stated, to yield $4,000 a year, but the members of the house insist that this is altogether too little.

Garnishee Bill Is Satisfactory.

The garnishee bill, which has caused so much discussion and has been so vigorously fought in its various forms by organized labor, was also passed up to the senate since my last letter was written. As passed, however, the bill is fairly satisfactory to all concerned. It allows an exemption of 80 per cent. of the weekly wage of a householder, and provides that in no case shall the exemption be less than $8 per week and the maximum limit is $30. The existing law makes a flat exemption of not less than $25, thus rendering it impossible for creditors to get their hands on any portion of the weekly wages.

Mixed as to Its Benefits.

The Ward-Lowry mortgage tax bill, which is a practical reenactment of the mortgage tax law of 1891, is now in the hands of a senate committee and the chances are not considered very favorable for its passage through the upper body. It may pass, of course, but there is much opposition to it. It provides for the assessment of the mortgage as an interest in the realty, and while it eliminates some of the objectionable features of the present law, it introduces others that will be strongly opposed by several senators.

Marriage Bill Put to Sleep.

The much discussed St. Joe marriage bill was, as has been anticipated for some time, put to sleep in the senate, being given an opiate that promises to continue its slumber at least until the next session of the legislature. The battle was fought out in the senate committee of the whole, and while it was bloodless it developed considerable feeling between at least two of the solons. This bill, it will be remembered, was designed to put an end to the Sunday quick marriage industry which has flourished so extensively at St. Joseph for the past three summers and promises to materially increase as the seasons go by. A committee of clergymen representing various Protestant denominations sought to have the law amended so as to require non-residents to procure licenses at least five days previous to the solemnization of the marriage, thus very effectually disposing of the Sunday excursion marriages. However, the local clergymen who were after the fees, together with the county official who does a land office business in licenses and the average citizen who believes that no barriers should be placed in the way of the marriage of persons legally entitled to make the plunge, were too much for the contingent who saw in the system as it has developed a menance to the morals of the community, and all after the enacting clause of the bill was stricken out.

Thinks It an Unusual Measure.

What to my notion is an exceedingly unwise measure was passed by both houses in remarkably short order last week. This, as I understand it, is a bill that debars defaulters from holding certain offices under the Grand Rapids city government. No one can successfully deny the statement that Grand Rapids has shown a decided penchant for officials who have, while previously serving in official capacities, failed to account for all the funds of the municipality that found their way into their hands, but if a majority of the electors of the city like that sort of thing, they should, in my humble opinion, be permitted to have all they want of it. The appetite is peculiar to Grand Rapids, and there does not appear to be any danger that it will become epidemic. It has been sarcastically remarked for a number of years that before a man is eligible for certain offices in the second city he must first fail to account for all the public funds previously handled by him, and it would be cruel for the legislature to deprive the city of this hard earned reputation and distinction. If, as is asserted by some, the bill is designed to humilate and dispose of certain individuals, the proceeding is certainly a very shortsighted one, for every one knows that just the moment a system of persecution is resorted to for the purpose of disposing of an individual, just that moment his strength increases. I think I would have voted against that bill if the opportunity presented itself.

Will Please the Taxpayers.

The taxpayers of the state will be pleased to know that the ways and means committee of the house expects to cut this year's appropriations at least $1,000,000 below those of two years ago. A number of appropriation bills have already been reported out and others are on the way for submission to the house during the present week, but the schedule is not near enough to rock bottom yet to enable me to give anything like an accurate estimate of the final results. The tendency of the senate is to be more liberal than the house and there may be some lively clashing on this account.

Popular Election of Senators.

By a vote of 17 to 12 the senate has passed a joint resolution requesting congress to submit to the several states a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States senators by the people. The house is altogether likely to concur.

It will be pleasing to the women of the state, especially those club women who have taken a great interest in the measure, to learn that the senate has defeated the bill providing for women members of the boards of control of all state institutions in which females are cared for.

Classification of Freight Rates.

The Hardy bill providing for the classification of freight rates was given a hearing recently before the joint railroad committees of the house and senate, and the subject was quite thoroughly gone into by several manufacturers, shippers and railroad officials. J. W. Potter, of Lansing, who drafted the bill, submitted figures tending to prove his assertion that during the past ten years freight rates in Michigan have advanced from 20 to 50 per cent. It was admitted by the railroad officials that there has been an advance from the rates in force during the season of business depression because of the increased cost of operation incident to advancing prices generally. Through rates, the committee was informed, affect local rates, and the farmer, of course, cannot be controlled by the senate committee found the problem a very difficult one to solve, and another hearing will be held on the evening of the 23d inst., when the subject will be gone into more thoroughly.

The compromise fish bill has passed both houses and will become a law in due course. Two years ago the most bitter fight of the session marked the consideration and passage of the closed season bill. This year there was no opposition to the measure. The amendments extend the trout season ten days and the whitefish season twenty days in Lakes Huron and Erie and Saginaw bay, and leave it as fixed two years ago in Lakes Superior and Michigan.

Regulation of Medical Practice.

The fake doctors who succeeded in being registered as physicians under the worthless law of 1883, which was superseded by the present statute in 1899, have been endeavoring all winter to induce the legislature to amend the law so that they can continue practice without passing an examination before the state board of registration. These so-called doctors never attended medical colleges, but purchased their sheepskins from bogus colleges who accepted whatever amount the applicant was able to raise, whether it was great or small. The house finally became tired of being pestered, and, after several members had informed the fakirs that if they spend half as much time studying medicine as they have in trying to have the law amended they would have no difficulty in successfully passing the required examination. That body, by nearly an unanimous vote, declined to take the bill away from the health committee which proposes to see that it remains very dead. This is precisely as it should be. The physician who is so accomplished as to scorn the idea of taking an examination should be forced to confine the exercise of his skill of his own carcass.

Primary Bill Gets It in the Neck.

Representative Colby succeeded in getting another primary election bill through the house a day or two ago, but the senate, with its accustomed promptness, fell on its neck and strangled it by sending it to a hostile committee. This bill was a local option measure. It required that each county in the state should at the next regular election vote on the question of abolishing political caucuses and making all nominations by direct vote, and in case the question was decided in favor of the law, the board of supervisors should vote on the question of adopting the new sustem. Reforms of this nature are of slow growth in Michigan.

JAMES V. BARRY.

From Natural Causes.

Allegan, Mich., April 16.—Adam Rey, aged 75, was found dead at his farm near here Sunday. He had not been seen since Thursday. From marks on his face and head, foul play was suspected, but the coroner's jury verdict was that he died from natural causes. The old man lived alone.

Took Carbolic Acid.

Coloma, Mich., April 16.—Mrs. Wm. Carthey, the white wife of one of the darkest Africans in all the several hundred colored people living in Covert township, Van Buren county, committed suicide by swallowing a quantity of carbolic acid. Long ill with what she believed to be an incurable cancer.

A Military Department.

Albion, Mich., April 16.—As a result of the action taken by the faculty of Albion college at its regular meeting yesterday, a department of military training such as is connected with the Northwestern university and other colleges, will probably be added to the work of the institution.

Settled With the City.

Lapeer, Mich., April 16.—Dr. Newton's suit against the city for falling on a defective crosswalk was settled yesterday out of court, the veterinary surgeon getting $1,000. He sued for $5,000.

Into Service Again.

Houghton, Mich., April 16.—The new hoist at "D" shaft, Atlantic, is installed and awaiting boiler connection to go into commission. It will hoist from a depth of 5,000 feet.

CHAMPAGNE FLOWS

CAME FROM THE COMMISSARY

Bacchanalian Rendezvous in Manila, Where Champagne Drinking and Poker Playing Held Sway — And Uncle Sam Paid the Fiddler's Price.

Manila, April 16.—The trial of Commissary Sergt. John Meston, charged with complicity in the commissary frauds, is finished. No verdict was announced, and Meston's conviction is uncertain. Other trials of those implicated will follow. Capt. James C. Read, formerly depot commissary at Manila, has been arrested.

It is alleged that entries upon the books of Evans & Co., government contractors, indicate that the commissary officers received the following sums: Maj. George B. Davies, upwards of $1,000; Capt. James C. Read, $1,000; Capt. Frank H. Lawton, $750; Mr. B. Tremaine, Col. Woodruff's chief clerk, $700.

It also appears that Evens & Co. furnished the handsome residence of Col. Woodruff. Harold M. Pitt, manager of Evans & Co., who is now under arrest, was notoriously lavish in entertaining commissary and other officers, while the depot commissary, a frequenter of the "Tenderloin district," occasionally spent days at Pitt's house in questionable society. Pitt's house is a bacchanalian rendezvous, and prominent officers frequently visited it, drinking champagne and playing poker. Women of doubtful reputation have often been known to be there. It is alleged that Pitt had the inside track in securing government contracts, and it is also asserted that he was the prime mover in the scheme to re-establish cock pits in Manila, Mrs. Lara being subsidized in securing a cock pit.

It is asserted that the commissary department made unauthorized purchases of quantities of champagne. Pitt sold some. In addition to what the transports brought, the commissary imported 200 gallons in February and a like amount in March. The commissary and the commissary sergeant kept private carriages and indulged in other extravagances.

Met a Hero's Death.

Youngstown, O., April 16.—After having successfully rescued fellow-workmen from what would probably have resulted in death, J. C. Wilson, a pipe fitter, whose home is in Salt Lake City, fell off a platform yesterday afternoon at the plant of the Ohio Steel Co. and struck on his head, dying instantly. Three fellow-workmen of Wilson were at work on a high scaffold. They had been overcome by gas when Wilson went to their aid. In a few minutes Wilson succumbed to gas and rolled off the platform.

Gallant Officer Dead.

Boston, April 16.—Maj. John H. Belcher, U. S. A. (retired), dropped dead in the subway Monday noon. His home was in Salem. He was born here in 1829 and in early life followed the sea. During the civil war he served with distinction, and in 1867 he was made a brevet major in the regular army. In 1883 he became a major by promotion. He was retired in 1892. Of two daughters, one is the wife of Capt. Frederick Wheeler, U. S. A.

Dunder unt Blitzen.

Berlin, April 16.—From various parts come reports of heavy thunder storms yesterday. Lightning killed three persons and maimed four others near Fredelsloh, Hanover. Heavy snows have fallen in Rudolstadt and throughout the whole of Thuringia, while the rains have caused the Oder to overflow, covering large districts in Silesia. The Rhine is still very high at Cologne and the district of Caub is flooded.

Not Admitted to Bail Yet.

Washington, April 16.—The solicitor general has not yet filed his brief in the case of the application of Capt. Oberlin M. Carter to be admitted to bail. His delay in the matter is understood to be due to an investigation into Carter's physical condition, rendered necessary by the allegation made in behalf of Carter that his health is impaired.

To the Best of His Ability.

Washington, April 16.—Ex-Representative Rodenburg of Illinois yesterday began his official duties as a member of the civil service commission. When asked regarding his civil service policy, Mr. Rodenburg said: "I certainly believe in the spirit of civil service reform, and I will execute and enforce the law to the best of my ability."

Racing at Lakeside.

Chicago, April 16.—Racing began in this vicinity yesterday with the opening of a 15-days' meeting at Lakeside. The prettiest weather of the season brought out a big crowd. Three favorites won. The Canqueror, the choice in the principal event, finished third to W. J. Deboe and Thurles. Deboe won easily. James Arthur won four races.

Captain of the Guard.

Washington, April 16.—Maj. McArthur of Oxford, Kas., has been appointed captain of the guard and assistant custodian of the government building at the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo. Maj. McArthur entered the army from Iowa, becoming a line officer of the Fifteenth Iowa volunteers, and a member of Gen. Belknap's staff.

Daughter of Wealthy Parents.

Youngstown, O., April 16.—Mrs. Nellie Andrews was yesterday found dead in bed by her husband. The coroner decided that death was due to stimulants. Mrs. Andrews was the daughter of wealthy parents at Saratoga, N. Y.

Opening of Traverse Bay.

Traverse City, Mich., April 16.—The first steamer to enter Grand Traverse bay this year was the Lou A. Cummings, of the Traverse Bay line. She made the trip from Northport without difficulty, as the ice is soft. The steamer entered the ports of Omena and Sutton's bay en route. Very little ice was left in the bay last night and there is no obstruction now to navigation.

Gone Up for Six Months.

Traverse City, Mich., April 16.—Dan George was sentenced to six months in Marquette prison yesterday after pleading guilty to assault on Conductor Arthur Devine, of the Pere Marquette railway, with intent to do great bodily harm. At the last term of the circuit court the jury disagreed.

USED TO LIVE IN DETROIT.

Pittsburg Murderers Came There From St. Thomas, Ont.

Pittsburg, April 16.—The real names of the two men who are suspected of the Mt. Washington murder and the killing of Detective P. E. Fitzgerald, have been discovered to be Edward and John Biddle instead of Wright, the name they gave the police. They are brothers of Harry G. Biddle, of Knoxville, and of Wm. Biddle, a Consolidated Traction Co. conductor. The Biddle family was from St. Thomas, Canada. They moved to Detroit later and for a time made that place their home.

Wm. Biddle was arrested yesterday just after he had resigned his job on the traction road preparatory, the detectives thought, to leaving the city. He had in his possession, the officers say, goods that he admitted getting from his brother. The most important development in the case Monday was the identification of Robert Wilcox and "Jack" Biddle, alias Wright, by Mrs. Thomas D. Kahney and her son, wife and son of the murdered grocer. Mrs. Kahney said that while they tallied exactly with the men who stood at the foot of her bed when her husband was shot, she would prefer to see them fully dressed before she would make a positive statement. She will be given another opportunity. Her son Earl, 12 years old, had no hesitation in picking out the two as the men.

Elected Five Delegates.

Havana, April 16.—At yesterday's session of the Cuban constitutional convention, five delegates, Senors Diego Tamayo, Capote, Berriel, Portuondo and Lorente were appointed a committee to go to Washington to lay before President McKinley the desires of the convention regarding future relations between Cuba and the United States. The committee was instructed to confer with Gov.-Gen. Wood regarding the date of the departure and the best conditions for an interview with the president. At to-day's session the convention will consider the advisability of adjourning until the return of the commission.

A Judge's Comparison.

Milwaukee, April 16.—Judge Elliott, in the circuit court yesterday, decided that Christian Scientists are not liable to prosecution under the state medical law. The court ruled that the scientists can no more be held for practising medicine when their means for healing is by prayer, than can a minister who prays at the bedside of the sick and receives therefor a fee, either directly or indirectly.

No Change in Engineer Strike.

Cleveland, O., April 16.—President Uhler, who is still in Cleveland, said to-day that there is no change in the strike situation and that the men are as confident of success as ever. Regarding the report that the men are leaving the organization, Mr. Uhler said it is not true in Cleveland, and he did not believe it was true of other cities.

Miners Gain a Victory.

Brazil, Ind., April 16.—The joint conference of miners' delegates and the block coal operators last night resulted in a complete victory for the miners, the operators conceding the miners the right to buy powder in the open market. According to the agreement, last year's wage scale will be in effect until Oct. 1, when the day men will receive an advance of 15 cents per day.

State Inspection of Beer Goes.

Jefferson City, Mo., April 16.—The supreme court yesterday overruled a motion for a rehearing in the beer inspection case. This establishes the legality of the state beer inspection law, under which the breweries will be compelled to pay about one-quarter of a million dollars taxes already due the state.

Won't Work With Negroes.

Jackson, Miss., April 16.—The stone masons employed on the new state house went on strike Monday afternoon because the contractors placed three negro masons at work on the building. The contractors declare they will keep the negroes at work.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

The American Dental association in Germany has elected as its president Dr. Jenkins of Dresden.

Mr. Wm. H. Holt, United States district judge for the district of Porto Rico, will hold court at Ponce May 13.

Mr. J. P. Morgan's investments in British enterprises have thus far been confined to the purchase of a Scotch collie for £500.

Associate Justice Charles C. Cole of the District supreme court, has tendered his resignation to the president, to take effect about April 22. He will resume his law practice.

Pony de Wet, a member of the Cape assembly, has been sentenced by the treason court at Barkly West, to imprisonment for three years, with a fine of £1,000 for seditious speeches.

The annual reports of the Rheno-Westphalian coal syndicate asserts that there need be no fear of American competition for years to come, as has been shown by last year's experiments.

Frank A. Vanderlip, ex-assistant secretary of the United States treasury, is in St. Petersburg. He is investigating conditions with the hope of promoting business relations between the United States and Russia.

The Colombian government has decided to sell the exclusive right to work the pearl and coral fisheries in Colombian waters to the highest bidder for a term of 15 years, according to information received at the state department from United States Consul-General Gudger, at Panama.

Capt. J. McGowan has been retired with the rank of rear admiral. He broke down in health while commanding the monitor Monadnock on the Asiatic station several months ago, and has since had a short term of service in command of the naval station at Key West.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, but, he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1 1-2 boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." For eruptions, eczema, tetter salt rheum, sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them. C. A. Wright will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys

Cure all kidney ills.

W. S. Kilmer, passenger engineer on the M. C. Ry., residing at No. 214 Orange St., Jackson, Mich., says: "In 1895 I had considerable trouble with my kidneys from the result of a severe cold which settled there and though I tried every means at hand and treated with doctors the pains through the small of my back became more persistent and severe. To add to my troubles the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular. At last I was obliged to lay off work. When at home getting no better under the treatment I was then taking, some one advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box more out of curiosity than from any expectation that they might help me. Now, I want this thoroughly understood when I finished the box I went back to work without a pain or an ache. But to make matters doubly certain I took a second box. Since that time and that is three years ago, I have neither had an ache nor a pain. Is it any wonder at this date, 1898, I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Calling the Doctor.

A good story is told of Dr. X., who is the physician in charge of the female wards of one of our best known charitable institutions. One evening about 9 o'clock Mary, a new Irish servant girl, knocked at the door, saying:

"Doctor, the head nurse wants you to come down to supper."

The doctor, swelling in his pride of superiority above the nurses, sent the Irish girl away with a curt message. Half an hour later the head nurse came to his room looking very serious.

"Doctor," she said, "No. 8 is very bad indeed. I think you ought to see her at once."

"Why did you not let me know before?" was the reply.

"Why, doctor," said the nurse, "I sent you word by Mary half an hour ago."

"The fool!" said the doctor. "She told me to come down to supper!"

"Why," said the nurse, "I sent you word to come down to eight!"

An inquiry made the whole thing clear. Mary thought it more polite to say "Come down to supper" than to say "Come down to ate."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Sensitive Scot.

A sensitive Scot rebukes the London Daily Chronicle for saying that his countrymen pronounce man "mon." "The absurd form 'mon,' he writes, "is the hall mark of Scots' vernacular as written by a southern pen, and its intrusion has often lent additional sadness to comic journalism, even, alas, to the pages of our chief humorous periodical. In the north of England 'mon' certainly occurs; in Scottish speech never. In Scott and Stevenson one may look for it in vain. The broad, soft vocalization of the word in Lothian dialect lies somewhere between 'maun' and 'maan,' but as it cannot be literally symbolized the word should be spelt in dialect passages simply as in English."

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Farmers Will Control.

West Bay City, Mich., April 16.—The German American Co-operative Beet Sugar company closed a contract yesterday with the American Copper, Brass & Iron Co. for the construction of a 400-ton factory in this city, the work to be completed by Nov. 1. This factory is owned almost entirely by the farmers who will raise the beets necessary to keep it running. A small amount of the stock, probably not to exceed $50,000, was recently sold to outsiders, but the farmers will remain in entire control of the company.

Will Be One Actor Shy.

Petoskey, Mich., April 16.—The "Jolly Amateurs," a swell local dramatic company which will play "Uncle Rube" to-night, lost their star actor, Homer White, yesterday. He was sentenced to the house of correction for 90 days. Saturday night he stole $75 worth of clothes out of R. C. Levin's Sons clothing store, but out of regard for his parents he was charged with petty larceny

New Firm Organized.

Muskegon, Mich., April 16.—The firm of Mann, Watson & Co. was organized here yesterday afternoon and will conduct a wholesale and retail lumber business. The business was formerly operated by Mr. Mann, who last year handled 16,000,000 feet of lumber. The new firm expects to handle 32,000,000.

A MOUNTAIN LAKE.

Oh, limpid listener, in your placid soul
Are mingled all the songs that brooks have sung
When years and years, the shaggy hills among,
They babbled of their trials, with foamy tears,
Until, all wearied, having reached their goal,

Like sentinels the stolid mountains stand
About you, dres't in garb of gorgeous green;
At early dawn their mirrored shapes are seen
In shimmering outline, painted by the sun,
Upon your face, athwart the gleaming sand,
Nor fade from view until the day is done.

A fitting figure of eternal rest
You typify the changeless fate of man
When, having coursed mortality's brief span
Adown the hills of Time, his life shall end,
And all his doings, be they banned or blest,
Forevermore, with other deeds, shall blend.

—John A Foote in Rosary Magazine.

BUSINESS OF THE SOAKER.

An Expert In Pawnbroking Who Has His Regular Customers.

In the neighborhood where pawnshops abound the soaker flourishes. The soaker acts as middleman between the pawnbroker and his customers. He explains his mission and accounts for his usefulness thus:

"The people down here employ me," said he, "not because they are ashamed to be seen going into a pawnshop themselves, but because I can get more for the goods than they can. There's an art in pawning a coat or a ring, just the same as in everything else.

"I've known people to go into a pawnshop with some old article to pawn and to look the proprietor over with a supercilious air, as if they considered themselves so far above him socially that he couldn't touch them with a 40 foot pole. Naturally, for sheer spite, the broker offers them only about half as much as they would get if they approached him properly. Having had a wide experience of my own, I know how to avoid such difficulties. I am not servile, but I am polite and respectful, and as those two qualities touch the most generous chord in the broker's bosom I get all I want on the proffered chattels.

"As recompense for my services I charge my customers 10 per cent commission. I have regular customers, and then, of course, I do many odd jobs for occasionals. There are families down here for whom I pawn the same things over and over again, one week after the other. On pay day they take their things out of soak. Three days later they put them in again, and the next pay day they take them out again. And so it goes, month after month. I canvass the houses just like a book agent or corn plaster peddler or insurance solicitor.

"'Anything to be pawned today?' I ask.

"And if there is I take it around to some shop and raise the necessary dough and take it back and get my commission. Once in awhile I come across somebody who abuses me and calls me a shark, but I'm nothing of the sort. I'm earning a decent living at a legitimate business."—New York

VERY BELIGERENT.

Senate Gets Into a Scrap Over the Ionia Asylum Addition

DETROIT MEMBERS SUSPICIOUS

Bill Passed After An Explanation of Its Purpose—Gov. Bliss Writes to Both Houses Advising Against Giving Bills Immediate Effect.

Lansing, Mich., April 16.—There was a scrap last night in the senate committee of the whole over Senator Nichols' bill to make an appropriation for a new building at the Ionia asylum on the side of the river where the main buildings are now located. Senators Holmes and Murfin fought hard for postponement. The bill, if passed, would create room for 150 additional patients, and the practical effect, they say, would be to leave vacant the now detached building on the south side of the river. There is another bill in, to use this detached building for short term prisoners, and the Detroit senators saw in this a scheme to take away from the Detroit house of correction a good share of its business—deal it practically a death blow, in other words. Murfin made several speeches, showing that the Detroit prison is one of the best in the United States. It gave Earle a good chance to make a spiel against all prison contract labor.

All the Detroit senators asked that the bill be temporarily passed to give them time to read it over and figure out its real provisions and purposes. They succeeded apparently in creating considerable sentiment against the bill.

Senators Nichols, Doherty and others made a good fight for the bill, and on their assurance that the bill contains nothing against the Detroit prison, Murfin withdrew his motion to temporarily pass, and the bill was agreed to.

The only other bill agreed to was Goodell's, to regulate the sale of concentrated feeding stuffs.

The senate last night passed Rep. Bland's bill amending the charter of the City of Detroit with the provision requiring property owners to lay only stone, concrete or cement sidewalks in Detroit stricken out. The bill was given immediate effect.

In the house, Rep. Bland tried to have the senate amendments concurred in, but there were not enough members present to give it immediate effect.

Chairman Holmes says he will try and have a meeting of the senate railroad committee on the Chandler bill to-day. Senator Murfin has joined Holmes in talking for a specific tax bill.

The house, in committee of the whole last night, agreed to some appropriation bills, the most important one carrying $196,450 for the Michigan home for the feeble minded and epileptic at Lapeer. Of this amount, $16,450 is for improvements. A bill appropriating $17,500 for the eastern Michigan asylum at Pontiac for the purchase of land was agreed to after Rep. Bonser had ineffectually tried to have stricken out all after the enacting clause. The committee of the whole agreed to a bill appropriating $8,063.66 for the school for the deaf for "additional current expenses," etc. After considerable debate, the bill to make the total appropriation $43,000 for the Michigan exhibit at the Buffalo Pan-American exposition was agreed to. An attempt was made to cut out $3,000, but a motion to this effect was voted down.

Rep. Ames offered a resolution that meetings be held every forenoon, beginning to-day, for the consideration of bills on the general order. The resolution was voted down. It is likely that Speaker Carton will have an organized effort made to get such a resolution through. There will be over 70 bills on the house's general order to-day.

Gov. Bliss did something last night. He sent to both houses of the legislature duplicate communications protesting, in effect, against snap legislation and recommending that so far as possible, the practice of giving bills passed immediate effect be abandoned. The governor evidently had in mind certain examples of Detroit and Grand Rapids "ripper" legislation. He apparently does not relish being called upon to decide whether he shall sign or veto such bills.

In the house the communication was ordered spread upon the records.

In the senate the message was read, and forthwith the senators proceeded to pass two local measures and give them immediate effect.

Thinks It Exorbitant.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 16.—Mayor Copeland read his message to the new council last night. Regarding the water works question, he said:

"The idea prevails that a sale and purchase have been contemplated, involving an expenditure on the part of the city of $450,000 for the property and franchise of the water company. Public sentiment is against this proposition. I have no doubt our citizens would vote to purchase the property at a reasonable price, but for my part I should consider $200,000 a most generous and magnanimous offer."

E. F. Sutton Dead.

Houghton, Mich., April 16.—E. F. Sutton died yesterday at his home in Lake Linden. He was a pioneer of the Lake Superior copper country. He was born June 25, 1831, in Sussex county, N. J., and resided at Romeo, Mich., for some years. In 1862 he came to Ontanagon county, where he had charge of the famous Minnesota Copper Co.'s store. In 1868 he took charge of the Huron Mine store at Houghton. Later he was assistant superintendent of the Allouez mine, Keweenaw county, and later established a big mercantile business at Lake Linden, of which he was president and general manager at the time of his death.

FALL COLDS

They Are Dangerous Because Hard to Cure.

VERY LIKELY TO LAST ALL WINTER.

We Know Something that Cures All Pulmonary Troubles.

IT IS OUR GREAT TONIC RECONSTRUCTOR, VINOL.

There seems to be an epidemic of colds.

It is strange how many people start in with a cold that they have contracted during the autumn months. Such colds are dangerous, for unless cured when the weather is warm it is very difficult to get rid of them when really inclement weather appears.

Do not, if you have a cold, go through this winter and let it pull you down. A racking cough may be the means of undermining your constitution, terminating in consumption, when there will be no hope for escape.

Cod-Liver Oil has always been the greatest known specific for consumption. Naturally Cod-Liver Oil has been given for colds which are regarded by many people as the first stage of this disease. There is no need of our telling you the drawbacks of Cod-Liver Oil; the vile, greasy mixture was so repellent that not more than one person in ten could take it. But Cod-Liver Oil did cure where it could be taken.

Now we have a cod-liver oil preparation that cures just as surely as did this vile remedy. We refer to Vinol. Anybody can take Vinol. It tastes delicious, and because it contains the active curative principles that made Cod-Liver Oil famous as the specific for consumption and other wasting diseases, it will be readily seen how valuable it is for all such troubles.

Here is one letter taken from many that are continually coming to our notice. Mrs. E. Coghlan, 122 Putnam Ave., Cambridgeport, Mass., says:

"Last September I contracted a heavy cold which terminated with tonsilitis, and later the grip. All winter I had a dreadful cough, and the doctor advised me to take several things, among them Cod-Liver Oil. I tried it for several months without obtaining relief. At last I heard of Vinol and gave it a trial. Five bottles cured me and I have had no troubles since."

When we talk of Vinol, we know of what we speak, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied.

A Chicago paper lately contained the following: "A mad dog was shot in the West End yesterday." An Iowa editor reproduced it with this comment, "Which way was he running, east or west?

There are or were two dogs in this village, that were out in search of fresh pork last Monday and attacked one of Pete Reilly's heavy hogs, biting, tearing and chewing the poor hog's ears, nose, tail and shoulder severely, so much so that either the hog or the canines will soon breathe for the last time, but the opinion is that the dog tax will be less this year.—Deerfield Times Journal.

MAYDOLE'S HAMMER.
(Benson's Plaster Is Pain's Master.)

When Maydole was told that he made "a pretty good hammer," he said, "No, I don't make a 'pretty good hammer,' I make the best hammer that ever was made."

Every carpenter who saw a Maydole hammer wanted one. It was of the best material, perfectly balanced, and the head never flew off. Hammers were divided into two classes—1st, Maydole's; 2d, all the rest.

Plasters are separated by the same line of cleavage; 1st, Benson's Porous Plaster; 2d, all the rest. When, for rheumatic pain, a cold, a cough, kidney trouble or any other disease or ailment that may be treated externally, you ask for a plaster, any honest, reputable druggist will give you a Benson's. He knows it is incomparably the best, and he assumes that you know it too. As the name of Maydole stood for hammers the name of Benson stands for plasters—the "real thing." All the medicinal potencies that are valuable in a plaster are in Benson's. Capsicum, Strengthening and Belladonna plasters are out of date.

An army of physicians and druggists, and millions of the people, have written of Benson's Plasters as a remedy to be trusted.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Dr. Eaton owned a calf,
  Of masculine persuasion,
The doctor often had to laugh
  With greatest exultation;
"There never was a calf," said he
"With such a splendid pedigree."

Edward Frensdorf owned a calf,
  Of gentlemanly gender,
And likewise he was apt to laugh
  As the calf grew in splendor.
"Tis better far than Doc's," said he
"In size, in style, in pedigree."

On election day both Doc and Ed.
  Wanted to be a mayor,
When each had put up his last red,
  (Each bettor was a stayer)
They said "Twould make the people laugh,
If each would wager his pet calf."

Now listen, when the polls were closed
  Abbott machine the tale soon told.
Frensdorf now owns both the calves,
  And also owns the doctor's gold
Ed surely is a happy man,
As he looks at this handsome span —Hudson Post.

The report reached Portland Monday that there were 32 cases of smallpox at Grand Ledge, so pronounced by Dr. Hagadorn, of Lansing, who had been called to diagnose the disease. The city is in quarantine by the order of the authorities Business men have sent to Detroit for experts to come to the city and pass upon the nature of the disease.—Portland Observer.

A Coldwater paper tells a story of a young lady who in church, picked a raveling which hung down the coat of a gentleman in front of her, only to find that the end was out of sight. She pulled and pulled until she had nearly unraveled his undershirt, before she realized that she was placing him in a condition to take a violent cold, because deprived of an essential part of his clothing.

Charley Irish Wednesday, when on his way to dinner, noticed a little girl running with her dress in flames. He at once rushed to her and threw his coat around her and extinguished the blaze. It was Miss Mabel, the seven year old daughter of Mrs. Frank McDonald of South Winter street, who had been playing around a bonfire. The prompt action of Mr. Irish saved her life and she escaped practically unharmed—Adrian Times.

Our readers have been amused and interested by the Madrid letters received by our townsman, Peter Coddington, whose distinguished "kinsman," Luis Roderiquer Coddington, had much hidden property and whose loving daughter needed protection. It now becomes our sad and painful duty to announce that Roderiquer, after many trials and tribulations, has passed from earth. This must be so, for does not the faithful and honest Pedro Torres tell us so? Pedro sends a final letter from Roderiquer and with it forwards the announcement that the latter expired March 12 "a victim of the selfisnes humans" (excuse Pedro's orthography.) In the development of the great scheme it seems to have become necessary to "kill" Roderiquer—rest his soul! It would appear, also, that Pedro Torres thinks—inasmuch as Mr. Coddington had written a reply—that he has surely caught an American victim. What next?—Morenci Observer.

Since the Advent

Of Ruma-Katah into Tecumseh, numerous persons have found the remedy beyond comparison with other remedies put up in general sale form, and by testing the medicine through the free treatment every day, have found it bearing out all and even more than its proprietor claims for it. Made of the very best and purest drugs, preserved by a scientific process, with not one drop of liquor or opiates in its composition, it stands as a peer above all others and although presented in sale form, to the public, cannot be classed as a patent medicine. Its name Ruma-Katah is a trade mark for the protection of its owner. Never before has such a remedy of ready action been found. Thoroughly reading the stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves, over 300 sales have so far been made at B J Pulver's drug store, Tecumseh, and no dissatisfaction reported. The sale of three large $1 size bottles continue and never again will this generous offer be made in your community. No one should fail to take advantage of it now.

B. J. Pulver will be sole agent for Ruma-Katah in this section and regular price $1.00 per bottle will be charged after the agent leaves. Call at store or see small bills for particulars.

Your Canary.

Don't forget to give your canary the best of water and seed every day. See that he has a good fish bone. Clean his cage every day. Keep him out of the hot sun and the glare of night lights and yet let him have sunshine. Talk to him; talk to him with a kind voice. Let him out of the cage occasionally. We give crumbs of bread soaked in milk, lettuce, chickweed, a little piece of egg, sometimes a little fruit, a nut and lots of good things and let him eat or reject as he pleases.

Remember he is a prisoner in confinement, dependent on you every day for health and life, and constantly strive to make him happy. A little 10 cent looking glass will add greatly to his happiness. Take care that neither sun nor other light reflected shall dazzle him.

The Height of Clouds.

To determine the height of clouds an observer at each of two stations a mile or more apart measures the angle and altitude of some point of a cloud, the identity of which is ascertained from conversation by telephone, while synchronism in the observation is secured by the beating of electric pendulums. This is the method used at the celebrated observatories at Upsala, in Sweden.

Why We Eat Oysters Raw.

Dr. William Roberts in his interesting lectures on the digestive ferments writes: "Our practice in regard to the oyster is quite exceptional and furnishes a striking example of the general correctness of the popular judgment on dietetic questions. The oyster is almost the only animal substance which we eat habitually and by preference in the raw or uncooked state, and it is interesting to know that there is a sound physiological reason at the bottom of this preference.

"The fawn colored mass which constitutes the dainty of the oyster is its liver, and this is little less than a heap of glycogen. Associated with the glycogen, but withheld from actual contact with it during life, is its appropriate digestive ferment, the hepatic diastase. The mere crushing of the dainty between the teeth brings these two bodies together, and the glycogen is at once digested without other help by its own diastase.

"The oyster in the uncooked state or merely warmed is, in fact, self digestive. But the advantage of this provision is wholly lost by cooking, for the heat immediately destroys the associated ferment, and a cooked oyster has to be digested, like any other food, by the eater's own digestive powers."

William A. Newell, who had the rare distinction of being governor of two states—New Jersey and Washington—told in Success of his romantic experiences as a congressman in 1849, when he originated the life saving service by offering a resolution in the house of representatives to appropriate money to save lives imperiled by the sea. Fellow members of congress at that session were John Quincy Adams and Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Newell said:

"Various objections were made to my motion, the strongest of which was that the scheme was impracticable. I laid the matter before a great many senators and members, speaking to them in person. Ex-President John Quincy Adams occupied a seat just behind mine and after the reading of the resolution clerk leaned forward and said to me, 'I would like to see that resolution.' I sent for it and handed it to him. He read it over carefully and, handing it to me, said, with a smile: 'It is good. I hope it will prevail.' Abraham Lincoln also read it and said: 'Newell, that is a good measure. I will help you. I am something of a life saver myself, for I invented a scow that righted itself on the Mississippi sand bars.'"

A Popular Host.

Traveler—Eh? Has this hotel changed hands?

Clerk—Yes; the old landlord busted up; owed thousands of dollars to all the provision dealers in the neighborhood. For every $10 he took in he spent $20.

Traveler—Too bad, too bad! He's the only landlord I ever met who knew how to keep a hotel.—New York Week-

GREAT BANKRUPT CLOTHING SALE

THURSDAY FRIDAY SATURDAY

Bought under a chattel mortgage foreclosure sale at about 25 cents on the dollar by Wile Bros. & Weill. We held the mortgage, bought in the stock at a fraction of its real worth, and will now give the people of Britton and surrounding country the chance of their lives to buy a nice new suit or overcoat at about 1-4 of the cost to manufacture. We are bound to sell this elegant stock in 8 days, and if prices will do it we will have nothing left at the end of this week. It will pay you to come miles to attend this great sale, even if you need nothing at present, and use your purchases later.

For the next 3 days being the last of this great sale, we will make a still further reduction and sell the balance of the stock at about 20 cents on the dollar.

WILL SHE WEATHER THE GALE

Stirring Scenes in the British House of Commons When War Budget Was Read By Hicks-Beach—Opposition Cheered When Told of the Crisis.

London, April 19.—After an extended showing as to how money was to be raised to pay the war deficit, by revenue duties and taxation, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach concluded a two hours and twenty-six minutes' speech in the British house of commons, as follows:

"My final balance sheet will be, from taxation, a revenue of £122,200,000; from non-taxation, £21,055,000, a total of £143,255,000. I propose to reduce the expenditure by again suspending the sinking fund to £182,962,000. This shows a deficit of £39,707,000, to which must be added £1,250,000 for the fresh debt I have to borrow. I must ask the house to give me borrowing powers considerably in excess of this deficit of £41,000,000, in order to finance the exchequer I ask powers to borrow £60,000,000 by means of consols.

"As to obtaining contributions from the Transvaal, Sir David Barbour's reports are not encouraging at present. I think the house will see the war has brought the country to the verge of ruin. (Opposition cheers greeted this remark.) This can no longer be considered. The small war has cost £151,000,000, double the cost of the Crimean war. There was £67,000,000 of the unfunded debt redeemable within the next ten years. I have tried to put before the house a true account of our finances for the present and immediate future. In our time no chancellor of the exchequer has had so difficult a task, and none has had a more indulgent audience. I have not laid proposals before the house with the view of gaining transient popularity but I have endeavored to establish a principle of contribution by the whole community to the burdens of the state."

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach concluded at 6:44 p. m. amidst loud applause, having spoken two hours and twenty-six minutes.

Sir Wm. Vernon Harcourt complimented the chancellor of the exchequer on the ability he had shown, declaring that his speech was characterized by honesty, a quality very much lacking in the conduct of the war, in telling the house and the country the truth in regard to the position. The budget, continued Sir William Vernon Harcourt, was but a chapter in the disastrous incident of the war. It was proposed to borrow altogether £121,000,000 more, four times as much as was borrowed for the Crimean war.

"We are living in an age of newspaper finance," said Sir William, "and of increased expenditures. We cannot go on without involving this country in financial ruin. The fashionable doctrine of the day is conscription and protection; does anybody believe that this increase of expenditure is not to go on?"

Sir William argued that England was not as strong now as she was at the close of the French war, and declared in conclusion that it was the most disastrous statement the exchequer had ever made.

After the speech of the chancellor of the exchequer in the house of commons, Mr. John Redmond, the Nationalist leader, asked what interest Ireland had in the war which led to this extraordinary disastrous and disgraceful financial situation. He protested against fresh taxation which, he said, imposed great injustice upon Ireland, that already, as admitted by the government commission in 1893, was greatly overtaxed. He severely attacked Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and the war policy.

Cleveland, April 19.—A strike of all the firemen and linesmen employed on harbor tugs controlled by the Great Lakes Towing Co. at Cleveland, Erie, Conneaut, Fairport, Lorain, Huron and Ashtabula has been ordered to take effect immediately. The Great Lakes Towing Co. own practically all the tugs operated at the ports named. The strike was decided upon as a result of the refusal of the company to grant an advance in wages of $5 per month. The men now get $50 per month. As but comparatively few tugs have thus far gone into commission, not to exceed 200 men are directly affected.

Death of a Commodore.

Washington, April 19.—News has been received at the navy department of the death of Commodore Charles O. Allibone, commanding the gunboat Wilmington, at Cavite, yesterday afternoon, from heart failure. Commander Allibone was a native of Pennsylvania, and was appointed to the naval academy from the state of New Jersey. He entered the service in July, 1863.

Bloodhounds Are After Him.

Minerva, O., April 19.—Andrew Miller, a wealthy farmer living half a mile east of this city, was attacked early yesterday by a would-be assassin. He was shot through the left lung, one shoulder and in the face, but pursued his assailant, and finally gave the alarm to neighbors, a posse of whom are now searching the surrounding country with bloodhounds.

THERE WILL BE NO STRIKE.

Agreement Arrived at Between Union and Steel Company.

Pittsburg, April 19.—There will be no strike in the plants of the American Sheet Steel Co. The trouble that broke out in the Wewees Wood plant in McKeesport last week, and which for a time threatened to cause a general strike of all union iron and steel workers in the country, has been settled in an amicable manner.

It was 7 o'clock last evening when President T. J. Shaffer announced that the following agreement had just been signed as the result of the conference which had been on since an hour before noon, between John Jarrett and the advisory board of the Amalgamated association:

"We have discovered, after a careful examination of the points at issue, that, as usual, mistakes and misunderstandings underlie the trouble at McKeesport, and we reach the conclusion that it will be to the advantage of all parties concerned to start the Woods mill with the old employes on next Monday, April 22, 1901.

"And it is further agreed that the contract with reference to working conditions in the mill and scale matters shall be observed until July 1, 1901, and in the meantime Mr. Smith and Mr. Halloway shall have a meeting to adjust any difficulty which may exist between them.

Reports of Misdoings in Manila Commissary Department.

Washington, April 19.—The following cablegram was made public at the war department yesterday:

"Manila.

"Adjutant-General, Washington:

"With reference to your telegram of 16th, the press report is grossly exaggerated and misleading; matters therein touched upon regarding officers' subsistence department will be fully investigated. Proceedings (mailed by) transport Sheridan. Regarding the theft of commissary stores, the amount of which is grossly exaggerated by the press reports, immediate and most drastic measures have already been applied. Three officers and a number of enlisted men are being tried by court-martial. Number of citizens are on the military commission.

(Signed) "MacARTHUR."

No statement was made that the report of Gen. MacArthur was satisfactory, although it all along has been the theory at the war department that the reports from Manila were exaggerated.

Gen. Schwartzkopf's Body Found.

Berlin, April 19.—The body of Gen. Schwartzkopf, it was announced last evening in a dispatch from Pekin, has been found. The body of his dog was first found, and it is supposed the general re-entered the palace to rescue the dog. The suspicion of incendi[illegible] borne out. It is believed the fire originated in the pantry near Von Waldersee's kitchen. Lieut.-Col. A Question.

Jack's father and mother were having a very heated discussion at the table one day. They entirely forgot him, and as the argument waxed fiercer he looked from one to the other with real concern on his chubby face. Presently during a lull he cleared the air by asking, pointedly:

"Papa, did you marry mamma or did mamma marry you?"—Brooklyn Life.

It Is Written.

"So!" said Mr. Upjohn in his most witheringly sarcastic manner, "Johnny gets all his good qualities from you, and all his bad ones from me, does he?"

"Certainly," answered Mrs. Upjohn, triumphant but calm. "Doesn't the Bible expressly say that the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children?"

TAX BILL CHANGED

To Bring in Some Sections of Atwood's Measure

BUT THE GAME IS WATCHED

Declared That No Conference Committee Will Be Appointed by the House, and That the Bill Will Be Handled Without Gloves—Come Up Tuesday.

Lansing, Mich., April 19.—If the senate agrees to the amended Chandler railroad tax bill, as reported out yesterday for printing by Senators Baird, Holmes, Doherty and Gad Smith, of the railroad committee, leaders of the house declare the measure will be killed in the lower branch of the legislature. They declare that no conference committee will be appointed and that the bill will be handled without gloves.

Objection is raised by house members chiefly to the provisions for the creaiton of a new state board of assessors, and for the bill to apply to only railroad, union depot and union station companies, eliminating telegraph, telephone, express, sleeping car and fast freight line companies. Rep. Chandler says Speaker Carton, as well as himself, is not in favor of appointing any conference committee if the bill as amended is insisted upon by the senate.

The amended Chandler bill contains no provision as to any particular method or methods to be followed by the state board of assessors in determining the "average rate" to be applied in assessing railroad property, the constitution being followed in this respect.

At the senate railroads committee's meeting in the afternoon, Senator Nichols offered to withdraw objections to other portions of the bill if the committee would consent to a recommendation that the three members of the proposed new board of assessors be named in the bill. Senators Holmes, Doherty, Baird and Gad Smith objected to making this arrangement, and then Nichols declared he would submit a minority report.

"Whereas, There is now pending before a senate committee H. B. 189, relative to an appropriation in the sum of $2,000 per year for the benefit of the state board of health, the most of which is to be used in printing: therefore,

"Resolved, That the secretary of state be instructed to furnish to the senate the amount of printed matter of all kinds now on hand. Also the amount of money per year for the past five years the state has expended for publishing the reports of the state board of health."

Senator Murfin attacks the resolution. He said he thought it was simply another phase of the personal grudge that Pierson wants to work off against Secretary Baker of the state board of health, and that the purpose of it is merely to delay the health board appropriation. He threw a fine bouquet at the board for the good work it has done, and mentioned especially the smallpox cases.

Senators Murfin and Robson said they had no objection to the resolution if the preamble were stricken out, but Robson's motion to that effect was voted down.

In the course of the debate Senator High referred to Secretary Baker as a "carbuncle," and said the sooner it was removed the better it would be for the health of the state.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 23 yeas to 8 nays.

The house, in committee of the whole, by a vote of 48 to 38, agreed to the bill to authorize the state board of auditors to audit the claims of Ingham county for the expense of the late grand jury and the "state trials" growing out of it, limiting the amount to be allowed in any event to $10,000.

In the senate the railroads committee was roasted for holding star chamber sessions, and an effort was made by Senator Atwood and others to shut out Senator Nichols' minority report.

Chairman Holmes of the railroads committee submitted a report on the Chandler bill "with amendments," the report being signed by Senators Holmes, Baird, Doherty and Gad Smith. It was received and ordered printed. Senator Nichols' minority report was also submitted. Senator Murfin moved that it be received.

Both reports were made a special order for next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. It looks as though the railroads have control of the senate and that Atwood can command a majority—17 members—to vote for or against any railroad tax bill.

Sudden Death of Lemuel Clute.

Ionia, Mich., April 19.—Ionia was startled yesterday afternoon by the announcement at 3:30 o'clock of the death of Lemuel Clute. He had been failing for a year, but it was not supposed to be serious until a month ago. He was born of Dutch parentage in New York 66 years ago. At 20 he became a sailor and visited all points on the globe, including the Philippines. At 24 year of age he came to Ionia, and in 1858 he went to school to his brother, Oscar Clute, who afterwards became president of the agricultural college. At 28 Mr. Clute studied law with Albert Williams, who survives him. Both practiced law here ever since.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, April 19.—Michigan pensions were granted Thursday as follows: Peter Albert, dead, Kalamazoo, $12. Increase—Wm. H. Welker, McDonald, $15; Thomas Graham, Brighton, $17; Joseph Vick, Flint, $14. Widows—Angeline Albert, Kalamazoo, $8; Cordelia Kittle, Detroit, $12; Nancy E. Ambler, Adrian, $8; Elizabeth Cannam, Custer, $8.

Couldn't Follow Him.

At a small country church in England a newly married couple were just receiving some advice from the elderly vicar as to how they were to conduct themselves and so always live happily.

"You must never both get cross at once; it is the husband's duty to protect his wife whenever an occasion arises, and a wife must love, honor and obey her husband and follow him wherever he goes."

"But, sir"— pleaded the young bride.

"She must"—

"But, please, sir (in desperation), can't you alter that last part? My husband is going to be a postman."

SHOT THREE TIMES

And Every Bullet Took Effect On His Wife.

Jackson, Mich., April 19.—David H. Creech, about 65 years of age, shot his wife three times at 1:45 p. m. yesterday. One shot took effect in her mouth and two in the back of her neck. She may live. Creech, who is well-to-do and an old resident here, was arrested. A hatchet was found in his pocket.

The supreme court recently approved the decision of the Jackson circuit court granting to Mrs. Creech an absolute divorce with the care and custody of her two minor children. Creech says there's a long story. The affair occurred at the home of Mrs. Creech.

PROBABLY MURDERED.

Charles Doherty of Colon Found Dead in Albany.

Colon, Mich., April 19.—Charles Dougherty of this place left here about four months ago for Albany, N. Y., where he has been at work with his brother, who is an artist. About six weeks ago his wife received word that he had been missing for about two weeks. He left the door of the place where he worked unlocked, and went out without his coat, undoubtedly expecting to return. Nothing was heard from him, although every effort was put forth to find him. Yesterday a telegram was received, saying the body had been found and identified and that he had probably been murdered. He was 40 years of age and was insured in the Modern Woodmen. The remains will be brought here for interment.

Washington, April 19.—Judson L. Miller and Charles T. Anderson have been designated as members of the board of civil service examiners in the postoffice at Cadillac, and Alice L. Goodwin as member of the board in the postoffice at Ironwood, Mich.

Allen Phillips, deputy collector and clerk in the Port Huron customs district, has been designated for duty at Sarnia, Ont., in place of Daniel Conway, removed. The salary of this deputy is paid by the Grand Trunk Railway Co., for whose benefit he is stationed there.

Peter Ganor of Houghton has been awarded the contract for maintaining the buoy service in Portage lake and the river during the next fiscal year, and Wm. Gordon of Bay City the contract for similar service in the Saginaw river.

The postoffice at Price, Clinton county, has been discontinued. Mails will go to Victor.

Fred J. Rothert of Indianapolis, Ind., has been appointed messenger boy in the weather bureau office at Marquette, Mich.

His Mind Unbalanced.

Chicago, Ill., April 19.—John Pruyn of Grand Rapids, Mich., who lost $40,000 in the Niles (Mich.) National bank failure, was examined before Judge Gilmore to-day and was sent to Dunning temporarily, until arrangements can be completed for his removal to Michigan.

Pruyn was taken into custody by H. O. Pierce, a deputy sheriff of Niles, Sunday, at the Windsor-Clifton hotel, on the representation of relatives that he was mentally unbalanced.

Snow in the State.

Reports from Bax Axe, Three Rivers, Gaylord, Standish, Holly, Greenville, Stanton, Centreville, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek and other points in the state show that from one to three inches of snow fell yesterday morning.

Charged With Murder.

Houghton, Mich., April 19.—After three days spent in securing a jury, hundreds of men being rejected, and more trouble experienced than ever before known in the county, the trial of Hadley Sumner, on the charge of murder for shooting a Calumet boy, Bennie Martin, last December, began yesterday. Martin, with other lads, was holding a charivari in honor of Sumner's sister.

To Be Married in Detroit.

Owosso, Mich., April 19.—Clifford Hugh McMurdy of this city and Miss Eleanor M. Pound, who has been attending St. Mary's academy, Windsor, but whose home is in Detroit, will be married at the residence of her uncle, Hon. James H. Pound, of Detroit, Saturday. The groom is a member of the Shiawassee county bar and a prominent Knight Templar.

Brands Arrested.

Chicago, April 19.—Charles Brands, formerly manager of the defunct bank of Waldron, Mich., was arrested in this city yesterday. He is charged with obtaining money by false pretenses, and larceny. Brandes will be taken back to Michigan at once.

Leg Sawed Off.

Utica, Mich., April 19.—Hupert Ellis, aged 19, fell against a saw in Fred Goff's lumber mill east of here, and one of his legs was torn off. The wound was dressed and he will recover.

Wife Beater Jailed.

Chesaning, Mich., April 19.—Charles Danning pleaded guilty to the charge of beating his wife, and was fined $20 or 60 days in jail. He chose the latter.

A Substantial Victory.

Chicago, April 19.—The striking marine engineers scored a substantial victory yesterday when the Hines Lumber Co. agreed to hire none but union engineers on their boats. The Hines fleet comprises nine steamers.

In Holiday Attire.

Kingston, Ja., April 19.—This port is in holiday attire owing to the arrival of the North Atlantic squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Farquhar. The warships were saluted and returned the salutes.

May Know Too Much.

"Do women who have had the advantage of advanced education make good wives?" asked the bachelor thoughtfully.

At this the benedict took him to one side, where he could speak confidentially.

"If you ever marry," he said, "and find occasion to frame up a real good excuse for a protracted session at the club, you will discover that it is possible for a woman to know too much." —Chicago Post.

TO BUCK THE TIGER

"The Greater New York Democracy" Talks Turkey

HOT SHOT AT DICK CROKER

Address Issued Scoring the Present City Government—Tax Rate Three Times That of Chicago—Prominent Men Address the Meeting.

New York, April 19.—A mass meeting was held in Carnegie hall last night to form a new political party to be called "The Greater New York Democracy." The new party is formed to fight Tammany hall. John C. Sheehan, E. Ellery Anderson, Peter B. Olney and Joseph P. Daly were among the many persons who signed the call for the meeting. About 2,000 persons were present. Former Surrogate R. S. Ransom presided. Following are the resolutions adopted by the meeting:

"Whereas, Tammany hall is responsible for existing abuses in the administration of city affairs, and its permanent overthrow is an essential prerequisite to the success of any attempt to secure better local government; therefore,

Resolved, That this organization be and hereby is irrevocably pledged to oppose the election of any candidates at the coming municipal election nominated by the so-called democratic city and county convention to be held under the auspices of Tammany hall."

An address was issued by the meeting which scores the present city government and declares that Tammany has run up the annual expenditures from $70,000,000 to $98,000,000, and has given the city a tax rate three times as large as that of Chicago. Then, the addrers declares, that in an effort to "befog this unpleasant fact," Tammany has increased the real estate valuation by $743,000,000. Tammany is declared to be controlled by one man "who essays to dominate courts and coerce juges and whose guiding purpose is the exaction of tribute through the violation and nullification of law."

The address declares that it is the intention to "elect a chief magistrate endowed with public spirit, courage and capacity; who will labor to administer his office in the interest of the general welfare.

The speech of the evening was made by Wm. Hepburn Russell, the temporary chairman. He was heartily applauded when he referred to the Boer struggle. His mention of the name of David B. Hill created great applause.

Granted Great Powers.

Hartford, Conn., April 19.—In the senate a bill was passed yesterday giving great powers to the Consolidated Lake Superior Power Co., a $20,000,000 corporation of which Hon. Lynde Harrison of New Haven is president. The company is permitted to engage in owning and operating railroads, steamships, sailing vessels, express business, furnishing water and light; to buy and sell all kinds of stocks, bonds and securities, and it may do business in the United States and Canada.

Terrible Accident in Colorado.

Boulder, Co., April 19.—A terrible accident occurred yesterday on the Colorado & Northwestern road, near this city. Two big engines attached to a passenger train coming from Ward to Boulder were struck by a huge snowslide and hurled into a chasm below. Four trainmen were killed. The second fireman has not yet been accounted for, and it is believed he is also dead. The bodies have not been recovered.

Woolen Mills Closed.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 19.—A special to the Post Standard from Oswego Falls says: "The big mills of the American Woolen Co. here, employing 1,200 hands, were closed yesterday. The weavers threatened to strike today, objecting to the order obliging them to instruct beginners. The company learned of this and checkmated the men by closing the mills."

A Little Better Physically.

New York, April 19.—Richard Hayden Moulton of Tennessee, who shot Theatrical Managers Dingwall and Leffingwell in trying to kill May Buckley, an actress, is in a little better condition physically to-day than he has been since he was taken to Bellevut hospital. He does not improve mentally, however.

A Vacancy Filled.

Havana, April 19.—Senor Betancourt has been appointed to the vacancy in the commission appointed by the Cuban constitutional convention to go to Washington caused by the resignation of Senor Berriel. The commission will start for Washington next Saturday via Tampa.

New York's Charter Vetoed.

New York, April 19.—Mayor Van Wyck last night sent back to Albany, by special messenger, the revised charter as passed by the legislature. With the charter was the mayor's veto and memorandum giving reasons why the city of New York refused to accept it.

U. S. Treasury Statement.

Washington, April 19.—Thursday's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $153,201,272; gold, $95,659,204.

Commuted a Sentence.

Havana, April 19.—Gen. Wood, in accordance with public sentiment, has commuted the sentences of two Cubans, Dunbar and Sosa of Matanzas from death by the garrote to imprisonment for life.

Common and beautiful in the tropics is the mango tree. Of all fruits none is relished more by the natives. It is at the same time a magnificent shade tree.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, but, he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1 1-2 boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." For eruptions, eczema, tetter salt rheum, sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them. C. A. Wright will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

SAID HE WOULD KILL HER.

Kept His Word and Then Killed Himself.

Chicago, April 19.—Chas. H. Sweeney, local agent for a Lexington, Ky., tobacco company, yesterday shot and killed his wife, and then took his own life, at the Dubuque flats, in Rush street near the Granada hotel. The tragedy occurred in the apartments of Mrs. W. L. Phillips, sister of Mrs. Sweeney.

The Sweeneys formerly lived in Lexington. They were well connected and moved in good society. Not long ago they separated. Sweeney came to Chicago to represent a tobacco company. Recently he learned that his wife had announced her intention of coming here to visit her sister. "I will kill her if she comes," said Sweeney. "She has caused me a world of trouble and shall give me no more."

Mrs. Sweeney arrived a day or two ago, and yesterday morning, during the temporary absence of her sister, she went down town shopping. She returned at 9 o'clock and, stepping into the apartment, was met by her husband, who had been admitted by Mrs. Phillips' 6-year-old son.

Sweeney grasped her wrist and pulled her inside. At the point of a revolver he ordered the boy to run. Crying out that a murder was being done the child fled to the Granada hotel, but before help could arrive two shots were heard, and the hotel attaches found the man and woman lying on the floor.

Mrs. Sweeney was dead and in a few moments the husband expired.

ANOTHER BIG STRIKE

Which Will Throw 10,000 Men Out of Work.

McKeesport, Pa., April 18.—After safely passing through one labor trouble, McKeesport has just entered another. At 7:30 o'clock last night all the hands employed on the McKeesport connecting railroad struck for longer dinner hour. The men at present have to return to work immediately after they are through eating their midday meal, and they now demand 45 minutes. The strikers include the engineers, firemen and brakemen in the yards of the National tube works, rolling mills, Monongahela blast furnaces, and Monongahela steel works of the National Tube Co., numbering about 50 men.

The men are all members of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, and that organization is expected to back the men in their demands. A committeeman who was appointed to confer with the officials was dismissed when he had stated the demands of the men. This action of the company officials has raised the ire of the strikers, and last evening they all left their positions. The action of the railroad hands will cause the suspension of the entire plant, and this will cause 10,000 men to be thrown out of employment.

Wind and Rainstorm in the South.

Louisville, Ky., April 19.—The principal damage done by the wind and rainstorm that swept over many of the southern states late Wednesday night and early yesterday morning seems to have been the unroofing and damaging of factories, churches and residences, the temporary flooding of streets in cities and the interruption of telegraphic communication. A small Tennessee river steamer was sunk at Bridgeport, Ala., but no lives were lost. A severe gale at Carrollton, Ala., unroofed the jail, court house, several residences and a church. The drug store of H. B. Upchurch and a large mill were demolished. The only death reported is that of H. G. Elwood, who was engineer of a freight train wrecked by the storm near Jackson, Ala., on the Mobile & Birmingham railroad. A gale swept Gadsden and Guntersville, Ala., doing considerable damage. Three churches and 12 cottages were almost destroyed.

Although the wind reached a velocity of 65 miles an hour for one minute at Chattanooga, the worst damage was the unroofing of some factory buildings.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

George Q. Cannon's funeral in Salt Lake City attracted immense crowds.

Gold placer finds on the St. Marie river, Idaho, have started a rush of prospectors in that direction.

The United States Steel Co. has secured possession of the fleet of the Pittsburg Steamship Co., consisting of 13 boats.

Washington's High Priced Shad.

Washington's steward was a man named Fraunces, who liked good living and with whom Washington continually quarreled about the marketing. One time he bought a shad in February, and as Washington saw it coming into the dining room he was charmed and asked what fish it was.

"It is a shad," replied the steward "a very fine shad. It was the only one in the market, and I bought it for you."

"But what did you pay for it?" said Washington sternly.

"It is a very fine shad," continued the steward, "and it is cooked to a turn."

"It cost $3," stammered out Fraunces.

"Take it away," said Washington as he raised his hand; "take it away. It shall never be said that I set such an example of luxury and extravagance."

And with that he drove the steward out of the room, and the shad was eaten in the servants' kitchen.

THE EXPERT'S THEORY.

It Was Too Inclusive and Weakened Him as a Witness.

One of the older members of the Baltimore bar tells this anecdote of the late Severn Teackle Wallis as illustrating the cleverness and sarcasm of Mr. Wallis:

Mr. Wallis was defending the will of a wealthy testator, and, as the lawyers say, when the estate is large a lawyer "will wrestle with a will with a will." A prominent physician was called to testify for those contesting the will. The doctor became restless under the lengthy and exhaustive cross examination of Mr. Wallis, and finally he petulantly exclaimed:

"Oh, Mr. Wallis, I believe the testator was insane!"

Mr. Wallis kept his temper and said quietly: "Doctor, you are the first person who has ever intimated in or out of court that the testator was insane. Why do you say he was insane?"

"I believe," the doctor replied, "that every man is more or less insane on some one subject."

"Is it your deliberate professional opinion," Mr. Wallis then asked, "expressed here in court under oath, that every man is more or less insane on some subject?"

"Yes," the doctor replied; "I will say here under oath that from my reading, knowledge and experience I believe that every man is more or less insane on some one subject."

Then Mr. Wallis said in that fine tone of sarcasm for which he was noted, "Doctor, has it ever occurred to you that you are insane on the subject of insanity?"

Immediately the doctor fired up and exclaimed, "But, Mr. Wallis, I am not insane!"

Mr. Wallis arose and said: "Doctor, according to your own sworn theory, you must be insane on some subject. I pronounce you insane on the subject of insanity."

Court, jury and spectators laughed aloud, and nothing more was said about the testator being insane.—Baltimore Sun.

OLD DUTCH WERE CHOLERIC

They Called Each Other "Snappertjes," and Even Worse.

What a contentious crowd the inhabitants of the village, then known as Breuckelen, now part of Brooklyn, was!

The early records are filled with reports of inquiries into the cause of rioting and disturbances of the peace. The early court records consist largely of actions brought for slander and assault. It is recorded that a man was arrested for calling an official a "snappertje," another was put in jail, charged with having called his neighbor a "dick beeste" and still another was clapped into jail for having called a certain official a "bloodsucker." Some of the old Dutch records make interesting reading.

And the court meted out justice in all these cases with a regard for common sense and a disregard for statute law that one cannot help but admire. One instance of curious adjustment of penalties may be cited:

The village tavern keeper and a contentious woman both appeared before the court, asking justice. They had quarreled. The woman had accused the innkeeper of watering his brandy, and he in turn had applied an opprobrious epithet to the woman. The court after hearing the evidence adjudged both to be guilty. With rare discrimination in making the punishment fit the crime the man was fined 6 gulden and the woman, who had impugned the quality of the brandy, was fined 20 gulden.

With hundreds of times the population today, the courts of Brooklyn do not have one-tenth the slander or assault cases that they had some 200 years ago, and, as for a riot, there has not been one of any magnitude even threatened in more than a score of years.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Historic Throne.

The biggest episcopal throne in Europe is at the Exeter cathedral. Composed of the very best oak, with magnificent carving executed by the most expert designers of the day, the throne soars upward in beautiful tapering pinnacles, which rise up to the lofty roof of the sacred edifice. The throne is not only the biggest, but one of the oldest. It was saved from destruction by the Puritans by the ingenuity of the Cavaliers, who when the Roundheads marched on Exeter pulled down the throne and divided it into 365 pieces, one for every day of the year. The pieces were safely secured in many hiding places, and when peace was restored the pieces were put together again without the aid of a single nail.

A Wily Answer.

The shah of Persia once asked a group of his courtiers whom they thought the greater man, himself or his father. At first he could get no reply to so dangerous a question, the answer to which might cost the courtiers their heads.

At last a wily old courtier said, "Your father, sire, for although you are equal to your father in all other respects in this he is superior to you, that he had a greater son than any you have."

English Roads.

After the abandonment of Britain by the Romans the roads fell into disuse and bridle paths formed the only means of communication. Not until the sixteenth year of Charles II—that is, 1676—was any systematic effort made to improve the roads of England.

She Had Waited For It.

She (playfully)—I know what it is, George. You want me to be your wife. Well, take me.

He (rather taken aback)—This is somewhat sudden, isn't it?

She (tenderly)—I don't know, George, whether it is sudden for you or not, but I have waited for it for three years.—London Standard.

Out of Children's Mouths.

The teacher of a Sabbath school class, says The Christian Register, approached one little fellow who was present for the first time and inquired his name, for the purpose of placing it on the roll. "Well," said the youngster, "they call me Jimmie for short, but my maiden name is James."

This is a good mate for the naive and somewhat boastful statement of a little girl in a Buffalo household who assured a playmate that she not only had two maiden aunts, but a maiden grandmother!

FIGHTING A WILDCAT

AN ADVENTURE THAT MADE ONE MAN SHY OF THAT KIND OF BEAST.

He Is Willing to Go a Long Way Around to Avoid Ferocious Animals, Even Though Science Says They Will Flee at Man's Approach.

"I have read in the papers certain scientific assertions that no wild animal will voluntarily attack or pursue a human being, but that, on the contrary, the fiercest of them, as tradition and the tales of woodsmen classify them, will make haste to escape the possible sight of man, unless, in desperate cases, hunger may urge it to approach him, its most dreaded foe, such cases being extremely rare," said a matter of fact and veracious New York business man.

"If that is so, I had a little experience once with a wild animal that must have been the most desperately hungry beast that ever longed for food. The occurrence was in northwestern Pennsylvania, where one winter I had some business that called me ten miles from the county town to one of the backwoods districts. It was late in the afternoon when I started on my return to the village. The way was over a lonely, narrow, crooked mountain road, bordered by deep woods much of the distance. Toward dusk, as I was rounding a short turn in the road, my horse, which had a good deal of spirit, shied suddenly and sprang forward on a furious run.

"At the same instant an animal with glaring eyes plumped down from somewhere and landed in the sleigh at my feet. It had evidently leaped from a tree at the horse, the quick movements of which nervous animal had defeated that purpose, and the attacking animal had alighted with its fore feet on the robe that lay across my lap. It glared furiously at me, with its face not more than two feet away, as it clung to the robe with its sharp claws, growling fiercely. I had never seen a wildcat, but I knew instantly and instinctively that I had one to deal with here, and it seemed to be a very large and savage one at that. I had no weapon, but fortunately the whip that stood in its socket on the dashboard was loaded at the butt.

"Clinging to the reins with my left hand—the horse was running away—I quickly drew the whip from the socket and struck the wildcat on the head with the heavy butt. That caused the animal to loosen its hold on the robe and drop into the snow at the side of the sleigh, but the agile and furious beast was up in the fraction of a second and with one bound sprang on the back of the sleigh, which had a low body.

"Although the horse was running madly away along the narrow and crooked road, throwing the sleigh from side to side and threatening it constantly with destruction against some rock or stump, I was obliged to drop the reins and leave the result of the runaway to chance, for the wildcat was struggling desperately to gain a foothold in the sleigh and fight me at close quarters. I knew that if the sleigh should happen to come into collision with any obstacle heavy enough to wreck it I would be no match for the catamount, now wrought to the utmost ferocity, fighting it on the slipping snow, even if I were unharmed by the collision, so I strained every nerve to conquer the determined beast while I still possessed the advantage of foothold in the sleigh.

"Once I thought it was all up with me, for as the sleigh was carried abruptly round a short turn in the road by the speeding horse one runner struck a stone or a root, and the sleigh careened and ran at least 50 feet on the other runner alone. I mechanically threw the weight of my body toward the upper side of the sleigh, all the time raining rapid blows on the head of the wildcat with the butt of the whip, and forced the sleigh down to its balance on both runners again. A few more blows after that, and I was rejoiced to see the determined and tenacious beast first loosen one claw, hang for a second or so by the other, while it tried to seize the top of the back of the sleigh again with its teeth, and then tumble to the road and lie motionless in the snow.

"I dropped back on the seat limp and weak and too much unnerved to make the least effort to obtain control of the runaway, which was still rushing wildly along the uncertain road, made still more uncertain by the gathering darkness. The horse ran at least three miles farther and then began to slow up and at last stopped half way up a long and steep hill from sheer exhaustion. I had by this time recovered sufficiently to take charge of the horse again and drive the rest of the way to the town, which wasn't far, and where I arrived with the horse covered with foam, a sleigh splintered and covered deep with scars and scratches made by the desperate wildcat and myself so badly used up by nervous shock that it was three days before I was able to get about again in anything like good condition. I never heard whether the wildcat was killed by my blows or not, but I have an idea he was. I hope so. Science may be all right in declaring that wild animals will hasten to flee at the very suspicion of man's approach, but if ever I am going anywhere and hear there are wildcats in that direction I'll go around some other way."—New York Press.

The most noteworthy of all the instruments designed for the correction of Eve's offending daughters was the ducking stool, known as the tumbrel and the trebuchet. A post, across which was a transverse beam turning on a swivel and with a chair at one end, was set up on the edge of a pond. Into the chair the woman was chained, turned toward the water—a muddy or filthy pond was usually chosen for this purpose when available—and ducked half a dozen times, or, if the water inflamed her instead of acting as a damper, she was let down times innumerable until she was exhausted and well nigh drowned.

From the frequency with which we find it mentioned in old local and county histories, in church wardens' and chamberlains' accounts and by the poets (Gay, for one, has a description of the process in his third pastoral, "The Shepherd's Week") we shall probably not be wrong in concluding that at one time this institution was kept up all over the country. In Liverpool, according to The Gentleman's Magazine for 1803, it was not formally abolished until 1776.—London Graphic.

Looking Without Seeing.

Perhaps you are an exception to the rule, but if you are not you have probably on many occasions, just after looking at your watch, been forced to acknowledge to a friend who asked you the time that you did not know what it was. Yet you undoubtedly took your timepiece out of your pocket, looked at its face and carefully replaced it in your pocket, showing a logical sequence of thought and a well defined object, which did not, however, result in leaving a sufficiently distinct impression on your mind to satisfy your friend's curiosity as to the hour of the day. The motion was not an involuntary one, like that of the boy who cannot too often admire his first chronometer, nor yet habitual, for few persons are merely in the habit of taking out their watches. One does so only for a specific purpose.

Now, how may this seeming contradiction be accounted for? Perhaps the reason is that not once in ten times does a man look at his watch to see what the actual time is, but rather to learn whether he still has time to accomplish some purpose. He may want to keep an appointment at a certain time or to be sure not to miss a boat or train. When he takes out his watch, therefore, he instinctively looks for the hands in the position called for by that particular moment, and, when he sees that they have not yet reached that point he returns the watch to its resting place, with his mind relieved.

The actual position of the hands really plays no part at all in the operation, and so when the time is asked of him he is unable to reply. In other words, he accomplishes the paradoxical feat of intently looking at a thing without really seeing it.

Trouble With a Telescope.

Continued observation with the telescope of the Yerkes observatory revealed the unpleasant existence of a number of curious streaks of light running horizontally, whose appearance had certainly never been noticed before and gave rise to redoubled uneasiness. And yet everything seemed right with the glass viewed externally and the most searching investigation could discover no cause.

At last in desperation the eyepiece end was unscrewed, and Professor Ellerman, the slimmest of the party, was bidden to crawl, as he well could do, along in the tube itself, and see if he could discover aught amiss. He crept along well enough, so wide is the tube, till he got beyond the center, when the telescope began to turn over with his weight, and he would have slid down on the top of the glass had not the other end been promptly seized and held fast. Then he continued his journey, and in another moment had discovered the unsuspected author of the mischief, an overindustrious spider and her equally hardworking progeny, who had succeeded in filling up the entire end of the tube with a mass of cobwebs in the hope of catching what must have been wholly imaginary flies. The webs and their spiders were carefully removed, and from that day to this the behavior of the Yerkes 40 inch glass has been all that heart could desire.—Good Words.

Waste, Rest and Exercise.

William M. Evarts was a marvel of intellectual vitality to an advanced age, and he used to explain it by saying that he slept late in the morning and never took any exercise. There is no advantage in getting up early in the morning if you need the sleep. Many a man is burning the candle at both ends by getting up at an early hour simply because his housekeeping is adjusted to that programme. As to physical exercise, Mr. Evarts had discovered for himself what our physiologists are now beginning to teach—namely, that if a man consumes tissue in hard intellectual work the way to repair the loss is by resting and not by consuming more tissue in physical exercise. To the majority of brain workers oxygenization of the blood is far more important than physical exercise, and there are two very good ways to secure that: Sleep with your bedroom window wide open, in summer and winter, and, if you can afford it, keep a horse and drive in the open air.—Boston Watchman.

A Whist Story.

When Lord Thanet was imprisoned in the Tower of London for the O'Connor riot, three of his friends, the Duke of Bedford, the Duke of Laval and Captain Smith, were admitted to play whist with him and remain till the lock up hour of 11. Early in the sitting Captain Smith fell back in a fit of apoplexy, and one of the party rose to call for help. "Stop!" cried another. "We shall be turned out if you make a noise. Let our friend alone until 11. We can play dummy, and he'll be none the worse, for I can read death in his face."

An Easy Matter.

"The reason some men don't get along happily," said Mr. Meekton, "is that they don't know how to manage a wife."

"You know this?" was the skeptical query.

"Certainly. It is the simplest thing in the world. All you have to do is to say 'yes' whenever she wants anything and always let her have her own way."—Washington Star.

His Recommendation.

Tom—Hello, Bill! I hear you have a position with my friends, Skinner & Co.?

Bill—Oh, yes; I have a position as collector there.

Tom—That's first rate. Who recommended you?

Bill—Oh, nobody. I told them that I once collected an account from you, and they instantly gave me the place.—London Fun.

Polite Erie Commuters.

A stranger who had an appointment to meet a friend in the Chambers street ferry house, which is used by Erie commuters, was greatly puzzled the other afternoon by the actions of the men who passed the ticket taker's window. Nearly three-fourths of them took their hats off to the ticket taker in the most polite style.

The stranger thought that possibly the ticket taker's wife was in the box with him, and he went back to look again. There was no one in the box save the ticket taker, who looked good natured, but not imposing. When his friend arrived, the stranger said:

"Is that the president of the Erie road in that box?"

"Certainly not. Why do you ask such a question?"

The friend smiled pityingly at the stranger's ignorance and said it was a trick of the Erie commuters to carry their tickets in the crown of their hats. They took their hats off so that the agent might see the ticket.—New York Sun.

He Got the Business.

"There are tricks even in our trade," said the old life insurance man. "About ten years ago a couple of respectable old parties, man and wife, came to town with $100,000 or so that they wanted to put into an annuity. They had neither chick nor child, kith nor kin, and they wanted to finish their lives in as much ease and luxury as could be bought. So they made the rounds of the life insurance companies, getting their annuity figures and had all the actuaries in town making calculations in the case.

"The head mathematician of the Blank Dash company was a little better than a mere figurer. He happened to hear what town the old parties came from, and he suddenly remembered that he had an old friend, a doctor, who lived there, whom he hadn't seen for years. He invited the medicine man down at once, took him out and showed him a real good, decent time. Then he edged around to the annuity hunters, and, lo and behold, the doctor was their family physician! Without appearing to pump him, the actuary learned enough about the old couple to enable him to make a most glittering inducement to the pair, and they bought their annuity of his concern. They were both dead inside of two years. I forgot just how much the company netted. I think it had paid out about one-tenth of what the old folks had paid in. The company was a gainer, and there were no losers except the other companies as a result of the actuary's shrewd move."—New York Sun.

"Spellbinders'" Ways.

"Spellbinding" is the happy name given to the platform speaking which plays such an important part in every campaign. The national chairman determines who shall be the stars in this department. An ex-president is most in demand, a speaker or an ex-speaker comes next as a rule, and senators and representatives are invited to speak in the order of their usefulness. One speech by an ex-president is worth half a dozen efforts by other men, though they may be more logical and eloquent.

The candidate himself, when an orator, will draw greater crowds than anybody else, but if he is wise he will let the national committee arrange his itinerary and schedule. Headquarters are always overrun with volunteers for the stump; the star, or man with a reputation, waits to be invited or urged. Most of the lesser men are laborers for hire, but others are ambitious to make a reputation as a stepping stone to political office, and some are intensely in earnest and eager to be useful to their party.

The national committee settles for the expenses of spellbinders, unless they insist on paying their own way, which is unusual. Some of the great orators receive handsome sums for their services and travel in state.—Home Magazine.

Senatorial Repartee.

Once in the senate chamber John J. Ingalls was directing some remarks to Senator Hoar of Massachusetts. The other senator from that state, Mr. Dawes, having come in while Mr. Ingalls was speaking, thought the words were meant for his ear, and so, interrupting, he asked Ingalls if he was directing the remarks at him. The tall senator turned slowly around, for Mr. Dawes sat behind him, and then, with delicious intonation, but an instant wit, he said. "I was directing my remarks to the successor of Charles Sumner and not to the successor of Daniel Webster."

The repartee has become traditional, and the utterance was at once placed alongside of that reply of Conkling to Senator Thurman, which is also traditional in the senate chamber.

Conkling was speaking, and Thurman had said, interrupting him, "Does the senator aim his remarks at me; he constantly turns to me?" when Mr. Conkling, with delicious gravity, bowing to Thurman, with whom he was very friendly, said: "When I turn to the senator, I turn as the Mussulman turns to Mecca; I turn as I would turn to the common law of England—the world's most copious fount of jurisprudence."

When Li Hung Chang Grinned.

Once during a dry season in China the viceroy, Earl Li Hung Chang, called on the American minister, Mr. Conger, and spoke of the weather.

"Yes," said Mr. Conger; "it seems to be dry everywhere. It is dry in my country too. I read in one of our papers the other day that in many places in the west the people were praying for rain."

"What!" said the earl. "Do your people pray to their God for rain?"

"Oh, yes," said the minister, "they often pray for rain."

"And does their God send it when they pray for it?" asked the earl.

"Yes, sometimes their prayers are answered, and sometimes they are not."

"All the same like Chinese joss, hey?" said the earl, with a grin and a chuckle.

The Topaz.

The word topaz comes from the Greek verb signifying to guess. The jewel was brought from the east and reported to have come from an island, and men guessed at the location of the isle which produced such beautiful gems.

RAILROAD NEWS.

A wreck on the D. & L. N. occurred at South Adrian Tuesday. The D. & L. N. freight, No. 54, northbound, while crossing the interlocker succeeded in derailing three freight cars Tuesday morning. The cars were piled up on the Wabash road. One car was badly splintered at one end. They were marked Baltimore Ohio and were loaded with tile but strange to say the damage to the tile was very small. The wrecking car went over from here and all of the men from the shops and the gravel pit were taken over to clear the wreck. It took until one o'clock Tuesday afternoon before the wreck was all cleared away, the passenger trains on both roads being conveyed around the wreck by spiking out a road.

TERRIBLY MANGLED.

Pieces of the Body were Found One-Half Mile Away.

Last night about 11 o'clock the western bound fast train on the Wabash ran over a man one quarter of a mile east of Britton, killing him instantly. The body was carried near the platform at Britton where the accident was first discovered. It was so terribly mangled that it was almost impossible to identify him, the head having been severed from the body and as yet not found. Pieces of the body were found over one-half mile away, but a coat belonging to the unfortunate man was sufficient with which to identify him.

He was a young man about 27 years old and it is thought was intoxicated and was walking down the track when the train struck him. He was the son of Andrew J. St. George, of Ridgeway, at whose home the funeral will be held Sunday morning. Interment at Cone.

Pythian Meeting.

Tecumseh lodge No. 190, K. P. entertained visiting brethern from Milan and Tipton last evening at their lodge rooms. About fifteen from Milan and twenty-five from Springbrook lodge were in attendance to see the third rank conferred by our home team, which has gained the reputation of doing some of the finest work to be seen anywhere. Messrs. O. G. Hunt, Lloyd W. Hanford and Jacob Miller were made Knights much to their own satisfaction as well as that of the assembled members.

At the close of the work an elaborate spread was given and it is safe to say that the erstwhile candidates were in perfect condition to do their share at this interesting stage of the proceedings Past Grand Chancellor W. D Clisbie, of Birmingham, who was the organizer of the Tecumseh lodge, was present and made some very appropriate remarks touching the growth and popularity, which this lodge has attained in its short existence. The meeting closed at a late hour, all present voting the same to be an unqualified success and expressing the hope of soon meeting together again.

Rev. Burleson's Farewell.

A farewell reception was given to Rev. Burleson and sister at the home of J. F. Hicks last Tuesday evening. A large number were there and Rev. Burleson was presented with a pocket book containing $24 00 and Miss Burleson with a ring set with pearls.

Rev. Burleson preached his farewell sermon last Sunday and his people regret to have him go, but wish him success in his new work He left for his new home at North Forks, Dakota, Wednesday morning, Mr. Hicks accompanying him as far as Adrian. His mother and sister expect to leave next Monday.

Another Blow-Out

Look out for the Tiger! The local Khorassaners of the K. P. lodge have invited the members of Mecca Temple No. 69 D. O. K. K. of Detroit to visit this village in the early part of May and confer this rank upon a class of 25 Tyros who have had the temerity to apply for membership. The Detroiters, 150 strong, are expected on a special train, carrying their own scenery and the famous "Hot Air Band" and menagerie.

Mrs. A. C. Paxon

Frances Luella Matthews was born at Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1859 and came to Michigan with her parents in 1862. She was married to Mr. A. C. Paxon in 1878 and died March 21st, 1901 A kind husband, three children, a fond mother and a brother remain to mourn her loss.

Mrs. Paxon united with the Episcopal church of Tecumseh in 1874 and remained a faithful and loyal member to the time of her death. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Burleson, assisted by the pastor of the Baptist church.

Mrs Paxon was one of the few who are naturally good. As a child she was loving and lovable and during her school days always manifested a sweet and gentle disposition, standing firmly for truth and right One of her teachers said, "I could always trust Lula." She was one of those who as a daughter was true, as a wife was true, as a mother was true, as a child of God was true, who lived not for fashion nor for time but for eternity. Gifted by nature and still more by grace, she weilded an influence of righteousness wherever she was known. She talked freely of her departure and in the triumphs of living faith entered into the joy of her Lord. Of this one it can truly be said she doth rest from her labors and her works do follow in our hearts and homes. A large circle of friends north and south will always cherish her memory.

IN MEMORY OF MOTHER.

Darling mother now has left us,
  And we miss her everywhere,
Miss those loving eyes so tender,
  And a patient mother's care.

But we would not call her t[illegible] us,
  From that land so free fr[illegible]m care,
Though our hearts are sad and lonely
  When we see her vacant chair.

For the Savior called her to Him—
  He, who every grief will share,
Called her home to Heaven and Father,
  And they know each other there.

That sweet voice to us though silent,
  Joins in songs of gladness now,
Where no lines of care nor sorrow
  Come upon her peaceful brow.

She has gone before and lingers
  Ever near that glittering stair,
With dear Father close beside her,
  They are waiting for us there.

Farewell mother! Thou art happy!
  While with yearning hearts we pray,
That we all may meet in Heaven—
  When the mists have rolled away.

A PRETTY WEDDING

Took Place at the Bride's Home Wednesday Afternoon.

An April wedding of importance was solemnized at the home of Fred Rupp, when his daughter Isabel became the wife of Bert Green. A sweetness and sacredness pervaded the atmosphere and made the occasion what it should be, holy and impressive. Only immediate relatives and friends were bidden to the ceremony at half past one and in the presence of about thirty of these, the marriage troth was plighted.

Precisely at 1:30 o'clock to the strains of the pretty wedding march rendered by Mrs. J. Q. Look, the bridal couple entered the parlor, preceded by Rev. W. F. Jones, who performed the solemn ceremony. The bride, a pretty girl of charming personality, wore a gown of white organdie with white lace and carried white roses. After the ceremony the bride and groom received congratulations from their guests. They were then bidden to the dining room, where an elaborate dinner was served, the tables being very prettily decorated with carnations and smilax.

Many gifts, both useful and pretty, were received, which told in a material way of the esteem in which the young couple are held. The groom, who is an employ of the D. & L. N. railway company at this place, is well liked among his fellow workmen, and also by the company, who presented him with a pass from Detroit to Lima.

Mr. and Mrs. Green left on the evening train for Detroit, the bride gowned in a pretty traveling suit of dark blue cheviot. After a short stay in Detroit, they will return to Tecumseh and make their future home with the bride's father. The guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smith and two children, of Britton, Mrs. Smith being a sister of the bride, and Mrs. Collins, grandmother of the bride, of Maybee.

A Proposed Cement Sidewalk Ordinance.

The following ordinance was recommended by the ordinance committee at the council meeting Monday evening and was deferred for consideration at the next regular meeting:

AN ORDINANCE TO PROVIDE FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF CEMENT SIDEWALKS AND FOR THE PAYMENT OF THE EXPENSE THEREOF.

SEC I.—The village of Tecumseh ordains: That whenever application shall be made to the street committee of the common council of this village for the laying of a cement sidewalk in said village, adjoining lands owned by said applicant, said committee shall forthwith cause an accurate estimate of the expense thereof to be made, according to specifications of the sidewalk ordinance then in force, which estimate shall be certified by said committee to such applicant and to the common council

SEC II Upon payment by said applicant and landowner to the village treasurer of one-fourth of said estimate, which shall be credited to the general fund, and upon due certificate by said treasurer of such payment being filed with the village clerk, said street committee shall forthwith direct the construction of such walk.

SEC III.—Upon filing with said clerk due proof of the construction of said walk, and the cost thereof, by the person entitled to the same and of the ownership of the said adjoining land by said applicant or his grantee, said common council shall at its next regular meeting direct the payment of the cost of said walk to the person entitled thereto.

SEC. IV.—One fourth of the cost of said walk with interest at five per cent. per annum from date of said payment of said cost by said common council shall be levied and assessed as a special sidewalk assessment against the said lands adjoining said walk and collected with and in the same manner as the general village taxes of the then next succeeding year; and one-fourth of the cost of said walk with interest at five per cent. from date of such payment by said council shall be levied and assessed as a special sidewalk assessment against said lands so adjoining said walk and collected as aforesaid with the general village taxes of the then second succeeding year. Said two-fourths of said cost of said walk shall become a lien against said adjoining lands at the time said council shall order the payment of said cost of construction and shall remain a lien thereon until the same and said interest shall be fully paid—provided, however, that any portion of said cost of construction with accrued interest may be paid at any time before maturity thereof as above provided.

Mrs. Mary Bird.

Mrs Mary Bird, formerly of Macon, died at her residence in Tecumseh April 10th and was buried April 12th in the family burial lot at Ridgeway.

> "There is a reaper whose name is Death,
> He reaps the golden grain at a breath."

When we are far, very far removed from the merry laughter of our childhood, when the hopes of ardent youth are lost or realized amid the receeding years, when those with whom we stood in the strength of our best years and worked side by side in life's earnest toil are fallen asleep and we are left alone, then are we strangers and almost forgotten in the places that our own hands and lives made beautiful. Such began to be the life of Mrs. Bird.

Mrs. Bird, formerly Miss Mary Miller, was born in Lodi, Seneca county, N. Y., January 9th, 1820. Her father, Wm. Miller, came to Michigan in 1835 and settled at Ridgeway. In the spring of 1836 he moved to his farm in Macon, now owned by Mr. B. F DePuy.

There on the morning of March 4th, 1840, sixty-one years ago, Miss Miller was married to Mr. Burtis Bird, one of the best and most enterprising farmers in Michigan. In the forenoon after the marriage, he and his bride, leaving her father's house, went to their own little log house on their farm. At their new home in the clearing, Mrs. Daniel Clarkson and others met them and soon all were enjoying a dinner and festive hour such as only they who have lived in pioneer days can understand. On that day with happy hearts they began life's long walk together and for thirty years side by side they journeyed, doing well their part in a community of sturdy pioneers. In 1870 death came to Mr. Bird

In 1844, under the pastorate of Rev. John Minor, Mrs. Bird united with the Reformed church then of Ridgeway, now of South Macon. After the death of Mr. Bird, Mrs Bird came to Tecumseh where she has since resided. There are four children in whose hearts she will ever be lovingly remembered, Charles, Helen, Hobert and Franklin.

What They Made.

A certain father is possessed of a pair of exceedingly bright girl children. The other day his eldest daughter, Alice, was putting her younger sister, surname Gretchen, through some arithmetical paces, and the father was an amused listener. "Gretchen, how much do 12 and 10 make?" was the form of one query, and, being correctly answered, other and similar questions followed each other in quick succession.

The father believing the younger daughter was doing too much of the work thought he would put his first-born up a tree, and so he broke in with a problem of his own invention. "Alice," he queried solemnly, "how much do you and Gretchen make?"

Without an instant's hesitation came the reply:

"Gretchen and I, pop, make you a proud and happy father."—Exchange.

Chinese Method of Measuring.

Many travelers returning from China have commented upon the apparently singular lack of knowledge of the distances across their country or between their towns that exists among the Chinese. If at one town you inquire the distance to the next, you may be told that it is 20 li (one-third of a mile), but upon arriving at the town you will be surprised to find the distance back to the town from which you have just come is 24 li and that the cost of journeying back again is correspondingly greater than the cost to go to it.

The Chinese measure distance not by rule, but by the amount of physical energy required to traverse them. Their wage is based on a unit of energy, the amount that it takes them to carry a given load, one picul one li, on level ground. If the road from A to B is down hill, the distance is regarded as less than the actual linear distance because it is supposed to take less energy to travel in that direction, or, as the Chinese say, "the li are short." It naturally follows that in traveling in the other direction, from B back to A, the road being a gradual ascent, a greater expenditure of energy is necessary. "The li are long," and in order to get a fair compensation for their work the carriers must see that the distance and the charges are correspondingly increased. With this explanation what has often appeared as a vagary of the Chinese becomes simple and reasonable.—Leslie's Weekly.

Olives.

The olive tree in its wild state is a thorny shrub or small tree, but when cultivated becomes a tree 20 to 40 feet high, with no thorns. It lives to a good age. The leaves resemble those of a willow, the flowers are small and white and grow in clusters as grapes do, and the fruit is greenish, whitish, violet or even black in color and generally oval in shape. It is produced in great profusion, so that an old olive tree becomes very valuable to its owner.

Among the Greeks the olive was sacred to Minerva, the goddess of wisdom. It was also the emblem of purity. A crown of olive twigs was the highest honor that could be bestowed upon a Greek citizen. An olive branch was also the symbol of peace, and the vanquished who came to beg for peace bore olive branches in their hands.

The American olive is remarkable for the hardness of its wood. It is found as far north as Virginia. Its fruit is fit for use, and its flowers are fragrant.

The fragrant olive of China and Japan has extremely fragrant flowers, which are used for flavoring tea.

England's Tippling Act.

A queer English law, called the "tippling act of 1751," provides that an innkeeper cannot recover for debts for liquor amounting to more than $5. The son of an eminent English throat specialist lately ran up a bill of $250 at an English public house and based a refusal to pay upon the validity of this act. As the statute was still on the books, the judge was obliged to acknowledge its force.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

W. S. Kilmer, passenger engineer on the M. C. Ry., residing at No. 214 Orange St., Jackson, Mich., says:

"In 1895 I had considerable trouble with my kidneys from the result of a severe cold which settled there and though I tried every means at hand and treated with doctors the pains through the small of my back became more persistent and severe. To add to my troubles the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular. At last I was obliged to lay off work. When at home getting no better under the treatment I was then taking, some one advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box more out of curiosity than from any expectation that they might help me. Now, I want this thoroughly understood when I finished the box I went back to work without a pain or an ache. But to make matters doubly certain I took a second box. Since that time and that is three years ago, I have neither had an ache nor a pain. Is it any wonder at this date, 1898, I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute

"Why Don't It Bust?"

Speaking of fuses, the rector told us one day a very funny thing that he had seen during one of his trips to town. Every day, as long as the siege continued, he crossed that hospital ridge and passed over the most exposed streets on his way to the church, always carrying with him his pocket communion service, apparently standing an even chance of burying the dead, comforting the dying or being himself brought home maimed or cold in death. His leaving was a daily anguish to those who watched him vanish over the brow of the hill. One evening, coming back in the dusk, he saw a burly wagoner slip off his horse and get under it in a hurry. His head appeared, bobbing out first from one side, then from the other. Above him in the air, bobbing, too, and with a quick, uneasy motion, was a luminous spark. After a full minute spent in vigorous dodging the man came out to prospect. The supposed fuse was still there, burning brilliantly. "Darn the thing," he grunted, "why don't it bust?" He had been playing hide and seek for 60 seconds with a fine specimen of our southern lightning bug, or firefly!

Going Into a Safer Business.

It was Cassidy's first morning as newspaper carrier. From side to side of the avenue he hurried, dropping the moist sheets in vestibules and running them in the space between the door and sill. Finally he came to a house that was separated from the sidewalk by an urn studded yard. Cassidy opened the iron gate and walked up the stone path. He knelt in the vestibule and started running the paper under the door. An upper window was raised, and a woman's voice called:

"Is that you, Harry? You are awful late. I hear the milk carts rattling."

"You needn't think I'm coming down at such an hour! The idea of you, a married man, coming home at such a time! Lost your key, as usual? Well, catch this one."

A heavy piece of brass shot two stories. There was a heavy fall, and the vestibule resembled a pressroom.

"Going back to the carrier route?" they asked.

"Niver once more," responded Cassidy. "Oi'm goin back to wur-ruk in th' quarry. Thor's no fallin kaes thor; only dynomited rocks."—Chicago News.

An Abandoned Test.

Sir Hiram S. Maxim was once a victim of one of the British war office's sudden freaks. When the Maxim quick firing gun was being tested by the government with a view to finding out its weak points, its inventor was asked to have 10,000 rounds fired at the highest possible speed. The experiment was successfully carried out, but the chairman of the committee of investigation was still unsatisfied.

"That's very well as far as it goes," he exclaimed, "but could you guarantee your gun to go on firing automatically at the same rate for, say, 24 hours?"

"I can," was the quiet reply, "and I will—on one condition."

"And that is?"

"That the government finds and pays for the ammunition."

At first the committee were inclined to close with the offer, but when it was discovered that 864,000 rounds would be fired and that the cost of the experiment would be something like £5,760 they dispensed with the trial.

Utilising the Waste Product.

A parish in the highlands had been cut off from communication with the nearest town owing to a severe snowstorm, relates The Scottish American. Supplies began to give out, and the minister was much perturbed in mind as his snuffbox was quite empty. The Sabbath came round. How was he to get through his discourse without the aid of his usual stimulant? He appealed to his faithful henchman, the sexton. Alas, he was in a similar unsatisfactory predicament! How was it to be remedied? Andrew shook his head, thought long and suddenly disappeared. Presently he returned with something resembling snuff wrapped carefully in paper. The minister took a hearty pinch or two and then asked:

"Where did you get it, Andrew?"

"Please, sir, I just went and sweepit the pulpit oot," was the reply.

Fair Sized.

"No," said the retired showman, "I won't say that we had the biggest giant that ever happened, but it is a solemn fact what I am going to tell you. This giant had a penchance, or whatever you call it, for trying new styles of whiskers."

"M-hm."

"Well, when he wanted a new style laid out he had to send for a landscape gardener."—Indianapolis Press.

Toads Inclosed In Rock.

The Rev. W. Buckland, from experiments on toads in holes of oolitic limestone and sandstone covered with glass, finds that, while limestone preserved them alive, sandstone killed them. His conclusion is that unless a toad imprisoned in a stone gets a little air it cannot live a year, and unless it gets food it cannot live two years.—London Globe.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

An Interesting Link.

One curious incident in the siege of Badajos may be related. The day after the assault two Spanish ladies, the younger a beautiful girl of 14, appealed for help to two officers of the rifles, who were passing through one of the streets of the town. Their dresses were torn, their ears, from which rings had been roughly snatched, were bleeding, and to escape outrage or death they cast themselves on the protection of the first British officers they met. One of the officers was Captain Harry Smith of the rifles. Two years later he married the girl he had saved in a scene so wild. Captain Harry Smith in after years served at the Cape as Sir Harry, and this Spanish girl, as Lady Smith, gave her name to the historic town which Sir George White defended with such stubborn valor.—"Wellington's Men."

They Were Attentive.

A clergyman preaching in a country church for the first time was delighted to find the congregation very attentive and told the verger so after the service.

The verger replied, "Lor' bless you, sir, we was all looking for you to disappear!"

"Why, what do you mean?" said the clergyman.

"Well, sir, you see, the pulpit is rotten and hasn't been preached in this ten year or more."—Pearson's Weekly.

Some Odd Mistakes.

An urban chemist advertised in his shop window: "Artificial eyes. Open all night." Away down south in front of the postoffice in an inland town may have been seen this legend, "Post here letters too late for the next mail." In a picture of the departure of the pilgrims from Delfthaven the artist placed a large steamer in the distance leaving the harbor under full steam.

A Raging, Roaring Flood.

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Omaha said I had consumption and could not live Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." Positively guaranteed for coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles by C. A. Wright. Price 50c and $1.00

When Horace Greeley Lost His Hat.

A very distinguished assemblage honored Grant's ball, which was held in the newly completed north wing of the treasury building. Elaborate preparations were made for dancing, the manager, by telegraphic communications, keeping the dance moving simultaneously on three floors. But the man who preferred eating to dancing and could not get even within the sight of food was not well pleased. Refreshments were served in the basement, in a room too small to accommodate the 6,000 guests, but large enough to contain the provisions, which were scarce indeed. In the cloakrooms the committee in charge lost their heads, visitors lost their hats, and it is stated on good authority that the sulphurous vapors which rose in the vicinity of the place where Horace Greeley searched for his hat during two hours were stifling.

It is recorded that one gentleman walked to Capitol hill, two miles distant, in dancing pumps and bareheaded and that many frightened women still cowered in the corners of the dressing rooms at dawn the next morning. So, in preparing Grant's second ball, the committee made elaborate arrangements in order that these unpleasantnesses should not again occur.—National Magazine.

Quick Eaters.

"Have you any idea," remarked the cashier of one of the largest lunch restaurants in New York, "how many minutes the average down town business man devotes to his midday meal?"

"At a venture," answered the reporter, watching the hurried play of knives and forks about him, "I should say 15 minutes."

"You set about the time usually estimated," returned the cashier, "but in reality half that time would be nearer right. The average time consumed for lunch by the patrons of this establishment is just eight minutes. The fact is," continued the cashier after the reporter had ventured a foreboding for New York digestion, "people find it such a trifling and unobtrusive matter just to get 'a bite of lunch' that few realize what a gigantic business it is merely to supply hungry people down town at noon, because few bring their lunches with them, and from the formation of the city none can go home.

"This establishment feeds 3,000 people a day, and the amount of food required to care for that patronage is enormous. For example, when we put hash on the 'specials' enough is made up actually to fill a wagon. We are not the largest lunchroom, however."

George Washington's Lottery.

It is not generally known that the great Father of His Country was on at least one occasion the originator of a lottery, the like of which at the present day would be forbidden to send its tickets through the mails. That George Washington was interested in such a scheme is proved by a number of tickets still in existence which bear his august name. It was the Mountain Road lottery of which George was the promoter, and it is, of course, unnecessary to state that Washington himself did not financially profit from it. All the funds raised by the lottery were spent in building the road through Cumberland gap, near Fredericksburg, Va. Originally the lottery tickets which Washington signed were worth $1 each. Now, because they bear his signature, they are easily sold for $50 apiece, though it is certain that not one of them will ever draw a prize.

When Mrs. Gilbert Lost Her Spectacles.

The only time I resented newspaper chatter was when I had my spectacles stolen. They were snatched from my belt, the case I wore there being torn away. I spoke of it to Mr. Dorney, and the story went round the theater. Somehow the reporters got hold of it, and they made a great to do about it. It was really too bad of them. I felt it the more because I had managed to keep a much more serious theft an absolute secret. That was at the time when so much fun was being made of the "robbery of jewels" form of theatrical advertisement. I had a very valuable pair of earrings taken from my pocket most cleverly, and I was on my way to play for a charity too! However, I kept my loss quite to myself. And then to be brought before a sympathetic public as the loser of a pair of spectacles!—From "The Stage Reminiscences of Mrs. Gilbert" in Scribner's.

APPETITES

Created and Maintained by Vinol.

THAT THE FOOD IS DIGESTED IS ASLO EQUALLY NECESSARY.

We Recommend Vinol as an Appetite Creator.

WE GUARANTEE THAT VINOL WILL AID DIGESTION.

Vinol is the greatest aid to digestion that we have ever known.

It is because Vinol acts so beneficially upon the stomach that it accomplishes so much good.

Vinol contains the active curative principles that are found in cod-liver oil, without any oil or grease.

These medicinal elements act so favorably upon the stomach, that this organ obtains for itself the elements necessary for creating new flesh, muscle tissue and for making rich red blood.

When the stomach acts easily and naturally, a desire is created for good simple food and a good appetite is the sure result.

With cod-liver oil as formerly taken the medicinal elements which it contained were too often unable to counteract the harm that was done by the obnoxious grease that enveloped them.

Now that in Vinol we have those same elements separated from the vile-tasting fat, we have a tonic and rebuilder that is simply marvelous in its action.

The following is a letter that will explain itself:

"This is to certify that I have used six bottles of Vinol, and have found it of great value as an appetizer and tonic in general debility. I have received so much benefit from its use that I gladly furnish this testimonial in order that others may be induced to give it a trial and prove to themselves its recuperative powers."—MRS. ELIZABETH FEENEY, Waterbury, Conn.

We want every one in this place to know more about our Vinol, how it cures and what it cures. Certainly the greatest tonic and rebuilder we have ever sold.

We, therefore, cordially invite any one interested to call upon us; and we want all to bear in mind that we will gladly refund to any one who is not satisfied with the action of Vinol every cent they pay for it.

Pretty Children

"We have three children. Before the birth of the last one my wife used four bottles of MOTHER'S FRIEND. If you had the pictures of our children, you could see at a glance that the last one is healthiest, prettiest and finest-looking of them all. My wife thinks Mother's Friend is the greatest and grandest remedy in the world for expectant mothers."—Written by a Kentucky Attorney-at-Law.

MOTHER'S FRIEND prevents nine-tenths of the suffering incident to childbirth. The coming mother's disposition and temper remain unruffled throughout the ordeal, because this relaxing, penetrating liniment relieves the usual distress. A good-natured mother is pretty sure to have a good-natured child. The patient is kept in a strong, healthy condition, which the child also inherits. Mother's Friend takes a wife through the crisis quickly and almost painlessly. It assists in her rapid recovery, and wards off the dangers that so often follow delivery.

LEGISLATIVE PUZZLE.

What the Solons Are Going to Do Relative to Railway Taxation.

SENATE AND HOUSE DON'T AGREE

There Being a Possibility of a Permanent Deadlock—Question of Crossings at Grade.

Lansing, Mich., April 23.—As matters stand between the two houses just at present it would, in my humble judgment, take the very best Philadelphia lawyer on the job to figure out exactly what is to be the outcome of the railroad or so-called equal taxation problem. The principal details of the Chandler bill, as passed by the house by a nearly unanimous vote, were given in my last letter. Since the epistle was indited the senate railroad committee has had its say, with the result that the bill is now an altogether different document—whether better or worse than the house draft being a matter which each person must decide for himself. Like the man who could not exactly make up his mind just where he wanted to go when he died, because he had friends in both places, I have to confess the belief that there are excellent features in both measures.

Where the Senate and House Differ.

The majority of the senate committee amended the house bill by eliminating telegraph, telephone, express, sleeping car and fast freight companies, leaving its provision, therefore, to apply only to railroad and union depot and station companies, the idea being to have a specific tax aplpy to the corporations stricken out. The amendments also strike out the provisions that the property shall be assessed by the state tax provision and substitute a separate board of three members, to be appointed by the governor. No method is provided in the senate draft for determining the average rate of taxation to be applied to railroad properties, the language of the constitution being simply followed and the assessors left to work out this problem to suit themselves.

These are the main departures from the bill as passed by the house, although there are some other amendments. The senate railroad committee was not unanimous in its action. It was nearly so, however. Senator Nichold being the only dissenter, and he agreed with his fellow committeemen that the bill should apply only to railroad properties. He, therefore, made a minority report which provides for the making of the assessment by the state tax commission, and that the average rate of taxation be determined by dividing the aggregate taxes of the state for the current year by the aggregate assessed valuation of all the property of the state.

It should also be said that whereas the house bill calls upon each railroad company to render to the state assessors a full and correct inventory of its personal property, the majority senate bills calls for a detailed statement only; further, the former bill provides that in determining the property of railroads subject to taxation, the assessors shall consider the relation which the number of miles of road within the state bear to the total mileage of the companies, and the senate draft calls for the consideration of the relation which the number of miles of main track of the roads in the state bear to the companies' entire mileage of main track.

Fight Over Two Reports Begins.

The fight in the senate over the two reports and the house bill will commence this afternoon, and it is not probable that the upper body will emulate the example of the house and dispose of the question at one sitting. The indications at present are that it may take the senate several days to arrive at a decision. Just what this will be is problematical, canvasses of the body showing it to be very evenly divided on the subject. It is very probable, however, that, as finally passed, the bill will differ materially from the house measure, and then trouble between the two houses will commence. Some of the leaders of the lower house are of the opinion that that body will never consent to the elimination of all corporations except railroads, or to the creation of a separate assessing board, and these gentlemen even go to the length of saying that the house will not agree to the appointment of a conference committee to settle the differences if the bill comes over from the senate in its present shape. This may possibly prove to be the case, but the chances are that better councils will prevail, and an earnest endeavor made to get together on a bill that will come somewhere near satisfying the wishes of the people.

Question of Grade Crossing.

Governor Bliss has taken a firm stand against the wholesale attempt to nullify the authority given the railroad commissioner in the matter of crossings of electric with steam road tracks by amending city and village charters so that common councils may dispose of these matters. Some months ago the railroad commissioner decided to allow no crossings at grade unless it was a physical impossibility to separate the grades. This stand was taken in the interests of the public, the commissioner seeing that the multiplicity of crossings incident to the great growth of electric railways called for the exercise of the greatest care in this connection if the state is to be spared frequent repetitions of frightful grade crossing accidents. Being unable to swerve the commissioner from what he conceived to be his highest duty, parties interested had provisions inserted in city charters giving the councils power to grant permission to cross at grade. One of these bills slipped through before the governor learned that it contained this provision. He then announced that he would sign no more charter bills in which this provision was made, and the result has been the recalling of several for amendment. Now the question of the right of the commissioner to control this matter is to be tested in the courts, the Jackson suburban company having secured from the supreme court an order directing that official to show cause why a mandamus should not be issued to compel him to consent to grade crossings in Jackson city.

Fraternal Congress Rate Bill.

An important matter which has attracted very little attention, but which probably vitally concerns as many citizens of Michigan as any other measure pending in the legislature, was partially considered by the house committee on insurance a few evenings ago, and will be further considered Thursday evening. This is the so-called fraternal congress rate bill, which contemplates the ultimate adoption by all fraternal benefit insurance companies operating in Michigan of the minimum table of rates named in the bill. These rates are materially in advance of those charged at present. The bill provides that organizations hereafter admitted to do business in the state shall charge the new and increased rates. No such mandatory provision is applied to present companies, the theory being that, with the competition of new companies, with lower rates removed, their membership cannot be taken from them in the event they increase their rates, and that such increase will eventually be made all along the line. The criticism of the bill, of course, is that it will create a fraternal trust. It is conceded by the managers of every fraternal company now doing business in the state, with possibly one exception, that the present rates are altogether too low, and experience has demonstrated that permanency cannot be maintained with them. One of the supreme officers of one of the largest associations in the state—an association which has several hundred thousand members—informed the committee flatly that, unless his company increased its rates, it can live but a few years longer, and he maintained that this was true of every other society. While the societies are generally agreed on this proposition, there are differences of opinion as to the advisability of enacting such a law as is proposed just at this time. During the past winter the law has been enacted in four states.

"Ripper" Bill That Is Probably Dead.

The Grand Rapids ripper bill, which renders ineligible to hold office in that city persons who have defaulted while holding public office in previous years, has probably met the fate which I last week intimated belonged to it by divine right. Its sponsors recalled it from the governor rather than have it vetoed. It is asserted that it was withdrawn for the purpose of affording Mayor Perry a chance to be heard in opposition to it, it having been rushed through at a rate that gave no one an opportunity to be heard, but no one need be much surprised if it is never heard from again. It may be all right enough to enact a general law of that character, although I still insist that a municipality is entitled to fill its offices with defaulters if that is the kind of officials a majority of the electors fancy, but when it comes to singling out individuals for elimination from the political map by such a bill, the state ought not to be a party to the transaction.

Veto That May Kill an Appropriation.

It is intimated that there is a veto in store for the bill appropriating $4,500 annually for the use of the State Agricultural society in connection with the state fair. It is understood that Governor Bliss does not believe there is any necessity for the appropriation or that all the people of the state will profit by the expenditure, and furthermore, that the precedent would be a bad one to set. The only veto thus far filed is one disposing of the bill permitting the supervisors of Bay county to pay their chairman a small salary each year in addition to his per diem. The veto of this bill was not so much due to the fact that it appropriated money for an objectionable purpose as to the disinclination of the executive to have these matters taken care of in special bills. If the object was a good one, then, he argued, let a general law be enacted putting all the counties of the state on the same footing in this respect, and not have the counties coming one at a time and lumbering up the statute books with laws of this nature. Once a start is made in this direction, and the "habit" grows with alarming rapidity.

Bliss Against Snap Legislation.

Governor Bliss has taken a commendable stand against snap legislation. A great majority of the bills thus far enacted have been given immediate effect, and the governor believes that this should be done only where the necessity of the case demands it, the constitutional limit of ninety days after the final adjournment of the legislature being none too long in which to enable the people of the state to familiarize themselves with changes in laws and new statutes before they take effect. Since sending a communication to the legislature on this subject the governor has caused the recall of an immediate effect bill amending a criminal statute, and will require that the immediate effect provision be stricken out.

Bills That Will Be Modified.

The indications are that the Handy and Chandler bills, amending the general fish and game laws, respectively, will not become laws, at least in some of their most radical and important provisions. A majority of the house evidently believes that many of the proposed changes are too sweeping.

No Adjournment May 4.

Readers of these letters will remember that I have never shared the belief that the present session of the legislature would be brought to an end May 4, as provided by the senate resolution. Every one admits now that this will not be done. As a matter of fact, if final adjournment is reached by May 25, the legislature will be doing a fairly good job. There are two things the people of the state should understand, and the sooner they do so the better it will be for their peace of mind. One is that, as long as they require the legislature to do for the most part work that properly belongs to the boards of supervisors, just so long will the sessions of the legislature necessarily be of from five to six months' duration. The other is that it takes about so much money to run the state government, and that the biennial appropriations cannot be reduced materially unless some of the existing institutions are put out of commission.

JAMES V. BARRY.

Bad for the Fishermen.

West Bay City, Mich., April 23.—The storm of Sunday night proved disastrous to fishermen along the bay shore. Several hundred dollars' worth of nets were destroyed, while eight or nine boats loaded with nets and other material which had been sent out just previous to the storm and were anchored on the fishing grounds awaiting an opportunity to unload, were capsized.

Can't Buck the Court.

Cleveland, April 23.—As a result of the crusade inaugurated by Mayor Johnson against ramshackle buildings within the fire limits, City Building Inspector Harks was yesterday fined $25 by Judge Strimple for contempt of court. Harks, it is charged, tore down an old building at 164 Orange street after an injunction had been issued ordering him not to do so.

WATERS SUBSIDING

The Danger Line is Passed in the Flooded Districts.

A NUMBER OF LIVES LOST

Pittsburg, April 23.—The flood is over. Notwithstanding the fact that early in the day there was every evidence of a renewal of the high water, the announcement can be made authoritatively that there is not the least danger of another rise at this point nor above, for the present, but towns on the Ohio river below here are not yet out of danger because of rains in the valley Sunday night and yesterday. All up-river points report the rain and snow having ceased and the rivers falling.

The Ohio registered 18.8 at the dam here at 7 o'clock and falling. The rivers about this city are down so that the works along the banks are running. There is a good deal of cleaning up to be done.

The creeks and runs which did so much damage in the outlying districts on Saturday are back well within their banks to-day.

The railroads have recovered remarkably well from the effects of the flood and snow storm, and now the various lines have resumed operations to all points, but for several days no pretention at running on schedule will be made.

A look over the ground after the flood shows that the losses will be fully as great as was estimated Sunday. In and about Pittsburg, it will probably take $1,000,000 to pay the total cost of the injury to property by the water and by land slips. Add to this the great loss to the railroads and manufacturing plants up and down the rivers in this immediate vicinity with the loss in wages to the workingmen, and the total will not fall far short of $2,000,000.

Cincinnati, April 23.—The stage of the river here at 6 o'clock last night was 51 feet and rising at the rate of two inches an hour. None of the railroads will be shut out of the regular stations.

Marietta, O., April 23.—Three persons were drowned in the river here yesterday afternoon. A boat containing nine men was carried under a wharf by the swift current, and Joseph Everett, a glass worker, was drowned. The others were rescued. Later two boys named Hanley, aged 7 and 14 years, were drowned at the same place.

Boston, April 23.—A complete suspension of through business, both passenger and freight, on the main line of the Boston & Albany railroad, is reported. There is news of a landslide at Zoar.

The west express that left Boston yesterday was hemmed in at Chester by washouts, blocking the line. The officials of the road were making arrangements for flanking the flooded district by a detour at Springfield over the Connecticut River railroad to Greenfield and thence over the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine to North Adams, when the telegram was received announcing that a great landslide at Zoar, a short distance from the easterly portal of the Hoosac tunnel, had brought traffic on that section of the Boston & Maine to a dead standstill.

Glens Falls, N. Y., April 23.—One hundred feet of the coffer dam of the new dam of the Hudson River Power Co., at Spier Falls, went out yesterday owing to the high water from the melting snow in the Adirondacks and the heavy rains of the past week. Frank Smith and Oscar Satterlee of this city were thrown into the rived by the breaking of the guy rope of the derrick. Satterlee was saved by clinging to a log. Smith was drowned and his body has not yet been recovered.

Washington, April 23.—The postoffice department was notified yesterday that the Middlefield bridge, on the main line of the Boston & Albany railroad, 20 miles east of Pittsfield, Mass., has been washed out by the floods. All trains are being dispatched by another route. This is the only serious washout due to the floods that has been officially reported so far. Mails from all points are arriving here promptly and so far as reports show there is no indication of serious delays to the mails anywhere as an outgrowth of the floods.

Pittsburg, April 23.—A skiff containing three people who were catching driftwood in the Ohio river at Legionville, Pa., capsized and two of the occupants, W. H. Barnhart and Thomas Holsinger, were drowned.

Tennessee Tunnel Caves In.

Knoxville, Tenn., April 23.—A dispatch from Bristol says the Egleson tunnel on the Norfolk & Western railroad between Radford and Bluefield, has fallen in, thereby stopping traffic on the main line of the road. The tunnel is about three-quarters of a mile long. All traffic to and from the Columbus, O., end is now going via Bristol. Heavy snow and rains caused the cave-in.

Admitted to Bail.

New York, April 23.—Coroner Bausch yesterday admitted Richard J. Mullen, the man who admits having struck Adirnace Lord the blow which is alleged to have killed him, to $5,000 bail pending the inquest to-day. A friend furnished the bond.

Strike Order Effective.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 23.—Every mine in the Fifth Ohio sub-district which includes Belmont, Harrison and Jefferson counties, O., and the four West Virginia Panhandle counties, is idle to-day, the strike order having become effective.

A Precaution.

Husband (going to his rich uncle's funeral)—Put a couple of large handkerchiefs into my pocket, dear. The old gentleman promised to leave me £10,000, and I shall want to shed some appropriate tears.

Wife—But suppose when the will is read you find he hasn't left you anything?

Husband—In that case you had better put in three.—London Fun.

A RADICAL CUBAN DELEGATE

Asks That American Troops Replace Native Police.

Havana, April 23.—The Discussion, commenting on a telegram from Bravo Correoso to the Cuban secretary of state, Senor Tamayo, asking that American troops replace the native police at the established points of registration in Santiago province, says that Correoso has posed as one of the most radical delegates to the Cuban constitutional convention, insisting that Cuba be given absolute independence.

This request for American troops is a weapon that the enemies of independence will use to good advantage, for it is nothing less than a public declaration from a leading radical that Cubans are incapable of complying with the laws of the country, incapable of proper government and cannot maintain order without the presence of American soldiers. The Discusion deplores the utterances of Senor Correoso at this moment when the commission is striving to obtain an unfettered government for Cuba, and says that Correoso sent the telegram in question in the heat of political passion.

SIGNS OF SETTLEMENT

Between Marine Engineers and Lake Carriers.

Cleveland, April 23.—From a reliable source it was learned last evening that a new proposition may shortly be made by the engineers to the Lake Carriers. Just what it will embody, if submitted, is not known.

A prominent engineer, discussing the strike last night, said: "There will very likely be some important developments within the next day or two. I predict that the strike will be amicably settled before another week passes."

While a number of the engineers who attended the conference departed for home yesterday, several of the leaders in the organization remained in the city and were closeted with President Uhler throughout the evening. It was reported that one of the largest steamship companies on the lakes had opened negotiations with the engineers' association with a view to having the men return to work. This report could not be verified, as the engineers refused to discuss the subject.

Typefounders' Union Meet.

New York, April 23.—Representatives from the six typefounders' union of the country met here yesterday preparatory to a conference with the employing typefounders on Wednesday. The object of the meeting of the delegates to the typefounders unions is to consider the renewal of the uniform scale of wages agreement that has been in effect for the past year. The conference adjourned until to-day without having taken any action on the wage scale.

Want to Get On, Ye Know.

Kingston, Ja., April 23.—Two Colombian officials arrived here on the steamer Orinoco last Sunday from Colon on a secret mission, which, it is believed, is to discover the source whence the Colombian rebels are getting supplies. The general situation in Colombia remains unchanged. The Colombian government and public institutions, as well as individuals, will send numerous exhibits this week to the Pan-American exposition.

Billy Smith Knocked Out.

London, April 23.—At the National Sporting club, London, last night, Jack Roberts of England knocked out "Billy" Smith, the American, in the eighth round. The fight was for the nine-stone championship of England.

A Formal Protest.

Brussels, April 23.—The Petit Bleu publishes a dispatch saying that Dr. Leyds has sent to the German foreign office a formal protest against the supplying of arms and guns to England by Germany.

Commandant Bokburg Surrenders.

Pretoria, April 23.—The force under Commandant Bokburg, composed of 106 men, with wagons and rifles, have surrendered near Middleburg, Transvaal colony.

Want to Arbitrate.

Genoa, April 23.—The striking employes of the navigation company have requested the president of the Italian ministry, Zarardelli, to arbitrate their differences with their employers.

Just Making Sure.

An old farmer in Scotland once went to have a troublesome tooth extracted. Said the dentist after looking at the offending molar:

"It is a very ugly one. I would advise you to have it out by the painless system. It is only a shilling extra."

He showed the farmer the apparatus for administering gas, remarking that it would cause him to fall asleep for a minute, and before he awoke the tooth would be out. After a slight resistance the sufferer consented, proceeding to open his purse.

"Oh, never mind paying just now!" said the dentist kindly.

"Hoots!" answered the cautious old Scot. "A' wasn't thinking o' that. But if A'm ga-en ta sleep, A' thocht A' wad like ta count ma siller fust."—

Amended Chandler Tax Bill Not Yet Printed.

COMES UP IN SENATE TODAY

The Atwood People Claim to Have 19 Votes for Amended Bill—The Opposition Talk As Though They Were Only Sure of 15.

Lansing, Mich., April 23.—Railroad ad valorem tax legislation is the chief topic of conversation among members of both houses of the legislature. The senate has made the amended Chandler bill a special order for to-day, and there will probably be a lively debate. The Atwood people, who favor a separate assessing board for railroad property, claim that they will have from 17 to 19 votes when it comes to a "show down."

Those who favor the Kelly-Nichols plan for the state tax commission to be made a board of assessors to assess railroad property under the ad valorem system, talk as though they are absolutely sure of 15 votes, as follows: Senators Cannon, Farr, Helme, High, Kelly, Lockerby, Loomis, Murfin, Nichols, Nims, Palmer, Gad Smith, Schumaker, Weeks and Westover.

In the senate to-day or to-morrow it is likely that an amendment to the amended Chandler bill will be offered, providing that in case the governor fails to appoint and the senate fails to confirm three men as members of the new state board of assessors during the present regular session of the legislature, the state tax commission shall act as such assessing board until the appointments shall have been regularly named and confirmed. Such an amendment has been drafted. The plan is to thus render it impossible for the Atwood-Bliss people to make "recess appointments" of pro-corporation men to membership on the special board of assessors for railroad property.

Senator Nichols, who is a lawyer, says he still believes the bill decided upon should contain a provision for a special board of review as to railroad property valuations and that such a provision would be constitutional.

Some of the sanguine leaders of the opposition who want the state tax commission to assess the railroad property under the ad valorem system declare that with Senator Fuller absent, as at present is the case, the senate is about equally divided on the question of the assessing board.

Senator Atwood, leader of the "immortals" of the 1899 state senate, has recovered his health and is prepared to do business.

The amended Chandler bill, which was last Thursday made a special order for to-day, has not yet been printed. The senators have had no opportunity to read it or prepare amendments to it. Senator Helme says this appears to be suspicious to him.

A movement has been set on foot by leaders of the house to have the legislature decide either this week or next upon a day for final adjournment—probably June 1. Chairman Alward of the house state affairs committee says a conference of some of the members of the house, with Speaker Carton, will likely be held this week with a view to selecting a final adjournment day. The Atwood senate resolution fixing May 4 as the day for final adjournment, which has been pigeonholed for a few weeks in the house committee on state affairs, may be amended by substituting June 1 as the day on which the legislature shall finally adjourn.

Rep. Alward says about 75 per cent of the bills considered by both houses of the legislature should be permanently pigeon-holed, as he considers them trivial. Of the 80 bills now on the house general order he declares about 80 per cent of them should have been held up in committees. Mr. Alward declares his state affairs committee has to pigeon-hole a lot of such bills.

Was Accidental Death.

Evart, Mich., April 23.—The 14-year-old son of Jake Carr, a farmer living nine miles south of Evart, was killed Sunday afternoon by a gun in the hands of a playmate, George Sparks, aged 11. The coroner's jury verdict was accidental death.

A Divorce Granted.

Pontiac, Mich., April 23.—Rev. Isaac N. Aldrich, who filed a sensational bill for divorce here some months ago, has been granted a decree. Aldrich was formerly pastor of the Congregational church at Orion, and alleged all manner of unsavory things about his wife. She made no contest.

Exchanged Ratifications.

Washington, April 23.—Secretary Hay and Lord Pauncefote, the British ambassador, to-day exchanged ratifications of the treaty ratified by the senate last session, amending the British extradition treaty by the addition of three articles, the most important of which is the defining as an extraditable crime the destruction of railroad property.

A Narrow Escape.

Detroit, Mich., April 23.—Rev. Francis J. Van Antwerp, pastor of Holy Rosary church, on Harper avenue, had a narrow escape yesterday. As he was crossing Woodward avenue, he was struck by a scorcher and thrown in front of a street car. The motorman stopped the car before the fender touched the prostrate priest. A slight lameness is the only effect that Fr. Van Antwerp bears of his close shave.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, but, he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1 1-2 boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." DOES ANYONE KNOW

John Pervis, of Detroit, Killed at Hillsdale?

Hillsdale, Mich., April 23.—John Pervis of Detroit was killed in the yards of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad here about 6 o'clock last evening by local freight train No. 92, east bound. He had been around the yard nearly all the afternoon, and while the engine was doing its work he got aboard the caboose and sat upon the platform. As the engine came toward the caboose the man threw his hat across the track to the lawn, and fell from the platform in front of the engine, which passed over his body, cutting it into two pieces. Those who saw the catastrophe are of the opinion that he threw himself in front of the engine on purpose. Pervis was a stranger here. He came to the Keefer house Saturday night and registered from Detroit. He was a cripple, and when he walked he placed his hand upon his knee.

Detroit, Mich., April 23.—The city directory does not contain the name of John Pervis. According to the directory, there are no people in Detroit by that name.

THE MAHAN CASE.

Drs. Bailey and McLaren Discharged in Police Court.

Detroit, April 23.—Judge Sellers yesterday afternoon discharged Dr. Wm. M. Bailey and Dr. W. R. McLaren, and they will not be tried on the charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Elizabeth Mahan in Grace hospital.

The judge said that he had gone over the testimony a second time with great care, but it did not change his opinion that it was not sufficiently strong to warrant a trial.

"The case is by no means closed, as far as the prosecuting attorney is concerned," said Prosecutor Hunt. "I shall have the entire testimony written up and will examine it very closely."

No Hopes for Recovery.

Niles, Mich., April 23.—The case of Attorney George F. B. Collins, who has been adjudged insane, is a sad one. A few years ago he was a bright lawyer. One day about that time he visited Chicago. While in the city he was sandbagged and robbed. The blows struck him on the head, rendering him unconscious and left him a wreck, both mentally and physically. Since then he has struggled against fate, but with the ever present delusion that his best friends were against him, he gradually became so violent that it was thought best to have him taken care of. There is little hope of his benefitting from treatment, as he is about 55 years old.

Old Cavalry Officer Dead.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 23.—Postmaster Charles Delamere, of South Haven, died yesterday, aged 68, after a long illness with nervous prostration. Deceased was a prominent resident of Van Buren county, well known as a general lumber commission merchant, and for his masonic affiliations. He served throughout the civil war as an officer in the Thirteenth Michigan cavalry. He had been a resident of South Haven 35 years, was past master of Star of Lake No. 158, F. & A. M., high priest of South Haven chapter No. 58, R. A. M., and a member of Peninsular commandery No. 8, K. T., of Kalamazoo. The latter will conduct the funeral on Wednesday, leaving here on a special train.

J. H. Brown on Trial.

Lansing, Mich., April 23.—The trial of James H. Brown, former president and at present a member of the state live stock sanitary commission, commenced yesterday afternoon, without any preliminaries further than that the prosecution elected to proceed under the first count, which charges one offense committed in Pontiac in April, 1898. Phillip T. Colgrove, of Hastings, is defending. The specific charge against Brown is that he charged and collected from the state pay for four days' time, when, as a matter of fact he was engaged in making a private test of cattle for tuberculosis, and collected pay therefor from the owner of the cattle.

Captains Laid Off.

Washington, April 23.—An order was issued at the war department yesterday discharging a number of captains who have been serving as majors in the volunteer service, but who hold commissions in the regular establishment.

A Cheeky Proposition.

Bay City, Mich., April 23.—George Legacy, aged 35, appeared in the police court yesterday and asked to be permitted to marry a 15-year-old girl named Emily Baker, who had just been sentenced to the Industrial school at Adrian. He was turned down. The girl has been brought up in the vilest surroundings by her mother, according to the police. Legacy hung around her home.

Photos That Would Pay.

Everybody is trying to make money quickly nowadays, and photographers, amateur and expert, form a goodly percentage of the total included in "everybody." Here are a few subjects that would fetch very high prices:

A house being struck by lightning. We have photos of lightning flashes, but no picture of the kind which shows a flash actually striking a house.

Two trains in collision. Photos of wrecked trains are common enough, but a snap shot at the very occurrence of the smash remains unrecorded.

A negative of an Atlantic liner battling with an ocean tempest. If you could take a snap shot of this subject from the deck of another liner it would be worth a good sum.

A photograph of a sprightly earthquake in Japan or some other country which is troubled in this way. It would be well to hang up your camera and make it work automatically, as earthquakes are not to be played with. Such a picture would be jumped at.

Acids That Are Death to Cholera.

The acid of lemons and oranges is fatal to the cholera bacillus. Even if placed upon the rinds of the fruit the germs will not survive longer than a day.—Ladies' Home Journal.

In the Georgian language, spoken in the mountains between the Caspian and Black seas, dada means mother and mama father.

A Raging, Roaring Flood

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Omaha said I had consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." [illegible] guaranteed for coughs, colds [illegible] and lung troubles by C. A. Wright. Price 50c and $1.00.

A Criminal.

A friend of mine, the minister of a west end chapel in London, tells how, in his last visit to America, he preached in one of the larger jails and after the service visited some of the prisoners in their cells. One case interested him especially, a man of good education and address and seemingly of abilities fitted to command success in the world. My friend gave vent to his sincere distress at finding such a man in such a position and was going on to "improve the occasion" when the prisoner cut in with the remark that he believed in England we were fond of fox hunting.

My friend, regarding it as a broad hint to change the subject, assented.

"And may I ask," said his companion, "when a man gets a fall, does he give up hunting?" And on getting the only possible answer to such a question he added, "I have had a bad fall, and no mistake, but I count on better luck another time."

This case is thoroughly typical. The true professional is not a weak creature who yields to uncontrollable impulse. Loving a life of adventure and having a soul above working for his living, he pursues a life of crime with a full appreciation of its risks. Change those risks to certainties, and you at once supply a motive adequate to influence his course. If every fox hunter ended by breaking his neck, fox hunting would be shunned, save by a few desperate men, and the same would be true of professional crime of this character if it always ended in disaster.—Nineteenth Century.

Worked the Passengers.

An amusing scene was witnessed one day on one of the mail boats running from Calais to Dover. The sea was rather rough. A young woman, pretty and nicely dressed, appeared to be suddenly taken very ill with seasickness. She groaned and screamed in apparent agony for some little time.

At length a person who appeared to be a stranger to her approached and asked whether she would like to take a lozenge, which he guaranteed would ease her pain. He had often tried it, he said, on people and always with the most marvelous results. The young lady demurred a little at first, but finally accepted the offer Never was cure so instantaneous. Hardly had she swallowed the lozenge than the fair patient was sitting up all smiles and ordering ham sandwiches of the steward.

Some passengers were so struck with the incident that they inquired what was the remedy that had had such a wonderful result, and the gentleman, who, as he said, was the agent for the sale of the lozenges, disposed of a considerable number of boxes of them at 10 francs apiece. What was the surprise of the purchasers when they saw the young lady and her preserver go off arm in arm on the vessel reaching Dover! The boxes contained common jujubes.—London Telegraph.

An Officious Sexton.

There is an Irish clergyman of our acquaintance who has deservedly a considerable local reputation as a wit and story teller. He sees everything from the humorous side. His appearance, his voice and manner are all mirth provoking, especially his laugh. The present writer heard him speak lately of his sexton, who appears to be an original. A lady, a stranger to the place, asked him if there were daily matins in the church. "No, madam," he replied, "we can't afford that, but we put down cocoanut every Sunday."

This official is close at hand at all baptisms and marriages and instinctively answers all the questions asked of sponsors and couples being married, so that the rector says he is godfather to innumerable children and has married himself to a considerable number of brides, for when the question is put, "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" he always audibly answers, "I will." It may be truly said "this is very Irish," for so it is. Indeed, we have been told of a case in which a young lady about to be married in the church which this sexton serves made it a proviso that he should be charged to keep his distance during the ceremony.—Exchange.

Bound to Have Order.

"My husband is just too ridiculous for anything."

"Why so?"

"Why, he staid at home last night and attended to the children while I went to the club. When I returned, he was sitting on a chair in the corner, a black snake whip in one hand and a revolver in the other."—Indianapolis Sun.

Altogether Different.

Suitor—I have come to ask you for your daughter's hand.

Father—Well, the fact is we are pretty crowded here as it is, and I—

Suitor—Oh, I intend to take her away from home if I marry her!

Father—Oh, well, in that case— But you did give me an awful start, my boy.—Boston Transcript.

A Gentle Hint.

Little Bobby had been forbidden to ask for dessert. The other day they forgot to serve him, and as Bobby is very obedient he remained silent, although much affected.

"Josephine," said the father, "pass me a plate."

"Won't you have mine?" cried little Bobby. "It is very clean."—London Tit-Bits.

All Her Fault.

Mr. Peevish—Where is that book of mine? You know I told you last night where I had put it for safe keeping.

Mrs. Peevish—Yes, dear, but I don't remember where you said you had put it.

Mr. Peevish—Well, I declare! Women can't remember a blessed thing!—Philadelphia Record.

A Lay Suggestion.

On the last night of a series of "protracted meetings" in the Methodist church of a little southern California village the visiting evangelist was making a special effort to obtain a showing of anxious souls. He had preached his best sermon and reached an emotional fervor that he had seldom equaled. But nobody responded to his invitation. They sang a hymn, and then the evangelist rose again and called upon the congregation to "enlist for the service of the Lord."

A battle scarred, wooden legged veteran who had dropped into the back seat watched the proceedings with interest. For the third time the perspiring evangelist rose and asked, "Is there no one willing to enlist in the Lord's army?"

Then response came from the back seat, "Draft 'em, parson; hang it, draft 'em!"

Anxious to Be His Friend.

"There are plenty of men in this world," said the head of the firm, addressing the clerk he had summoned into the private office, "who can trace their successes directly to what they at first considered failures. I knew a man who 20 years ago was a clerk in a clothing store. His employer discharged him for incompetency. He hunted through all the clothing stores in town trying to get another job, but couldn't find one, and at last, almost starved, he got a place as a brakeman on one of the railroads. Today he is practically the head of that road, draws a salary of $25,000 a year and regards the man who discharged him long ago as the best friend he ever had. Now, he is only one of hundreds of men who have had similar experiences. So you see what at first seems a misfortune may often be a real blessing in disguise."

The young man hid a yawn behind his hand and, thinking of the live broiled lobster he had the night before helped a certain soft eyed creature to remove from the scene, languidly replied:

"Yes; I know that has frequently happened. Did you want to speak to me about anything in particular this morning, Mr. Yamsley?"

"Oh, no; nothing of special importance," the old gentleman replied, "only I'm going to give you a chance to look back some day and regard me as your best friend. Goodby. I hope you'll have all kinds of success at whatever you decide to go at."—Chicago Herald.

Panics and Religious Books.

There is one kind of business, according to a New York man prominent in it, that does not enjoy easy financial conditions. It is that of publishing devotional and religious literature. This publisher explained this anomalous condition as follows:

"When everybody is prosperous, there is no very great demand for our publications. People are happy, and they do not go to church to any great extent. Preachers will tell you that church attendance is never so good in prosperous times as it is in periods of financial straits.

"Let a panic come on, however. At first our business feels it as keenly as any other line. People suddenly cease buying everything except what they are obliged to have. As times fail to improve, people take more to going to church. Attendance increases very perceptibly. In a few weeks we can tell it in our business. There is a greatly increased demand for devotional books of all kinds. The business increases, and at the very height of the financial troubles we do the largest business. As times get better you can see our trade in this line of publications gradually drop off until, when prosperity again comes round, we settle down to a normal business quite different from the boom we had been enjoying."—New York Times.

Traps In French.

A frequent trap in French for the unwary is the difference of meaning in similar phrases. For example, "faire feu" means to fire a gun, while "faire du feu" means to light a fire; "tomber par terre" conveys the idea of falling to the ground from one's own height, whereas "tomber a terre" means to fall from any height—in other words, to tumble down and to tumble off. In the same way "traiter de fat" means to call a man a fop and "traiter en roi" to treat him like a king. The English word "bore" may be expressed in two ways—"un raseur" gives the idea of an active bore and "une bassinoire" of a passive bore.—Academy.

Most Unwholesome.

"I think I'll have some of those crullers," said Jones at the lunch counter "Don't you want some?"

"No," replied Smith. "They don't agree with me."

"That so?"

"Yes: I couldn't even eat the hole in one without getting dyspepsia."—Philadelphia Record.

A Good Beginning.

He (passionately)—What difference does it make where we go on a wedding trip?

She—But don't you think we should spend enough money to keep up appearances?—Detroit Free Press.

Inconsistent.

"You are a most inconsistent woman," said Henpeck, turning at last.

"I am, eh?" she retorted. "How?"

"You insist upon having and using only the most expensive things, and yet"—

"Well? You certainly never objected to that?"

"No, but do be consistent. Don't use so much talk. It's cheap."—Philadelphia Press.

Swindled.

"The saddest, most blighted life case I ever knew," said the major, "was that of a man who received a life pass over a new railroad."

"How was that?" asked the colonel.

"Why, the pass was issued before there was a rail laid, and then the road was never built. He has felt swindled ever since."—Indianapolis Press.

When Hannibal's army descended from the Alps into the valley of Lombardy the whole force was well nigh routed by a plague of mosquitoes, which drove men and animals almost wild with pain.

Avoiding Worry.

Husband—Quarreled with her?

"No, but I don't want you to see her."

"Hum! Why not?"

"I know you'll admire that new dress of hers, and it will only worry you to think what a ridiculous fuss you made over the bills for this cheap thing I've got on."—New York Weekly.

Teeth Put to Many Uses.

All Eskimos have good teeth, but they are subjected to severe usage, being used for pinchers, vises and fluting machines.

The teeth are employed in drawing bolts, untying knots, holding the mouthpiece of a drill, shaping boot soles, stretching and tanning skins. When they become uneven from hard usage they are leveled off with a file or whetstone.

Not a Good Liar.

Mrs. Newbride—I didn't see you at my wedding.

Mr. Stingee (who saved the price of a gift)—Why, I didn't get any invitation.

Mrs. Newbride—I'm sure one was sent to your house on Sixteenth street.

Mr. Stingee—No, it wasn't. It was sent to the same number on Fifteenth street, and—er—that is—I declare there goes my car! Goodby!—Catholic Standard and Times.

WHY THE BOILER BURSTS.

When you hear the kitchen boiler cracking, there is no cause for alarm. There is a prevailing impression that the cracking is produced by steam and that there is therefore an increased pressure on the boiler at such times. But this is an error. If the boiler is in good condition, with the water turned on as usual so that the boiler is kept filled, the only pressure that it is subjected to is the same as that in the water pipes, from which of course there never is the slightest danger. And this is true no matter how hot the water in the boiler may be.

The reason is very simple. As long as the boiler is kept full of water there is no room for steam. If you open the hot water cock, the water pours out, and steam rises from it, because it then has a chance to escape into the air. In other words, evaporation takes place. But as the hot water pours out water from the pipes rushes in to take its place, and thus the boiler is kept full.

The cracking noise referred to is heard when the water is unusually hot and is nothing but the expansion of the boiler under the influence of that heat. It is in no degree an indication of danger unless indeed the boiler is worn out or defective, which is a matter entirely outside of what we are now considering.

When a kitchen boiler explodes, it is generally because a fire has been kindled in the range while the boiler was empty. It happens sometimes when people come back to town after spending the summer away. The fire heats the boiler, of course, and when the water is turned on it is converted suddenly and violently into steam, and the boiler cannot stand the enormous pressure. Fortunately few persons are thoughtless enough or silly enough to build a fire before opening the cocks connecting the boiler with the water pipes.—Chicago Chronicle.

HOTEL KLEPTOMANIACS.

Presumably Rich Guests Who Appropriate Other People's Property.

I was much struck with the habits of kleptomania common to some of the presumably rich visitors who engaged expensive suits of rooms and even paid their bills. After the departure of these guests the bed would be found minus the satin or silk coverlet, while towels and pillowslips were also very often removed.

On one occasion a gentleman engaged a double room for one night only, and the following morning the maid, knowing of his departure, made up the bed with fresh linen for the next occupant. However, the visitor had evidently returned to his room after breakfast, deliberately taken the slips off the pillows and packed them with his luggage, for on entering the room shortly after I found the bed made up, but no slips. I happened to know that the maid had certainly put fresh ones on when she made up the bed. What that gentleman could want with these two pillowslips is difficult to understand.

Of course candles, matches and soap (supplied gratis) are commonly removed, and even the sheets on the beds are not spared. Once a large double sheet was cut into pieces, the visitor evidently requiring sufficient linen for a petticoat or lining to a skirt, judging from the shape of the pieces left. The hotel sheet was no doubt the nearest thing available, so it was taken to save time and trouble, and the pieces left were found carefully rolled up and thrown into a cupboard outside the room which was only used by the maids and strictly private. Needless to say, before the remains of the sheet were found the visitors had departed, leaving no address.—Chambers' Journal.

The Colors of Eels.

The eel is very unpopular with many people; but, like many unpopular things, he improves with acquaintance. In form he is long, slender and graceful, in color dark green above and yellowish white below. Many believe that there are two distinct varieties, the salt and the fresh water eel, but I am inclined to think that, like all other fishes, the eel partakes much of the nature of his surroundings. A long summer vacation in a pond or brook renders him darker in color, and daily feasting on landlocked delicacies renders him more corpulent.

Just so codfish take on the color of their habitat, gray when on muddy bottom, bright red when living among kelps and gay colored marine plants. I believe, too, that the eel often forgets to return to salt water, but never breeds elsewhere, for I have never seen baby eels in brooks or ponds. I have known them to be taken every month in the year in the same localities. Some say that half the eels spend the winter in fresh water, coming down in the spring, and that the other half go up for the summer.

Not Given to Squandering.

Justice—You say that you doubt the statement of the previous witness that the defendant squandered his inheritance. Please give the reason for your doubt.

Witness—I tried three or four times to get him to visit a church fair, but it was useless. He always smiled and informed me that he was not born yesterday.—Boston Transcript.

The Chinese are not entirely clothed in cotton. The ordinary annual crop of silk in China is estimated at about 21,000,000 pounds, of which over 60 per cent is consumed in the country where it is produced.

The key to the Bastile is now hanging on the wall in the hall at the old home of Washington at Mount Vernon. It was given to Washington by Lafayette.

Doing the Glazier a Kindness.

A traveling tinker out of work bemoaned his hard luck to a sympathetic glazier.

"I'll soon put that right for you," said the glazier. "Just come up to that big hotel over there in half an hour's time, and you'll find work."

Accordingly the tinker made his appearance at the appointed time and found himself in great request, as all the good wife's pots and pans had mysteriously sprung leaks.

Needless to say the glazier had slyly operated on them to provide a job for his acquaintance.

A happy thought striking him, he determined to repay the glazier's kindness, and, arming himself with stones, he speedily smashed every window in the house.

Returning, he intimated to his friend the service he had rendered him, but was amazed to see the man of glass become convulsed with rage.

"Great Scott, man," shouted the latter, "you've ruined me! I repair the windows of that school by yearly contract!"—London Answers.

THE SOLDIER BOYS ARE AT THE FRONT

Not only in active service but in popular interest. The time is opportune for a fascinating story of soldier life. We have arranged for it and the first chapters will appear in these columns soon. The title is

Ray's Recruit

It is by Captain Charles King, U. S. A. That is sufficient to say of its literary merit. The recruit is a lovely girl.

Beating an Avalanche.

One of the most exciting Alpine adventures on record was Mr. Tuckett's race with an avalanche on the Eiger glacier in 1871. He was ascending the glacier with two friends and a guide. Says Travel:

The glacier sloped somewhat steeply, and on the upper part, above the climbers, a mass of loose, freshly fallen snow had collected. Suddenly the travelers heard a thundering noise and perceived a huge mass of snow and ice sliding down toward them. They could only try to reach the rocks at the side of the glacier, hoping to do so before the avalanche should sweep them away. Through the knee deep snow they ran for their lives.

"I remember," said Mr. Tuckett, "being struck with the idea that it seemed as if the avalanche were sure of its prey and wished to play with us for awhile. At one moment it let us imagine that we had gained on it, and the next, with mere wantonness of vindictive power, it suddenly rolled out a vast volume of grinding blocks and whirling snow, as if to show us that it could outflank us any moment it chose.

"Nearer and nearer it came, its front a mighty wave about to break. It aimed straight at us, swift, deadly, implacable. The next instant we saw no more. A wild confusion of whirling snow and fragments of ice, a frozen cloud, swept over us, entirely concealing us from one another. But still we were untouched, and still we ran.

"Another half second, and the mist parted. There lay the body of the monster, whose head was still careering away at lightning speed far below us, motionless, rigid, harmless."

Rather Outspoken.

"When a man in the west likes not another," said a British Columbia man, "he is in no way disposed to hide that fact under a bushel basket or to conceal it from either the gentleman disliked in particular or the rest of the community in general.

"I remember an example of this trait that came under my notice some years ago in Idaho. A certain old fellow named Haas ran a paper there, and he and Judge Buck, the judge who rendered the celebrated decision in the famous 'Poor Man' Tiger litigation, were sworn enemies. Another old timer named Cheney disliked Haas and Buck and had it in for them both.

"One night at Wallace a dinner was given, at which Buck, Haas and Cheney were present, and at a late stage in the proceedings Cheney was called upon for a speech. I don't remember the topic he chose or how he brought it in, but when he got through Cheney left in the minds of his hearers no manner of doubt as to how he felt toward the other two.

"'Gentlemen,' said Cheney as he hung unsteadily to the end of the table, for the wine had been passing freely, 'old man Haas says Judge Buck is a perjurer and a blackmailer, and Judge Buck says old man Haas is a horse thief and a liar. As both the gentlemen are extremely well acquainted with each other and should know whereof they speak, I do not feel called upon to dispute either statement.'

"And then he sat down amid tumultuous applause."—New York Tribune.

A Cat's Extraordinary Leap.

In the latter part of 1880, at a time when the Washington monument had reached a height of 160 feet, an adventurous and patriotic cat ascended the interior of the shaft by means of the ropes and tubing. When the workmen arrived at the upper landing the next morning and began to prepare for the day's work, pussy took fright and, springing to the outer edge, took a "header" of 160 feet to the hard earth below. In the descent, which was watched closely by twoscore of men, the cat spread herself out like a flying squirrel and alighted on all fours. After turning over on the soil a few times in a dazed manner she prepared to leave the grounds.

She had got almost beyond the shadow of the monument when a dog belonging to one of the workmen pounced upon her and killed her, she, of course, not being in her best running trim after performing such an extraordinary feat One of the men procured the body of the dead feline, smoothed out her silky coat and turned the remains over to a representative of the Smithsonian institution, who mounted the skin and placed it under a glass case. The label on the case tells this wonderful story in a few words: "This cat on Sept. 23, 1880, jumped from the top of Washington's monument and lived."

'Tis Easy to Feel Good.

Adrian suffered a serious loss of population Friday, when Clint Williams took his celebrated trick bear, Fannie, to Detroit, where she is now located in Wonderland and would undoubtedly be pleased to meet all her old friends. Fannie is twenty-four years old, and for fifteen years Mr. Williams and the animal traveled about the country giving exhibitions. For the past four years she has been enjoying life in Mr Williams' barn, finally becoming so ugly it was deemed advisable to get rid of her. "Pop" Wiggins, owner of Wonderland, had long wanted the bear for exhibition purposes, and it was finally decided to make him a present of the animal, which was taken there Friday, her master accompanying her.—Adrian Times

ROUND ABOUT US.

Chas. Irish, of Adrian, Wednesday saved the life of a little girl by smothering flames which enveloped her. Friday night he was a little tipsy and on his way home, fell across the rails of the Lima Northern at Winter street. A Miss Adams who lives near, saw him fall; she called a neighbor and together they pulled him off the track just in time to escape a freight which went thundering past.—Blissfield Advance.

Chicken thieves are doing a lively business in Palmyra. The thieves are partial to Plymouth Rocks, and whenever they can find a flock of this variety of fowls, they go in and appropriate the whole "bunch" to their own use, and don't even return the feathers to the owners. Clothes lines are also being stripped by thieves in that locality. Sheriff Shephard is looking after the matter and will make a big effort to bring the guilty parties to justice.—Hudson Gazette.

A twelve-year old son of Lieut J. O. Green, of [illegible]dale, is getting a reputation for [illegible] of adventure. A few weeks ago he climbed twenty feet up a telegraph pole and then letting go with one hand, raised his cap to some girls who were passing. But his gallantry caused him to loosen his hold, and he fell to the ground and was unconscious twelve hours. Last week he was riding on the pilot of an engine and jumped off but was drawn back and had an arm and leg broken.—Hudson Post.

Humorous items are published in some of our exchanges concerning a recent business transaction in Addison. John O'Dell purchased a photograph gallery and converted it into a milk house. Some of the scribes suggest that the gallery be used to take a picture of John doing the milking act, others that a picture of the typical milkman operating the pump would be suggestive. The latter would be slanderous, for those who know John best are certain that he would never use water as an adulterant.—Hudson Post.

The Journeys of a Magazine.

Probably no other magazines are read by so many people as the copies of The Ladies' Home Journal that go to a Connecticut lady. After reading each number she forwards it to a sister in Scotland, where it is read by the household and neighbors, and carefully laid away till the end of the year. The twelve copies are then given to the stewardess of a Shetland Island steamer, who retains them until read by her and all the crew. Then they are left at a remote Shetland Island town, where they serve as a sort of circulating library, passing from house to house for a year or more, until they are literally worn out. In its journeys each magazine finds its way into scores of homes and is eagerly scanned by hundreds of eyes.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.

WHEN PERIL COMES.

Sudden and Extreme Danger the Test of True Courage.

It is when the unexpected happens that fatalism proves how fragile a prop it is, after all, for human courage. The soldier or the sailor can say to himself when he knows that he must take a supreme risk in battle or in a storm: "I am powerless against the fate which was decreed for me from the beginning of the world. If my time has come, I cannot help it; if not, all the forces of earth and sky and ocean cannot prevail to harm me." But when without an instant's warning a rock crashes through a ship's bottom and the waters rush into the gap, when confusion seizes the entire company aboard, when the fog is too thick for the captain to be seen or the roar of the sea drowns the sound of his orders a new test is applied. Then it is that the courage which rests on nothing firmer than a negation gives way, and in his greed to save his own life the stoic becomes as a madman.

There have been steamship disasters in which men of humble station, of all colors and faiths, have shown the finest quality of heroism, and there have been those in which the common sailors, all whites and Europeans, have earned eternal disgrace by their cowardice. The point we are making is not that it is possible to draw a hard and fast line between one religion and another or one race and another in the matter of bravery, but that the affirmative sense of responsibility for one's own acts, of the difference between right and wrong, between nobility and ignominy and of the grandeur of duty well done at the sacrifice of self, is a far surer dependence in the presence of sudden peril than all the stoical philosophers ever worked out by the mind of man.—Washington Post.

SYBARITES IN THE COLD.

Luxury as It Is Indulged In by the Arctic Traders.

So much has been written of the Eskimo ("husky") dogs and dog sleds of the north that they may well be mentioned here if only to show the idea of luxury which many of the factors and traders of the Hudson Bay company entertain. Seated or rather reclining in his cariole, swathed in furs, he is driven by an engage on foot who dashes along at a great pace. The cariole is painted gaudily. There are Russian bells on the collars of each of the long span of dogs, while the harness is a mass of beadwork and tassels.

No longer when he lodges at night at a post does he partake solely of the simpler fare it can furnish, nor even when he camps out in the wilderness must he be content with what his gun can bring down in addition to the pemmican he carries. For now, either under the cariole seat or in an additional sled behind, there is found a good supply of canned meats and vegetables, products of Chicago and Ontario, and, moreover, his driver is his cook. In the open a fire will be deftly kindled, tea will be made, bacon and even eggs will be fried, and hot "flapjacks," that delectable fritter of the bush, half an inch thick and swimming in grease and molasses will tickle the factor's palate.

At night, enveloped in his furs and maybe reposing on a hastily constructed bed of balsam boughs, the last vision before his eyes close upon the scenes of dreamland will be the scintillating splendors of the aurora borealis, whose purpling waves alternate with bars of vivid light so rapidly and in such volume as to make the beholder almost believe that nature speaks, mauger the silence, all penetrating, all pervading.—Cornhill Magazine.

The "Picket."

The picket was generally inflicted on cavalry and artillerymen and was a singularly brutal bit of torture. A long post, near which stood a stool, was driven into the ground. The delinquent was ordered to mount the stool, and his right hand was fastened to a hook in the post by a noose, drawn up as high as it could be stretched, round his wrist. A stump the height of the stool, with its end cut to a round and blunt point, was also driven into the earth close to the post. Then the stool was taken away, and the sufferer had nothing to rest his bare feet upon but the stump, "which, though it did not usually break the skin," says Captain Grose, "put him in great torture, his only means of relief being by resting his weight on his wrist, the pain of which soon became intolerable." One can very well believe him, especially when he makes the addition that a man was not infrequently left to stand in this position for half an hour, although the orthodox period of endurance was 15 minutes.—London Graphic.

Marconi Objected.

There was a little dinner once given to William Marconi, of which one incident is still remembered by some of the guests. An oratorical member of the company, growing enthusiastic over a toast to the inventor of wireless telegraphy, made this climax to his peroration: "Gentlemen, I give you Marconi, the Franklin, the Faraday and the Helmholtz of Italy." When the toast had been drunk, the distinguished guest thanked the party for the honor and added, "But I must protest against the action of the preceding speaker in making me triplets."—Leslie's Monthly.

Earthquakes.

In 1881 the isles of Ischia and Scio suffered terribly from an earthquake, losing about 4,000 to 5,000 people. Ischia was again visited in 1883, but did not get off as easily as before, coming out of the wreck with 10,000 dead and missing. The great calamity of the nineteenth century was the great convulsion in Java in 1883, which is said to have killed not less than 120,000 persons.

The French Cavalry at Sedan.

Both banks of the Givonne were in German hands; so was Balan, a small village nearer to Sedan than Bazeilles, and soon after 1 o'clock no fewer than 426 German guns were hailing shells into the French army, which stood in close formations within a space measuring less than two miles in breadth or depth. Out of this terrible cauldron of defeated troops about this time rode the French cavalry in a heroic endeavor to turn the fortunes of the day and retrieve the honor of France.

General Margueritte, called by some "the star of his arm," was struck in the face by a bullet while riding out to reconnoiter the ground before he charged. He now handed over the cavalry command to De Gallifet, who for the second time on that tremendous day led the flower of French cavalry against the enemy and for the space of half an hour charged the German ranks again and again on the hillsides north of Sedan.

But the courage of the gallant horsemen was all in vain. The arme blanche was unequally matched against the breechloading rifle held in steady hands, and no effort of the French cavalry could withstand the slowly

LITERARY NOTES.

In the Modern Culture magazine for May Charles W. Chesnutt contributes a very note-worthy article on "Superstitions and Folks-Lore of the South," a subject which he has made peculiarly his own. "George Eliot's Own Love Story" is presented in a delicate way by Flora McDonald Williams. "Beyond the Pale" reaches its conclusion in this number and holds the reader's interest to the end.

⁂

Sir Thomas Lipton, K. C. V. O., has written especially for The Saturday Evening Post of May 11 an article on The Sports that Make the Man. He places yachting high on the list and gives some interesting anecdotes of his own career as an amateur yachtsman. Sir Thomas is hopeful, if not confident, of "lifting" the America's Cup next autumn.

⁂

A powerful chapter from one of the most remarkable of recorded human experiences, appears in McClure's Magazine for May—Captain Alfred Dreyfus' Own Story of his arrest, degradation and transportation to Devil's Isle. To this story is added a portion of the Diary kept by Dreyfus on the island, for his wife and referred to so often and so mysteriously in the Rennes trial, but never made public.

The book from which this remarkable document is taken, containing the story of Dreyfus' entire five years of suffering and imprisonment, is to be published by McClure, Phillips & Co. in May.

All but One Peeped In.

When a prominent picture dealer of New York starts the topic of woman's curiosity, his wife always laughs and blushes, for she knows the story that is coming.

"One day," the picture dealer begins, "I decided to close the small exhibition studio which leads from the gallery and put 'Private' on the door just for an experiment. There was an important collection of water colors by one of our best artists in the gallery. I sat at the desk just outside the entrance and presented to each lady a fresh catalogue of the paintings. When she took it, I politely requested her to leave it as she went out.

"This request was complied with in every instance, and I was enabled to notice a most interesting series of coincidences. On every catalogue save one there was in one place or another a little smear of gilding transferred to the paper from the carefully prepared knob of the door marked 'Private.'"

When the story had been accepted, with laughter, by his listeners, somebody is sure to ask, "How about the one catalogue that was undecorated?" To this query the picture dealer has one invariable answer:

"It was the catalogue carried by the young woman who afterward became my wife. She told me that the other women turned the knob merely to see if the door was locked, but she knew that sort of gilding rubbed off, and she had on light gloves."—Youth's Companion.

In Extenuation.

A little girl between 4 and 5 years of age came running in from sliding one day and exclaimed to her mother: "Oh mamma, did you see me go down? I went like thunder."

To her mother's astonished question as to whom she had heard say that the little one replied, "Well, mamma, you know you said one day 'as quick as lightning,' and it always thunders after it lightens, doesn't it?"—Boston Chris-

AFTER 20 YEARS.

A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the work of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder worker from all parts of the Union. Speaking of her experience a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jas. Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says:

"For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble, and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pains across my back extending up the right side; the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excrusiating pain, is something much more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used three boxes. I felt like a different person. I was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left. I slept well at night. I could do my housework as well as I ever could, and I give the entire credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that too prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute

Every dog has his day, and the tramp finds that nearly every day has its dog.

Fremont's Ride.

A pretty story is told of how John C. Fremont informed his wife of the joyful news of his election as senator of California in 1850. The balloting of the delegates took place in San Jose, and Mrs. Fremont was at Monterey, and as a season of heavy rains was on there was but little prospect that her keen desire to know the result would find immediate gratification. Before a blazing fire that night sat Fremont's wife, her fingers for the first time fashioning a dress for herself on the trustworthy outlines of one that had been ripped up for the purpose. Her little daughter had been put to bed, and her companions for the evening were the Australian woman who had replaced her two Indian servitors and her baby playing on the bearskin rug near the fire.

Besides the voice of the woman and an occasional chirrup from the baby she heard nothing but the storm without till the door opened and a man, dripping with rain, stood on the threshold and asked in consideration of his sorry plight if he might enter. It was Fremont. He had torn himself away from his idolizing followers and ridden out into the darkness and storm to tell his wife, 70 miles away, that he had been elected to the United States senate. Though it was late in the night when he reached Monterey, he was in the saddle again before dawn and on his way back to San Jose, making in all a ride of 140 miles.—Argonaut.

The Red Flag.

The red button and the red flag have been the emblem of labor and revolution for more than 3,000 years. In the ancient world the favorite colors of the aristocracy were white and azure blue, while red was plebeian. Minerva and Ceres, the goddesses of labor and agriculture, were always represented as dressed in flaming red, and the banners of the Greek and Roman trade unions were of the same color. The red flag nowhere in antiquity meant ferocity and slaughter, but rather typified the fact that all men, whether slaves or masters, had in their veins the same blood and in their nature the same humanity.

But in the frequent servile wars of Italy and Greece the red flag gradually became the emblem not of labor, but of revolt. At one time when the rebellious slaves and gladiators under Spartacus defeated three Roman armies the red flag was on the point of supplanting the eagle in the imperial city itself. It is related that the labor soldiers were so fanatically devoted to their flag that it was the custom of their generals when in battle to hurl it far into the enemy's ranks and so compel its devotees to rush forward and recover it.—New York Post.

A Bad Judge.

Some years ago King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, was a guest at a country house in England, and, picking up a sporting paper in the billiard room one morning, was soon deep in its contents. A clergyman, also a guest, noticed this, and, sidling up, asked in a tone that was meant to carry reproof, "Is your royal highness really interested in that paper?"

The prince glanced around. "I never read anything I do not feel interested in," he remarked.

The clergyman, though, would not be denied. "Do you know, your royal highness, that one of my friends has lost hundreds of pounds by betting on horse racing and has never won anything?" he asked.

"Well," said the prince as he turned to another column, "he must have been a very bad judge of horseflesh."

"Save Me From My Friends."

This saying is commonly attributed to Voltaire, who at Ferney when pestered by professions of insincere friendship said, "I pray God to deliver me from my friends; I will defend myself from my enemies."

The thought, however, is attributed by the French to Marshal Villars, while Kant discovers it in an Italian proverb, and a German collection of proverbial wisdom gives it in a modified form. Antigonus, one of the generals of Alexander the Great, offered sacrifice that the gods might protect him from his friends and at the same time declaring he could look after his enemies himself. Churchill has something of the idea in the lines:

> Greatly his foes he dreads, but most his friends;
> He hurts the most who lavishly commends.

The Rector's Prophecy.

A party of gentlemen, including Professor Bailey and Rector Roberts, a divine widely celebrated for his wit and the audacity of his puns, were crossing the campus of a well known university.

The reverend gentleman, commenting on the fact of his recent elevation to the greater dignity and the assumption of the more resounding title of a canon of the church, exclaimed, "And now that I am a canon I suppose I shall be a bigger bore than ever."

Early Silk Weavers.

Among the encouragements offered to silk weavers during the first century of the existence of this industry in Lyons was exemption from military service and taxation. So rapid was its development that in 1650 the weavers numbered 18,000, or 60,000 with affiliated pursuits.

A Legend of the Salty Sea.

There are hundreds of queer myths and traditions given to account for the fact that the sea is salt. The Arabs say that when the [illegible]rst pair sinned they were living in a b[illegible]autiful garden on a tract of land joine[illegible] to a mainland by a narrow neck or is[illegible]mus. When it became known to th[illegible] Holy One that his people had sinned he went to the garden for the purpose of driving them out and across the narrow neck of land into the patch of thorns and brambles on the other side. Anticipating what would be the consequence of their heinous crime, they had prepared to leave their beautiful garden and had actually gone so far as to send the children and goats across into the thicket.

When the Holy One appeared on the scene, the first pa[illegible] started to run, but the woman looked back. For this the man cursed her and for such a crime was almost immed[illegible]ately turned into a block of salt. Comp[illegible]re with Genesis xix, 26. The woman, [illegible]ore forgiving than her husband, stoo[illegible]ed to pick up the shapeless mass of salt, when immediately the narrow [illegible]eck of land began to crack and brea[illegible]. As she touched what had once bee[illegible] her companion she, too, was turned to [illegible]lt just as the neck of the land sank a[illegible]d the waters rushed through. From [illegible]hat day to this, the Arabs say, all the waters of the ocean have rushed throug[illegible] that narrow channel at least once [illegible] year, constantly wearing away the salt of what was once our first parents, yet the bulk of the two salty objects is not diminished in the least.

How General Butler Freed a Man.

General Butler's gift for springing out and taking advantage of every technicality was fully illustrated in the famous case of a respectably connected man in Boston, who, being affected with a mania for stealing, was brought to trial on four indictments. General Butler was the prisoner's counsel. If the prisoner was convicted on all four indictments, he would be liable to imprisonment for 60 years. As the court was assembling General Butler agreed with the counsel for the prosecution that three indictments should be quashed on condition that the prisoner should plead guilty to the one which charged the theft of the greatest amount.

The prisoner, to his amazement, was ordered by his counsel to plead guilty. "Say guilty, sir," said the general sternly. The man obeyed, and the other three indictments were not pressed. But when the counsel for the prosecution moved for sentence General Butler pointed out a fatal flaw, manifest to every one when attention was called to it. In ten minutes the astonished prisoner was a free man. It is said that the court laughed at the ruse, the cleverness of which it was impossible not to admire.

Slandering the Cook.

Here is something that a woman who knows says is a sure diagnosis of the status of the cook. If you have a good cook, you may be more or less sure that she will look too frequently upon the wine when it is red. It is an unfortunate fact, but if the cook is less than a $40 cook as little annoyance as possible may be expected from this weakness. Possibly it will never make itself manifest enough to be known above stairs. But if the cook has risen higher in the social scale of cooks than $40, then look out. A cook who is rated at over $40 may be expected to smash things.

If one chances to make a morning call at the house of a friend and discovers the servants crowded up stairs, frightened and trembling, while from below come the sounds of ironware skating across the kitchen and pottery crashing against the wall and between times the voice of the masculine head of the family gently expostulating or commanding in would be stern tones, then it may be known that that household has reached the dignity of a $50 or $60 cook.—New York Times.

Wedding Cake Boxes.

Great importance is always attached to the bride's cake on the occasion of a wedding, and it is usually accorded a distinct place of honor in the marriage festivities, says Woman's Life. The bride herself takes no small amount of interest in this emblem of her nuptials, and undoubtedly keenly appreciates the task of cutting up the cake a day or two after the wedding ceremony and dispatching small portions in the fancy pasteboard boxes with the orthodox silver edged card to her friends and relatives.

Usually these boxes are of a wedgelike shape, chiefly because the cake is generally so cut. Fashion, however, decrees that wedge shaped wedding cake boxes are now no longer considered pretty and up to date. They should be of a much more elaborate character than hitherto, and combinations of initials, neat ways of tying the fancy ribbons and the beauty and finish of the box itself are all taken into consideration with the idea of making it as artistic and smart as possible.

One of the most charming and dainty designs is the heart shaped box, which has become very popular of late. Not only is it used to serve the purpose of a receptacle for a portion of the wedding cake, but also to convey to the recipient the delicate hint that the marriage is a perfect "love match." This box is exquisitely made, covered and lined with white satin, with a pretty monogram composed of the initials of the Christian names of the bride and bridegroom embossed in the upper left hand corner in gold.

The half inch ribbon of satin to match is tied in such a manner that the pointed end of the box carries the ribbon as smoothly between its groove edges as at any other point.

Another very pretty design is a square box, covered with heavy white watered silk, with a padded top and lined with soft white plush. The usual monogram, either in gold or silver letters, is not only embossed in the middle of the cover, but is also repeated on the underside of the box. Similarly decorated boxes also look very charming in the oblong shape. Either are adorned outside with bows of ribbon, because when filled with cake they are fitted into a white box ca ready for dispatching to the intended recipient.

The Man and the Rope.

A Chinaman who had been condemned to wear the cangue, or wooden collar, was seen by some of his friends.

"What have you been doing," they asked, "to deserve this?"

"And are you to be punished thus severely," they asked, "for merely picking up an end of rope?"

"Well," answered the man, "the fact is there was a bullock tied to the other end."—H. A. Giles' "History of Chinese Literature."

Twice a year, in the first week in April and October, the Chinese carry food to their dead.

Poison Proof Animals.

Neither differences of organization in animals nor in the constitution of the poisonous substance generally afford any clew for interpreting an exceptional want of effect. Unaccountable is the immunity of rabbits against belladonna leaves (Atropa belladonna, deadly nightshade). You may feed them with belladonna for weeks without observing the least toxic symptoms. The meat of such animals, however, proves poisonous to any one who eats it, producing the same symptoms as the plant.

Pigeons and various other herbivora are also to some degree safe from the effects of this poison, while in warm blooded carnivora it causes paralysis and asphyxia. In frogs the effect is a different one, consisting of spasms. The meat of goats which had fed on hemlock has sometimes occasioned poisonous effects. Chickens are nearly hardy against nux vomica and the extremely dangerous alkaloid, strychnine, contained in it, while in the smallest amount it is a fatal poison to rodents.

More remarkable yet in this respect is the immunity of Cholœpus hoffmanni, a kind of sloth living on the island of Ceylon, which, when given ten grains of strychnine, was not much affected. Pigeons are possessed of high immunity from morphine, the chief alkaloid of opium, as well as from belladonna. Eight grains were required to kill a pigeon, not much less than the mortal dose for a man. Cats are extremely sensitive to foxglove (Digitalis purpurea), which on the contrary may be given to rabbits and various birds in pretty large doses.

Fined For Death on Board.

"The only place, as far as law is concerned, where it costs money to die from natural causes is aboard a steamship," remarked a vessel owner. "The purpose of the law was excellent enough. There was a time when emigrants were being brought to this country in very large numbers, or 'by the shipload,' as it was termed. There is no doubt that there was crowding in the ships that brought them, and to prevent this a law was passed imposing upon the ship a fine of $10 for every death that occurred during the passage from natural causes of persons over 8 years of age. This put a stop to overcrowding, or, at least, it is supposed that it did, which is about the same thing. Ships do not fancy having to pay fines of this kind.

"Of course, in comparison with the great army of persons who are brought across the ocean from month to month, there are very few deaths, for the statisticians have been kind enough to show beyond a doubt that the steamship is the safest means of transportation in existence, but, just the same, there are a considerable number in the course of a year."—Washington Star.

Epigrams In Fiction.

I always pray that I may never outlive my illusions or my front teeth, though all else may fail me.

Admiration is like porridge—awfully stodging, but you get hungry again almost as soon as you've eaten it.

A good nose is an abiding resting place for vanity. You know that it will outlast your time and that age cannot wither nor custom stale its satisfactory proportions.

The quality of mercy should not be measured out by teaspoonfuls in a medicine glass, but should be sent round in a watering cart by the county council.

They've no sense, men haven't. The very best of them don't properly know the difference between their souls and their stomachs, and they fancy that they are a-wrestling with their doubts when really it is their dinners that are a-wrestling with them.

It is the duty of all women to look happy—the married ones to show that they don't wish they weren't married and the unmarried ones to show that they don't wish they were.—New York Telegram.

Of Captain King's Story

RAY'S RECRUIT

Ray was a gallant soldier, a noble fellow. How he came to win this fair girl as a recruit is a captivating narrative told in Captain King's best style. Army stories should be unusually popular just now. This is a good one and we have purchased the serial rights.

The First Chapters Will Appear in This Paper Soon

Life Aboard an Arctic Boat.

The days and weeks pass without our taking any account of them. We get up at 6:30 in the morning. At 7 we feed the dogs. At 8 we have breakfast, and at 12 we dine. Then we work till 6:30, when we have supper, after which we smoke and play cards or chess till bedtime. It is not at all cold. Rarely does the thermometer descend below zero. Yesterday the sun shone gloriously. The ice reflected it with a blinding glare and in brilliant colors.

The ship has withstood all the assaults of the ice. It is splendid to see how it breaks up ice that is sometimes three or four feet thick. At other times, when it is even thicker, the ship is rushed against it at full steam. The shock splits and breaks it very often for a distance of 40 or 50 yards. The Duke of Abruzzi is always on the bridge and loses no opportunity of getting ahead. Sometimes he does not even come down to his meals. Whenever we get the smallest opening, he orders us to go on, and we are glad of it, because the more we advance at the present time the less we shall have to do next year.—Leslie's Monthly.

An English Woman's Opinion.

Mrs. Alec Tweedie, a prominent English woman of letters, who has been visiting the United States, has been writing home her impressions of the country.

Every one, she says, does not chew gum in the States, as is commonly supposed, but a great number of people do, and it is really remarkable to an onlooker to watch a crowd of persons whose jaws are laboriously working up and down, just as a cow chews her cud. What a funny custom it is and one which makes it necessary to lift one's skirts on high when walking in the streets! If the gum habit and its results are objectionable, how delightful are the American women! They are bright, clever and amusing, well dressed, "too well dressed," Max O'Rell says, but always smart and entertaining.

The American man works from early morn to dewy eve making money "down town," and his wife spends it for him "up town." The men encourage their wives to dress well, and certainly the result is charming, added to which they are intellectually as smart and well groomed as they are in their gowns. They dress plainly in the streets, the exigency of necessity. Cabs cost a fortune, and the only mode of transport is the car. It is high to jump up or down, it barely waits a second, the passenger often has to stand, and the only kind of garment suitable is a plain tailor made. The American has realized the fact and adopted the habit. More than that, long skirts are in the way, and on wet days or in the morning she sensibly wears quite a short one, like a short bicycle skirt, even in the city. The skirt is most practical and neat, but, alas, her boots are not in keeping. Thin shoes, with Louis Quinze heels, often appear below the business-like skirt.

Bernhardt's Influence.

When considering the wonderful things which the dying century bequeathed to the new, it might be well to bear in mind Sarah Bernhardt.

The lady is 55 years old.

She has a son who is over 30.

She looks upon the stage the slender girl whose part she portrays, the boy whose garb she assumes.

Not Maude Adams herself in "L'Aiglon" looks more the boy of 20 than did Sarah Bernhardt, grandmother as she is, when she produced the play in Paris.

Every woman who dresses in the mode anywhere on this oblate spheroid follows styles which Sarah Bernhardt has set, not those set by any younger woman, by any princess or great women of the aristocracy.

In "L'Aiglon" Bernhardt has convinced women that graceful, sinuous

Nature's Crowning Work.

As for the woman, she found the chief wonders of creation not in the culminating vertebrate, but in the lowest orders of life.

White Wax.

The white wax ex[illegible] from China is made by the curi[illegible]ethod of using insects in its pro[illegible]on. These insects are found in [illegible]own pea shaped excrescences or ga[illegible] attached to an evergreen tree called the "insect tree." The galls are gathered in May and carried in headlong flight to the market towns by bearers, who travel at night so that the heat may not force the insects to emerge during the journey.

They are then placed on the "wax tree," which is a stump varying from 3 to 12 feet in height, with numerous branches rising from the top, similar to the pollard willow.

The wax insects are made into small packets of 20 or 30 galls, which are inclosed in a leaf of the wood oil tree, fastened together with rice straw. These packets are suspended close to the branches under which they hang. On emerging from the galls the insects creep rapidly up the branches, to which they attach themselves and begin forming a coating of wax that in about three months attains a thickness of almost a quarter of an inch.

The branches are then cut off, and after removing as much of the wax as possible by hand they are put in a kettle of hot water, when the remaining wax floats on the surface and the insects finish their term of usefulness by going to the bottom.

Formation of Dew.

Ground a little below the surface is always warmer than the air above it. So long as the surface of the ground is above the dew point vapor must rise and pass from the earth into the air.

The moist air so formed will mingle with the air above it, and its moisture will be condensed, forming dew wherever it comes in contact with a surface cooled below the dew point. In fact, dew rises from the ground.

But how is the dew formed on bodies high up in the air?

Dew does not rise in particles, as it was once considered to fall in particles like fine rain. It rises in vapor. Some is caught by what is on the surface of the earth, but the rest ascends in vapor form until it comes in contact with a much colder surface to condense it into moisture.

The vapor does now flow upward in a uniform stream, but is mixed in the air by eddies and wind currents and carried to bodies far from where it rose. In fact, dew may be deposited, even though the country for many miles all around be dry and incapable of yielding any vapor. In such cases the supply of vapor to form that dew would depend on the evaporation of the dew and on what was wafted over by the winds.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

In the days of 'wild cat' money in the West, the Ames shovels were used as currency. They were as stable as gold—their price did not vary a cent in twenty years. The very name of Oliver Ames & Son, was a synonym for honesty. It was current all over the world.

On the same principle Benson's Porous Plaster is the universal standard external remedy. To say it is a "good" plaster does not describe it; it is the best possible plaster. For every disease in which an external remedy is available, Benson's Plaster is used almost as a matter of course.

Benson's Plaster quickly relieves and cures where other modes of treatment are either exasperatingly slow or have no good effect whatever. Coughs, colds, lumbago, kidney trouble, rheumatism, lame back, etc., are at once benefited and soon cured.

Capsicum, Strengthening and Belladonna plasters have none of the curative virtues of Benson's. More than 5,000 physicians and druggists have commended Benson's Plaster as a remedy in which the public may have implicit confidence; while, in a comparative test with other plasters, Benson's has received fifty-five highest awards. Beware of substitutes and cheap imitations.

PALE WOMEN

A Bloodless Face Indicates Trouble.

Watery Blood a Menace to Health.

WE KNOW HOW PALE PEOPLE CAN GET RICH RED BLOOD.

COME AND LET US TELL YOU ABOUT VINOL.

When blood is watery and thin, or, as doctors would say, lacks red blood corpuscles, it is a sign that much is radically wrong.

We would advise everyone who has such symptoms to start at once to take a proper remedy to overcome this trouble.

That remedy is Vinol, the greatest and most modern tonic and rebuilder.

Vinol owes its virtue to the fact that it contains in a highly concentrated state the active curative principles extracted from cods' livers, the same elements that have made cod-liver oil famous for wasting diseases.

None of the vile-smelling obnoxious grease that characterizes cod-liver oil and frequently makes it an impossible remedy for those who should take it, is found in Vinol.

We could relate many instances where Vinol has done good and restored the roses of health to the pale cheeks of the sufferer.

"For several months I suffered lassitude and tired all the time. Also a sinking feeling in my stomach, which nothing would relieve, and I was pale and weak. As an experiment I tried Vinol and if I wrote pages I could not tell all it has done for me."—MRS. A. K. LA PRUSCH, Amesbury, Mass.

Because we know Vinol so well, and because we know so surely what it will do, and how it will accomplish the good it does in a scientific way, we unreservedly endorse and recommend it, and in every instance guarantee to refund to any one what they pay us for Vinol if they do not find it entirely satisfactory.

Great Number of Dead and Injured Will Not Be Known Until the List of Employes of the Works Are Compared With Survivors.

Frankfort, Germany, April 26.—The boilers of the Griesheim Electro-Chemical Works, near Griesheim, exploded yesterday afternoon and the factory caught fire. Fifty persons are reported to have been killed and 140 injured. The three boilers of the works exploded. The explosion was audible here. The Frankfort engines and ambulances have gone to the scene of the disaster.

The number of dead and injured is estimated at 150, but cannot be determined until the list of employes of the chemical works can be compared with the survivors. The fire continues to burn, although the greater part of the Frankfort fire department and the troops are trying to prevent its spread to the buildings outside of the fire zone. Hospitals have been improvised in the vicinity. The flames apparently originated by the blowing up of vats of chemicals in the explosive department of the works at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. They spread with frightful speed to the adjacent buildings and then over the river main to Schwanheim. When a second explosion took place, the fumes and masses of burning chemicals made it impossible to stay in the vicinity. The inhabitants of Griesheim were ordered to leave their village, which they did, fleeing to Frankfort.

The last explosion occurred at 7:30 p. m., and when it was asserted that no further danger was anticipated the inhabitants were allowed to return to their homes. At half-past 8 the fire was still burning in the center, and the work of extricating the bodies from the debris was being carried on by torchlight, gaslight not being obtainable.

All railway traffic with Frankfort was stopped during the fire, except for trains carrying the injured, but it has since been resumed.

Will Be Hanged.

Washington, April 26.—Copies of general orders emanating from the division of the Philippines contained the records of several court-martials of Filipinos charged with murder and arson. Probably the one of most interest is a trial of three natives charged with the murder of Private Eugene S. Anderson, Company E, Sixteenth United States infantry. Anderson and another soldier constituted a guard for a casco that stopped near the town of Cabagan Nuevo, and Anderson went ashore to gather wood. He was seen to enter a nearby copse with two of the natives, who were afterward accused of his murder. He never came out alive, and circumstantial evidence proved that he was stabbed to death with a poinard. The natives when they escorted the man to his doom were conversing with him in a friendly manner and apparently were altogether peaceably disposed. They were sentenced to be hanged, and Gen. MacArthur approved the finding of the court.

A Question of Finance.

Paris, April 26.—The Courrier du Soir, which is often well informed on ministerial intentions, says that the settlement of the Chinese situation is a question of finance. The newspaper says that Russia, repeating that operation which had the greatest success, will advance China the sum required to pay the indemnities, and that French savings would provide the Russian government with the requisite funds. The European troops, except the legation garrisons, will then leave Pekin and a fresh period will begin, during which Chinese patience will strive to tire out the British and German governments in their claims regarding the opening of the ports and the customs. Russia, however, will retain Manchuria as a pledge for the loan.

Fears for the Sealing Fleet.

St. Johns, N. F., April 26.—It is feared that the sealing steamer Virginia Lake, with 270 men on board, may be frozen in amid the ice floes in White bay on the northern coast of Newfoundland for the next six weeks. The Arctic ice fields are now packing in upon the floes, which have enclosed her for the past month. A sister ship of the Virginia Lake, the Kite, with 150 men on board, is similarly situated in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The owners are apprehensive that both ships may be driven ashore.

Big Contract Awarded.

New York, April 26.—Bids were received and opened for the steel structure of the new East River bridge. The contract will be awarded to the Pennsylvania Steel Co. of Philadelphia, which bid $1,123,400. The King Bridge Co. of Cleveland, O., bid $1,150,500, and the Eastern Tube Co. offered to do the work for $1,264,000. The bridge will be completed in about 20 months.

Was Warmly Welcomed.

Sydney, N. S. W., April 26.—The flagship Brooklyn, with Admiral Remey on board, which arrived here yesterday en route for Melbourne, where she will participate in the exercises at the opening of the first federal parliament, from May 6 to May 8, was warmly welcomed when she entered the harbor and cheered by the crews of the other warships present.

Fire Under Control.

London, April 26.—The fire on British steamer Ontario, Capt. Brenton, from Hull April 18 for Boston, which returned yesterday to Queenstown on fire, is now under control.

MET A HORRIBLE DEATH.

Well Known Animal Trainer Killed By An Elephant.

Peru, Ind., April 26.—Henry Huffman, well-known animal trainer, with the Wallace shows, met a horrible death here yesterday, being killed by "Big Charley," a monster elephant, while the animal was bathing in the Mississinewa river. "Big Charley" wound his trunk about Keeper Huffman and hurled him far into the stream. The man was uninjured and when he returned he said: "Why, Charley, I didn't think that of you; aren't you ashamed of yourself." The next instant Huffman was grabbed by the big elephant and thrown to the bottom of the river, and held there by the fore foot of the animal. Then with a great roar the elephant ran away. Several showmen shot at him, with no effect. He broke down fences and roamed about in a big field, keeping everybody at a distance. Apples loaded with strychnine were thrown near him, and he ate one. An hour later he laid down and was in terrible agony. A rifle shot settled him.

"Big Charley" weighed over three tons and was valued at $10,000, and in his lifetime had killed four men. Keeper Huffman at different times was animal trainer in Fairmount park, Philadelphia, and Central park, New York city. His home was at Columbus, Ohio.

NEW AND NOVEL SPORT.

Horse Racing in Water a Foot Deep at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, April 26.—A new and novel record was established at the Newport track yesterday which will be remembered in turf history as unique. Six races were run over a track covered with water averaging a foot deep, and in some places deeper. It was accomplished without serious accident to horses or riders. When the patrons of the track arrived they were surprised to find the homestretch for about 70 yards completely inundated, and also part of the backstretch covered with water. The horsemen and jockeys were consulted on the advisability of carrying out the day's program, and by unanimous consent the card was run off. There were many exciting contests during the day and thousands cheered the riders as they rode dare-devil fashion through the lake on the home stretch to reach the wire. Not a horse wabbled until the finish in the last event, when Julius Werner and Isaac stumbled, throwing their riders into the water, but the boys were not seriously injured.

Can't Attend the Funeral.

Washington, April 26.—News of the death of Mrs. Saxton was received at the White House yesterday afternoon. Mrs. McKinley was very much attached to her aunt, but will be unable to attend the funeral, which occurs Saturday, owing to the departure of the presidential party for the western trip on Monday.

Turned Over to Chicago Police.

New York, April 26.—Count Leopold de Maville, also known as Leopold Frauquel, who was arrested in this city a few days ago on a request from Chicago, where he was indicted for bigamy, was yesterday turned over to the Chicago police.

U. S. Treasury Statement.

Washington, April 26.—Thursday's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $154,131,024; gold, $94,739,009.

Detroit, Mich., April 26.—John G. Neil, the old man who was badly burned at his home, 27 Garfield avenue, died yesterday afternoon.

OUR CUBAN GUESTS

Visit President McKinley and Exchange Congratulations

PATRIOTIC SPEECHES MADE

Said It Was a High Honor That Fell to the Lot of But Few Men to Have the Opportunity to Frame a Government for a Republic

Washington, April 26.—Matters of importance were not touched upon in the interview between the president and the delegation, the conversation being almost wholly formal. Senor Capote, in his address to the president, spoke of the desire of the Cubans to have the closest possible relations with the United States. He said that United States soldiers and Cubans had fought side by side, and driven Spain from the island, and the ties between the two countries were bound in blood. The relationship, therefore, between the countries always should be most amicable and closer than that which usually exists between nations. He also spoke of the gratitude which Cuba felt to the United States for the assistance rendered in her liberation.

In response the president expressed his pleasure at meeting the delegation, and through them to extend his kindest wishes to the people of the island. He said that his interest in Cuba had been very great, and he made reference to messages he had sent to congress concerning the island. Its welfare always would be the subject of his most earnest consideration. He congratulated the members of the delegation upon being members of the Cuban constitutional convention. He said it was a high honor, and it fell to the lot of but few men to have the opportunity to frame a government for a republic. Concerning the object of the delegation's visit, the president said he would confer with the secretary of war, and the secretary, having an intimate knowledge of the situation, would confer with the delegation.

The members of the Cuban constitutional committee were entertained at a state dinner given in their honor by the president at the White House last night. The guests invited to meet them were thoroughly representative of the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government, and included members of the cabinet, senators and representatives who have been prominent in the discussion of insular affairs, justices of the supreme court and officers of the army and navy.

The most important meeting of the day was a conference in Secretary Root's office lasting from 3 until 6 o'clock in the afternoon. This was the first business meeting, the others having been social and formal. Those present were the five Cuban delegates, their interpretor, Secretary Root, Gen. Wood, Assistant Secretary Sanger, Senor Gonzalez, Gen. Wood's secretary, who acted as interpreter a great portion of the time. The army officers who are acting as escort for the Cubans also were present. When the meeting adjourned no official statement was made as to the proceedings, but it can be said that the result was considered satisfactory both by the Cubans and Secretary Root. The business was not completed and the conference will reassemble this afternoon.

Echoes of the Flood.

Cincinnati, April 26.—The high water mark of the flood passed down this part of the Ohio valley earlier last night than was expected, and the stage of water became almost stationary from 6 to 10 o'clock at fractions above 59.1 feet and afterwards at 59.2 feet, when it became permanently stationary here and at upper points. The people here and for miles up the river are now preparing to avoid all possible evil effects of receding waters rather than of rising waters.

The present indications are that the manufacturers and merchants on both sides of the river will be completely relieved before Monday. With the water almost 10 feet above the danger line, there is endless inconvenience and loss on both sides of the river, and there was some distress last night.

Presented Their Scale.

Pittsburg, April 25.—Forty-two manufacturers, employing machinists who are members of the International Association of Machinists, have been sent scales which must be acted upon by May 1 or a committee of machinists will be selected to wait upon the company to investigate the cause of the delay. The scale year ends May 20. The scale presented calls for an advance of 12½ per cent in wages and a nine-hour work day. Quite a number of the manufacturers are satisfied with the scale and will probably sign without delay.

Congressman Babcock Married.

New York, April 26.—Congressman Joseph W. Babcock of Wisconsin was married at White Plains yesterday, to Mrs. Kate King of Chicago. The wedding took place at the home of Mrs. Fred A. Watkins, sister of the bride. Only relatives were present. Mr. and Mrs. Babcock will sail Saturday for Naples.

Expenditures More Than Receipts.

Shanghai, April 26.—The University Gazette prints an article giving details of China's revenue and expenditure. The figures show that the average annual revenue has been 88,000,000 taels, while the average annual expenditure has been 101,000,000 taels.

Expedition Called Off.

Pekin, April 26.—The expedition from Pao Fu has been entirely called off and the French troops have been ordered to return to the original station. The only casualties suffered by the entire expedition were two German soldiers killed.

TRIED TO LOOT A TOWN.

Texarkana, Ark., April 26.—About 1 o'clock this morning an unsuccessful attempt was made to hold up and rob the little town of Queen City, Tex., 16 miles south of Texarkana, on the Texas & Pacific railroad. Five men went to the shingle mill of C. L. Gabe, which was in charge of Watchman King. They covered him with pistols and disarmed him. A tramp named Woods was sleeping at the mill. The men told King and Woods that they were going to tie them to the railroad track, capture the night policeman and rob the town. King and Woods were taken to the track, but while the robbers were getting ropes ready, they broke away. Woods was shot twice by the robbers, and is dead. King was shot in the head, but will probably recover.

The shooting attracted the attention of a constable, who hurried to the scene with another man. Upon their arrival a pitched battle ensued. The officer emptied two guns at the robbers and after exhausting his ammunition was forced to retreat. Bloodhounds are now on the trail of the robbers. Besides being shot, King and Woods were badly beaten with pistols.

A USELESS RESISTANCE

To the Budget in the British House of Commons.

London, April 26.—The house of commons had a dull sitting last evening devoted to the discussion and formal passing of the budget resolutions. The Irish members made an ineffectual attempt to get the wheat duty reduced from sixpence to fourpence.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, chancellor of the exchequer, said he sympathized with the Indian producer and the Irish consumer, but under existing conditions he was unable to hold out a hope of reduction. The proposal was rejected by a vote of 221 to 140.

A similar fate was reserved for the attempt of Mr. Wm. Redmond to get Ireland exempted from the tobacco duty. It is now asserted that an attempt will be made to induce the chancellor of the exchequer to modify the coal duty by threats of a great strike of miners.

Will Be Rudely Shattered.

London, April 26.—Mr. W. P. Stead, in an interview with a representative of the Daily Mail yesterday, said: "If I am not mistaken, we are on the verge of a storm across the Atlantic that will rudely shatter our peaceful calculations. When the United States congress meets, the Clayton-Bulwer treaty will be torn into shreds and flung in our faces. We shall have to choose between fighting and eating humble pie. The first serious discussion of the possibility of such a war will do more to keep the Boers in the field than all the speeches of all the pro-Boers in existence."

Registration in Cuba.

Havana, April 26.—The registration proceedings throughout the island have thus far been marked by no disorder. Protests over the appointment of registration officers, due to party differences, have ceased to be received at the palace owing to orders issued that three parties—national, republican and democratic—are to have equal representation only where such parties existed prior to April 17. All efforts are now being turned toward getting the voters on the rolls. It is expected that there will be a large vote in the cities, and already 12,000 have been registered in Havana.

Doesn't Want a Third Nomination.

Lincoln, Neb., April 26.—In a statement, given publicity last night, W. J. Bryan says in effect that he has no intention of seeking a third nomination for the presidency. Mr. Bryan's announcement is in answer to an article in an eastern paper speculating on his plans as a political leader.

Expressions of Confidence.

Washington, April 26.—A statement has been received by the president from the "federacion regional," a labor organization of Porto Rico, expressive of the confidence of the labor element in Gov. Allen, thanking the president for his return, and repudiating any person claiming to represent that element in the United States.

GIVEN TO PONTIAC

Michigan Will Hold Its Next State Fair in That City

MINOR LEGISLATIVE MOVES

Detroit Poor Commission Will Be Left As It Is—Factory Inspectors' Appropriation Increased—Gov. Bliss' Anti-Cigarette Bill Passes the House.

Lansing, Mich., April 26.—This year's exhibition of the State Agricultural society will be held at Pontiac, and so far as the present committee can bind its successors, next year's exhibition will also be held in that city. This was decided at a meeting of the executive committee of the state association last night.

Early in the day, Pontiac, Grand Rapids, Jackson and Kalamazoo were in the running, but Jackson and Kalamazoo dropped out before the contest was very old. When it came to a show down, Grand Rapids expressed its willingness to repair and increase buildings and grounds so as to meet the needs of the association, but its representatives did not feel that the citizens should be called upon to put up guarantee funds, now that the society has a balance in its treasury.

Pontiac will have to raise about $30,000 for the necessary buildings, etc., aside from the $5,000 guarantee against loss. The contract calls for exhibitions at Pontiac in 1901 and 1902, and the citizens of Pontiac must raise the necessary funds within 20 days. The vote was: Pontiac, 14; Grand Rapids, 5; Kalamazoo, 2.

Eugene Fifield, of Bay City, and H. P. Hinds were re-elected members of the business committee, the former being chairman.

The announcement that Gov. Bliss had signed the bill appropriating $4,500 a year to be offered for premiums on Michigan products only, was received with much pleasure, and a committee was appointed to rearrange the premium list to cover the appropriations.

Legislation at Lansing.

It is learned that the members of the Wayne delegation will make no effort to have a bill passed by the legislature to take away from the Detroit poor commission the power to appoint city physicians and place it in the hands of the board of health. One of the members says the powers that be on the new health board have formed a sort of alliance with the poor commissioners that will insure the appointment of men they want as city physicians.

The house ways and means committee has reported out Rep. McFarlane's bill increasing the appropriation for the factory inspectors from $15,000 to $20,000. The additional $5,000 is to be used in paying the salaries of more factory inspectors—one of whom shall be a woman. The bill amends the factory inspectors law so as to include stores that employ more than 10 clerks, and hotels.

There was joy in Gov. Bliss' household last evening. The lower house of the legislature, late yesterday afternoon, passed Rep. McKay's bill to prohibit the sale or giving away of cigarettes in this state—the only measure positively recommended by the present governor in his first message.

The senate played horse with the Corliss bill. Fuller got in an amendment barring barbers who have "onion" or "cigarette" on their breaths, in addition to liquor, etc., but it was later rescinded. The bill was finally agreed to with little amendment. Senators Kelly, Goodell, McMullen et al. seriously defended it. On third reading the bill passed by 17 to 6.

Jury Disagreed.

Lansing, Mich., April 26.—The jury in the case of J. H. Brown of Battle Creek was out all night, and yesterday morning announced a disagreement. The vote stood 10 to 2 for conviction. Brown was charged with defrauding the state by taking pay from a private individual while on duty for the state. He is a member of the state live stock commission.

Interesting Criminal Case.

Muskegon, Mich., April 26.—An interesting criminal case is on trial here in the circuit court. The defendant is Julius Dorenz, a farmer in White River township, who is charged with assault upon Gottlieb Scheon, with intent to kill. Lorenz intends to put up as a defense that Scheon had him bewitched, and that he carried about with him in an old book a thorn with which he used to drive away the evil spirits. Lorenz's assault consists of striking Scheon on the head with a pitchfork and an iron bar, he claiming that the latter insulted his wife.

Tree Kills Two Horses.

Pontiac, Mich., April 26.—J. J. Oliver lost a horse in a runaway on Oakland avenue yesterday morning. The horse collided with a tree, broke a leg and had to be knocked on the head. The accident occurred on the spot where Farmer Cross' horse broke its neck a year ago by colliding with the same tree.

Received With Enthusiasm.

London, April 26.—"The Man from Blankley's," by Mr. Anstey, which was produced last night at the Prince of Wales theater by Mr. Chas. Hawtrey, was very mirth-provoking and excellently played. The play dragged somewhat, however, and will require pruning. It was received with enthusiasm.

Ice Men Compete.

Jackson, Mich., April 26.—The Jackson ice trust will find a competitor in the Wagner Ice Co. of Sandusky, O., which is now writing contracts with larger Jackson consumers at a reduction in price.

GEO. W. FOWLE AT THE HEAD.

Detroit, April 26.—Upon the receipt of the decision of the state supreme court, making a one-man head of the Detroit board of public works yesterday noon, Mayor Maybury immediately appointed George W. Fowle as the chief of that department. Mr. Fowle quickly filed his bond, was sworn in and took possession of the office. The employes of the office were informed that they would hold their positions for the present, and all work proceeded without a hitch.

MINING VALUES ASSESSED.

Three U. P. Mines Assessed for a Valuation of $3,700,000.

Houghton, Mich., April 26.—The board of supervisors met in secret session Thursday morning to fix the valuations of the mines for this year's assessment rolls. Enough has leaked out to show that the Atlantic is put down at $600,000; Wolverine, $1,500,000; Arcadian, $1,600,000. All the figures are based upon stock quotations for the year.

Supt. Shields, of the Arcadian, supervisor from Franklin township, kicked on the report of the committee, which put his mine in at $1,850,000, three times the Atlantic's valuation, and more than the Wolverine, which is paying all kinds of dividends. As the result of his protest, backed up by Capt. Parnall, the board cut $250,000 from the Arcadian's figure, saving taxes of over $2,500.

Didn't Spear This Fish.

Lake Odessa, Mich., April 26.—Deputy State Game Warden Coulter of Charlevoix bagged a party of eight fishermen on Jordan lake. There were two boat loads. One of the crowd pulled a spear on the warden and threatened to spear him, but a gun shoved in his face persuaded him to wilt and go along. The party were brought before Justice Pearson, pleaded guilty to violating the state game and fish laws and were fined $3 and costs, amounting to $6.75 each.

The Home of Authors.

Battle Creek, Mich., April 26.—Battle Creek has been honored with another addition to its list of 78 authors. "Wit and Wisdom of Jesus" is the title of a new book issued this week by a well-known Boston publisher, and the author is the best-known literary man in this city, prominent in the literary clubs and well known as the finest conversationalist in the city—Prof. Geo. Wright Buckley, a retired Unitarian minister and a former newspaper man.

Tied Up at the Straits.

Harbor Springs, Mich., April 26.—The revenue cutter Morrill is tried up here as a result of an encounter with ice at the straits yesterday. She lost two paddles off her propeller and received other rough usage. Capt. Davis has gone to the Soo and when he returns the Morrill will probably go to Milwaukee to be docked and repaired. The Morrill was one of Rear Admiral Sampson's fleet at Havana.

Arrested the Whole Gang.

Port Huron, Mich., April 26.—The prize fight which was to be pulled off here last night ended in a fiasco. In the second round, between Max Hoffman of this city and Mike Ward of Sarnia, Hoffman was knocked out and the entire outfit was arrested.

Assured of His Support.

Berlin, April 26.—The Cologne Gazette says that Emperor William and Crown Prince Frederick visited the Benedictine monastery at Maria Lache and the emperor, replying to the abbot's speech of welcome, assured the latter that the Benedictines could always be assured of his protection and favor. All their efforts which had for their object the upholding of religion in the people could count upon his support.

Charges Discrimination.

London, April 26.—Sir Christopher Furness, head of the Furness line of steamers, has drawn the attention of the British board of trade to the anomaly involved in the fact that tonnage dues are charged in the case of British vessels entering American ports, while Dutch and Danish vessels enter free. He desires the government to make representations on the subject to the United States.

Will Form a Combine.

Chicago, April 26.—Chicago manufacturers of clothing, representing an aggregate capital of from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, met yesterday and decided to form an association which will combine with similar bodies throughout the United States. The step was taken as the result of a visit of eastern delegates, who for years have been trying to effect a combination of all the large manufacturing houses in the United States.

Boiled Water In Ancient Times.

Now that the use of boiled drinking water has become common, it is interesting to be reminded that a similar method of guarding against disease was practiced in ancient times. Herodotus tells how Cyrus had his drinking water boiled and carried in silver vessels, and Pliny the elder relates that Nero had water boiled and afterward cooled for drinking by placing it in glass flasks surrounded with snow.

Laureate Nonsense.

Tennyson is said to have been fond of foolish fun, that ever delightful sort of fun which is not wit, but nonsense.

One day, at Burlington House, he asked the guests a conundrum which he had just made:

"Who are the greatest women in the world?"

The answer was:

"Miss Ouri, the Misses Ippi and Sara Gossa."

Very Grave.

Twiddle—I read last night of a man who was buried alive so that he might know what the sensation is like.

PRELIMINARY.

"To Mr. Darcy Hunter Gray:

"MY DEAR BOY—As foreshadowed in my last, the concern has gone to smash, and your prospects with it. When its affairs are settled, the firm of Hunter, Bloom & Co. will have enough to pay its funeral expenses, and that's about all. What I have left is my wife's, who will, I trust, be able to support me until certain life insurance policies become due, out of which she can reimburse herself, through my dying, for the cost of my living. I'm too old to try again, too sad to care much, except for you.

"Your father was my dear friend, your mother my beloved sister. When he died, I promised him I would be a father to you. When she died, her last words were a plea that I should be good to her boy. I accepted both trusts, Darcy, and betrayed both.

"They died poor. I was rich. They would have had you learn to carve your own career, and I loved you so that from your bright, brave boyhood you were spoiled and indulged as my own son. I gave you the best I had. I balked you in only one desire, that of going to West Point. Harvard, London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Rome and the Riviera were your educators. I planned to make you a railway magnate when you hadn't learned the first principles of the business. I've accustomed you to every luxury—to a life of careless ease, to be a dawdler and a dilettante—isn't that what you call it? I counted on leaving you rich, and I leave you ruined. The self reproach, the misery which overcomes me as I write these words no words can tell you.

"I know what you would write and say. You were always generous; but, Don't write, don't come, just yet. Wait until you get—the next news. Wait until—

"However, let us get down to business. Of course you and Mrs. Hunter [illegible] not be apt to see much of each other. She will mourn me less than you, and you more than I deserve. The very little nest egg your mother set aside for you is intact. With accrued interest it amounts to some $11,720. You have no debts to speak of, have you? I've paid all you ever told me about—twice, I think—and you were always frank and truthful. That little sum, with what you have to your credit in the Chemical and over there with you, represents the sum total of your fortune. You never needed it before, and so I never happened to mention it to you.

"But despite your defects in bringing up, for which I am responsible, you're not much worse off than if you'd gone into the army (I hope you've outlived that lunacy, as you did the other one for—you know) and can now make a strike for yourself. You have the best of health, the best of looks—for you strongly resemble your uncle as he was at your age—the best of education for any purpose that isn't absolutely useful, and there is nothing that I know of to prevent your marrying a fortune, as I did, and living happy ever after—as I didn't.

"Don't underrate the extent of my collapse—Bloom got away with what Wall street left—or of my love. Thank God, I have no son of my own! Thank God, I've only you to kneel to and say, 'Forgive the blind, miscalculating, but utterly humbled old fellow that'"—

But here the eyes of the man seated there by the dancing waters in the glad April sunshine grew so blind with tears that he could read no more.

Out on the blue, translucent waves the white swans were paddling to and fro, dipping for bread tossed by the lavish hands of laughing children and their white capped bonnes. The flashing oars of many a skiff drove through the sparkling waters, sending snowy little surges breaking from the sharp, white prows. Fairy yachts and swift paddle wheel steamers clove the mirror surface farther from the shore and tossed the creamy foam along their billowing wake. Half way over to the Savoy shore, deep in the shadow of the mountains, two white winged barks seemed wooing the faltering breeze, for not a leaf was stirring in the deep green foliage that shaded the path along the sea wall. Towering high aloft, dazzling in the sunshine, the snow seamed, snow capped crags blinded the eye with their radiance as they peered down into their own reflections in the somber depths at their shadowy base. Away to the eastward, lovely little towns and villages lay at the foot of the vine clad slopes of the northern shore, while here and there a venerable ruin—castle, convent or fortress—stood sentineled in bold relief on some projecting height or nestled under the shoulder of some rocky cliff close to the water's edge. Near at hand in the public place the carrousels, thronged with children, old and young, were spinning madly to the reedy melodies of some donkey driven organ. Waltz, galop and military march rioted in loud rivalry and a group of Italian singers, smiling indomitably, caroled "Funiculi Funicula" in nimble opposition to a Tyrolean band quacking like noisy ducks in the pavilion at the water's edge. The bell buttoned page of the Beau Rivage was still darting about, distributing letters just brought in by the grinning facteur, ever a-scent for tips, and, having still three or four undelivered missives, halted in front of the American.

"Pardon, m'sieu', but—ees Mees Langdon"—

"Up at the billiard rooms, probably," was the brusque answer, as Mr. Gray turned hastily away to hide the suspicious moisture in his eyes.

"But no. I 'ave been there. I 'ave letters for her, and for M'sieu' Smeet."

"Over yonder, possibly," he answered, with a sidewise nod of the head toward a little arbor "far from the madding crowd" at the eastward edge of the pretty grounds, then turned away, impatient of further inquiry. Some men were chatting eagerly at the fountain as he passed. One of them, English unmistakably, hailed him jovially.

"Time you were ready, Gray. You're going to Chillon, of course." And with a true Briton's deep disdain of foreign names he spoke it as it was spelled.

"No," was the answer, "I'm going to cool off."

"Been getting a redhot letter, as you Yankees say, I suppose," the islander went on, impervious to satire.

"That's about the size of it," answered Gray, without halting. Two of the men looked after him with no little concern in their eyes. Others hailed him as he passed them by. Gray was evidently popular. A woman in billowing laces and a parasol chair smiled largely upon him as he raised his straw hat and bade him pause, but prevailed not. Two younger women, in trim walking attire, nodded coquettishly and said it was the very day for the trip. Then, too, he answered only vaguely, and with a faraway look in his deep blue eyes he passed on to the telegraph office, and the group of smoking men broke up.

"Something's amiss with Gray," said one of the party, a New Yorker. "I'll go see."

"I don't see what there was in the size of the letter to upset him," said the Englishman, unconscious of slang that was not Britannia ware. "Gray's a good sort though. Could a fellow do anything, d'you suppose?"

But the pursuer was slow. Seeing him coming and divining his object, Mr. Gray slipped out of the side door, dived through the shrubbery that bordered a winding driveway to the west and took himself off through the crowded place. He had need to be alone—to face his changed fortunes fair and square.

Twenty-five years old and up to the midweek mail from America he had never known a care [illegible] boyish days, unless it was som[illegible] momentary heart pang when Amy L[illegible] proved unkind. In a dawdl[illegible] amateurish way he had read the dai[illegible] paper and signed some letters and reports laid before him by an attentive clerk in the office of the eastern traffic manager of a great road of which his uncle was a heavy stockholder and prominent director. The most serious thing he had ever undertaken was his membership in a crack city regiment, wherein he had served through the ranks and really earned a commission. But both these avocations he had quitted during the previous winter, and all because Amy Langdon was reported flirting dangerously at Nice and Mentone, and if she were not actually engaged to Darcy Gray he at least felt so far engaged to her that flirtation was denied him.

As pretty a girl as ever rode in Central park was Amy, and as dashing a horsewoman, and it was Gray's admirable riding and universally acknowledged prospects that made him for the time so acceptable a parti. He could manage a horse far better than he could a woman, however, and Miss Langdon kept him at her side when in saddle and subject to call at all other times. But she had, not unkindly, laughed off his protestations and dissected his offers. "It's absurd, Darcy. You haven't a cent in the world that doesn't come from your uncle, and who knows what his wife will do with his fortune, or he himself, for that matter? As for me, I'm a beggar with social aspirations. Come, be sensible, and I'll like you better. Be a soldier, Darcy, and face the facts. That's the one thing you're cut out for."

"You're hard hearted, Amy," he had answered.

"No; only hard headed. I'm soft hearted enough to like you too well to spoil both our lives."

Gray believed himself much in love when she went abroad in November, and took it much to heart that she should be so constantly attended by Fred Smythe, who had no atom of sense in his head, but no end of dollars in his pocket. But when a lordling, a younger son of an older house than ever dwelt in Gotham, an honorable, between whom and the title and estates was a lord with only one lung and that fast going, had opposed his sighs to those of Smythe, and there came rumors that Locksley Hall was to be enacted over again with an American Amy in the foreground, Marcy Gray believed it time to rush for the Riviera, and a worried old uncle most unwillingly let him go. Hunter loved that boy, his sister's son, as the apple of his eye. There wasn't anything he wouldn't have given him but the means of earning his own living. All that he proposed to settle magnificently. But the bottom began to drop out of the market in mid-January and left him stranded high and dry by the middle of May. Two million dollars, said Wall street, had "gone where the woodbine twineth."

Over beyond the hurly burly of the public place, crowded with townsfolk and children, the roadway wound along the water's edge. Gray strode rapidly westward, his head bowed, his hands thrust deep in his trousers pockets. He missed his usual companions, a heavy stick and a nimble fox terrier, but both had been left with the portier as inappropriate to a voyage to Chillon. They were to have started, a merry party it promised to be, by the early boat from Geneva, and he could see her now cleaving the limpid waters around the headland of Morges. It was time to warn his companions that he could not go. One girl, at least, might miss him, and she should be accorded opportunity to name some other escort, Amy—"Amy, shallow hearted." She had disappeared with that brainless ass half an hour ago, possibly to console him for the fact that he was not one of the dozen bidden by Mme. la Comtesse to be of the party to voyage with her to the famous castle, breakfast with her aboard La France and dine en fete at Montreux. Vane, the Briton, was one, and small comfort did he afford Smythe by bidding him jolly up and perhaps madame would let him in for postprandial coffee at Montroo.

Gray had never been able to stomach Smythe. He called him an insupportable cad, but when at a turn in the path he came suddenly upon the combination of brainless ass and insupportable cad squatted on a stone, elbows on knees, his fuzzy jowls deep sunken in his hands, his eyes on the faraway line of the Savoy shore, the intruder relented. Here was woe perhaps as deep as his own.

But in this case misery loved not company, and Smythe was surly. No, there wasn't anything Gray could do for him, thanks. He was feeling seedy, that was all. It was plain to see that the interview with Miss Langdon had left him sore at heart. Gray stood another moment irresolute. There was absolutely no reason why he should do the fellow a good turn. Smythe hated him and plainly showed it, but Gray had ignored his spleen, and ever good humoredly tolerated him. It is easy for a man to forgive another's jealousy, but Gray had suffered too much from Miss Langdon's caprice not to know the symptoms when so patent as they were in Smythe. Ill fortune makes some natures magnanimous—rare natures—and Gray turned again.

"Look here, old man" ("old chap" had not then come into vogue), "if I can't do anything for you, you can for me. I was to have gone with that party, you know, to Chillon this morning. Yonder comes the boat now. Go to madame for me, like a good fellow, and tell her I've just received ill tidings from home. I've got to go to Geneva by the 10 o'clock train. I was paired off with Miss Langdon. Tell madame I'm awfully sorry, but I can't go. She'll ask you in my place—see if she doesn't. So long."

And in another minute he was breasting the heights to Lausanne, while Smythe was speeding to Beau Rivage.

It was late that evening when he returned from a solemn day with the bankers, the consul and certain tradesfolk whose prospects, temporal and eternal, he was given to understand were shattered by his cancellation of certain orders for furs and bijouterie. Heavy levy was made on his checkbook to solace their suffering, but there is a certain recklessness of cost when one's financial tether is nearly at an end. Dinner was over at Beau Rivage. The band was playing delightfully in the south portico. Men in evening dress were sauntering and smoking and sipping coffee about the corridor. A few American and English girls with their escorts were dancing in the salon. Gray was still in "knickers" and had dined solus at the Hotel Terminus. He paused at the portico and gazed in at the scene of mirth, luxury and enjoyment wherein he had been so thoroughly at home and contrasted unflinchingly the scene with that which he had planned for his future. Now it was necessary for him to get to his room to write, and he hoped to reach it unobserved, but the Hon. Rokeby had received his instructions and nabbed him.

"Eoh, I say, Gray—Miss Langdon, y'know, wished to speak with you directly you came in."

"Yes," was the languid answer. "And where is she now?"

"In their salon, I fancy. She said she was too tired to dress for dinner. Had a beastly day, y'know."

"'Trez," answered a boyish voice, and Darcy was exuberantly welcomed by a 10-year-old Langdon. "The mater and sis are having a row in the gallery," said he radiantly. "Old Smythe's been pestering her. Go out there. They don't mind you, you know, and I can't get away from here until they've finished."

But further confidences were ended by the sudden entrance of Miss Langdon herself. She had evidently been watching for Gray's return. Outstretched to him in eager greeting were Amy's long, slender white hands; uplifted to his in anxious inquiry were a pair of the softest, loveliest eyes. The voice in which she spoke was soft, almost tremulous. "What is it, Darcy?"

The hand sidled into his, and Miss Langdon walked to a sofa whither she would have drawn him, but despite the hand, which, notwithstanding, he released, he remained on his feet and concisely answered:

"What you expected."

"From Mr Hunter? Gerald, go down and play with Ralph until mother sends for you."

"Ralph isn't there," was the petulant answer.

"Then go and play. Go anyhow." Then she turned for answer. "From Mr. Hunter?"

"Yes."

"And it's true?"

"Yes, every cent."

Then the hands would be no longer denied. Both went impulsively out, seized his with no timid grasp and drew him impetuously down beside her. Then to his amaze he saw the fair face quivering piteously, the lovely eyes brimming with tears, the soft red lips twitching with uncontrollable emotion. "Oh, you poor, dear boy—oh, Darcy, Darcy, I never—I never knew how much I cared for you till now," she almost sobbed. "Gerald, if you don't leave this room instantly, I'll"—

But the boy bolted, and then Darcy saw that she was gazing up at him through a briny depth of tears. Even in his surprise, even in the thrill of joy with which he heard this fond confession, he recaptured himself, as it were, in the nick of time.

"Under the circumstances, that's something I didn't expect to hear," said Darcy.

"Under other circumstances, you wouldn't have heard it," said Amy.

"It's a bit rough on Smythe, isn't it?"

"It in nowise concerns him. As for Rokeby, he must take me just as I am."

"Oh," said Gray, looking fairly at her at last, and beginning to tug at the hand she still held in her two, "it's to be an international affair, is it? And I am addressing the future Countess of Lancaster?"

"Listen to reason, Darcy," said Miss Langdon, regaining dignity and self possession at sight of the hunger in his eyes. "I have no money. I have every ambition, every longing, every desire that only position and money can gratify. I like you better than any man I ever knew, yet I wouldn't marry you, because you hadn't enough to offer, and I never so fully felt that I could and would marry you as now—when I can't. Even Mr. Smythe, with $500,000, could not buy. I am going to a higher bidder—the highest I could find. So far as I'm concerned, that settles my fate, but it's yours I care about, Darcy. You've been a dawdler and a do nothing all your life. What will you do now?"

"Be true to my friends—and their estimate of me, probably. You wouldn't have me to disappoint them, would you?"

"What on earth do you mean? Speak sensibly, Darcy. I've never been worth your trust when you gave it. Now I'm honest with you. What will you do?"

"What they all prophesied—nothing."

"Darcy, you have brains and energy. You have—persistence enough to win anything—that's worth having," she concluded, lamely.

HOW QUAILS HIDE.

Although the Man Could Not See the Bird the Pup Was Right.

We are all more or less inclined to dispute the unusual incidents reported by observant brother sportsmen and if persuaded will excuse the bigotry shown by saying, "I never saw any such thing." The claim has been made that a quail will lay a dead leaf over its back when "laying close" in the woods, and this I have always thought an appropriate extract from a pretty fairy tale and pitied any one who could be gulled by such a very transparent fable.

One day while hunting quail a covey flushed wild and scattered in the woods. My companion took the old dog and I the pup, and we proceeded to beat up the cover. The first point the pup made was at the foot of a small tree, where the trees stood thick, but where the ground was stony and was covered only with thin patches of dead leaves.

Taking the direction of the dog's eyes, I passed close by his head and, brushing by the tree at the foot of which he stood, walked on 10 or 15 feet, but flushed nothing.

Going back to the dog, I carefully took the direction of his eyes and looking closely discovered sitting between the roots of the tree within a span of my foot the bird, and lying well over its back was a large dead oak leaf placed in such a manner as to convince me beyond all shadow of a doubt that the bird had placed it there.

My reputation for veracity is fairly good, but I wish that pup could also make a statement in this case, for he and I were the only witnesses of this, to me, strange and interesting incident.

P. S.—We got the bird.—Lewis Hopkins in Forest and Stream.

"THE MAN WITH THE ADZE."

How the Butcher's Chopping Block Is Kept Smooth and Neat.

A constructive rather than a destructive force implied by the name is "the man with the adze," who is sometimes seen by early comers to the meat markets.

Most persons have doubtless observed the large blocks upon which butchers trim their steaks and chops. The top of the block is usually as smooth as glass, but the constant chopping of meat thereon roughens the surface eventually. The general idea seems to be that the butcher keeps his block smooth by merely sawing off the rough section. Such, however, is not the case. Specialism has even entered here.

The man who makes a business of smoothing the butchers' blocks appears at the meat markets early in the morning before the customers arrive. He rolls the big block to the sidewalk, then mounts to the top of it, adze in hand. Bringing it down swiftly from a vertical position above his head, the blade is made to pass between his legs, skimming the surface of the block with great dexterity.

At each stroke a thin layer of the rough wood is removed. The operation is continued sufficiently to satisfy the butcher's requirements. Some three hours are ordinarily consumed in the operation, and at the end of that time "the man with the adze" finds himself richer by $1.—New York Times.

His Titles.

It was evident in his swagger that he was a scion of the British aristocracy, and the most casual observer could not have failed to note that he was a stranger to the city. He touched a well dressed, auburn haired young man who was lolling in front of a Broadway hotel on the shoulder.

"Pardon me, me dear man, but could I trouble you for a match?" After lighting his cigar he continued: "Bah Jove, this is a remarkable city! This is me first visit to New York, d'you know. I'm a deuced stranger, but on the other side I'm a person of importance. I am Sir Francis Daffy, Knight of the Garter, Knight of the Bath, Knight of the Double Eagle, Knight of the Golden Fleece, Knight of the Iron Cross. D'you mind telling me your name, me dear man?"

Replied he of the auburn hair in a deep, rich brogue:

"Me name is Michael Murphy, night before last, night before that, last night, tonight and every night—Michael Murphy."—New York Sun.

Wit and Wisdom Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Wit and Wisdom Club was held Tuesday evening, April 23, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Slayton. The house was beautifully and most conveniently arranged for giving such an affair. At six o'clock the members sat down to a most sumptuous repast. After the banquet the tables were removed and the toasts followed. Dr. North was the toast master of the evening and his clever introductions demonstrated his great ability in that line. Mr. Jones gave the first toast and perhaps the most important, on the "Ladies." Mr. Slayton represented the "Wit" of the club and proved to all that he had a superabundance of wit. Mrs. Rosacrans represented the "Wisdom" in her usual wise manner. Mrs. John Richards spoke on "Our Guests." The last subject on the toast list was "The Absent and Former Members" whom Miss Kyle represented. A vocal duet by Mesdames Orr and Kellogg, with Miss Stephenson as accompanist, closed the program. Great thanks are due to Mr. and Mrs. Slayton for their hospitality. The affair was a great success and those instrumental in its arrangement are to be congratulated.

The Jolly Horsebuyer Returns.

Many Brooklynites will be sorry to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Teachout and children will move to Tecumseh this week. Mr. Teachout is one of the most popular as well as the best known horsebuyers of southern Michigan and the change is made to gain better business location and shipping facilities. Fred has purchased of the Heck estate in Tecumseh the old livery barn now occupied by C. A. Slayton as an agricultural implement establishment. He will take possession May 1st and fit the building into sales and training quarters for horses. He now has six head in Brooklyn which will soon be transferred. Ed Caldwell will remain in his employ.—Yesterday's Brooklyn Exponent.

The above will be read with great pleasure by the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Teachout here, who are more than glad to welcome them back. They will live in the McConnell house on North Pearl, lately occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lewis.

Tecumseh People Interested in a Will Case.

We clip the following from the Adrian Telegram, which may be of interest to some of our readers.

The will case in Judge of Probate Larwill's court, in which Dr. Watson's claims to the estate of his deceased wife's property are being contested by the lady's relatives, was dismissed Tuesday, or rather withdrawn by proponent, the doctor, on account of the alleged illegal filing of the petition for probate of the will. This was done the first of April, or election day, and Henry C. Smith, attorney from the firm of Watts, Smith & Baldwin, acting for the brothers and nephews, also for Eva Wheeler Morten, Edith Crego and Lulu and Ben Pulver, laid claim that it was illegally filed.

Mr. Smith, who has been making an examination, claims that Dr. Watson, as he is styled, is not a doctor, as the records will show, but got his name by conducting a jag cure down in Ohio. He also sets up that while the marriage was claimed to be conducted on August 8 at Windsor, the Windsor records show that it was conducted on the eleventh. He will further claim that Watson's first wife, Emma A. Grubb-Watson, secured a divorce from him on the grounds of cruelty, at Findlay, O., and that she secured a divorce from him on the grounds of cruelty, at Findley, O., and that she secured quite a property tha she had turned over to him.

Another point to be pressed by M. Smith is that Wilhemina Traucht, a milliner of Findley, secured a judgment in breach of promise and $750 damages for money she had loaned to Watson. Undue influence over his wife will be charged and the existence of a later will will also be set up, all of which will be combatted by the doctor, when he files another application in the probate court in a few days, which he probably will.

Mark Twain and the Serpent's Tooth.

Mark Twain's daughter, Miss Clara L. Clemens, in entering upon her career as a concert singer, had a long conference with a manager. Many matters were discussed, plans made and details settled, Miss Clemens dictating her own ideas. The young singer, who had experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining parental consent to a public career, showed her earnestness by the businesslike manner in which she looked into affairs.

When matters had been fully considered and the manager was about to leave, Miss Clemens said, with the large determination that small bodies not infrequently possess:

"I wish it distinctly understood that my father's name is not to be mentioned at all in connection with my singing in public."

Mark Twain, who had been sitting in the room during the interview, in which, however, he had taken no part, looked up quizzically and said, with a twinkle in his eyes:

"You see what it is to have a thankless child."—Saturday Evening Post.

Did They?

There is nothing much more distressing than an unfinished story. A number of people in a London drawing room were conversing about capital punishment when a lady remarked:

"How strange it must seem to be sentenced to death!"

"Not so very, very strange, I assure you. I was myself once condemned to death in Africa," said a returned African explorer.

"Indeed!" exclaimed the lady. "And were you—did they"—

"Did they what, madame?"

"Why, did they execute you, you know?"—Exchange.

When Corks Float Upright.

A cork which is longer than it is broad, which is the case with all ordinary corks, floats upon its side, so to speak. How can we make it float upon its head?

Place one on end upon a table and around it place six others. Seize them all together and plunge them under water so as to wet them completely. Then remove your hand gently and let them take their own position in the water, when you will find that they will stand upright, as if supporting one another. This is because the water that penetrates the cork will make them cling together.

Railroading In Ireland.

A somewhat nervous English tourist vouches for the genuineness of the following incident of Irish traveling: The train arrived some 20 minutes late at a small station, and the engine driver inquired of the station master, "Did the express go by yet, Tim?" "It did not," was the answer. There was indecision on the part of the engine driver for a moment when he cheerfully exclaimed, "Ah, well; we must chance it!" as he blew the whistle and started off on the single line.—London Outlook.

LITERARY NOTES.

"Literary Chelsea" (London), is the subject of an illustrated article by W. S. Harwood in the May number of The Critic. The photographs from which the illustrations were made were taken by the author, a fact which gives them a peculiar value.

* * *

The Century for May is a travel number. Without leaving his fireside—or window seat—the reader may voyage in imagination from China to Nepaul, from Asia Minor to Italy, and from France to America by way of England. If he reads his magazine as it is printed, he will pretty nearly reverse this itinerary for the opening article is an account by Mrs. Anna Lea Merritt, the American artist, of her home in the heart of England—"A Hamlet in Old Hampshire."

* * *

A new short serial by Kate Douglas Wiggin, to run through three months, is the leading feature of the May Scribner. Mrs. Wiggin's delightful humor, revealed so charmingly in the Penelope books, appears in every page of "The Diary of a Goose Girl." It is the story of a beautiful American girl who flees from an attractive but too persistent lover to the seclusion of a goose farm in a quiet English county. The illustrations are by Shepperson, an English artist thoroughly familiar with the region.

$50.00 to California and Back this Summer.

An illustrated book, which will be of much interest to all who are expecting to take advantage of the low rates to California this summer, at the time of the Epworth League Convention, to be held in San Francisco in July, has just been issued by the Chicago & North-Western R'y. Much valuable information is given relating to the state, variable routes, etc. The rate via this line will be only $50.00 for the round trip from Chicago, with corresponding rates from other points Copy of this book may be had free upon application to Mr. W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Plucky Rector.

Dr. W. [illegible] Rainsford had started a mission school in the back rooms of a saloon on Avenue A and at one of the first sessions found a big ruffian in possession, greatly to the discomfort of the teacher. Told to go out, the fellow informed Dr. Rainsford with an oath that he would see him further first. The doctor talked peaceably enough to the blackguard, hoping to avoid a disturbance, but when he swore at him again gave him his own medicine in a blow that felled him like an ox. The fellow arose, dazed and groping, to find the doctor standing over him, ready to have it out.

"Have you got enough?" he asked. The man called quits and went his way. The Sunday school session proceeded.

A week after there was another fight. The rector started in to clear the room, persuasion having failed, and found the burly ruffian of the previous encounter at his elbow.

"I thought I was in for it," he said telling of it, "and that they had come to clean me out. I made sure my back was free and turned upon them. Imagine my surprise when I saw my customer of the week before grab the other by the neck and rush him to the door.

"'Here,' he said, firing him out, 'the rector and I can clean out this saloon!' That was the last fight we had."—World's Work.

His Sad Blunder.

Yes, it was a sad blunder.

He thought the children were in the other room, but it so happened that it was occupied by his wife and a lachrymose neighbor. We all know these sensitive women who weep on the slightest provocation, who begin to sniffle when they talk of their woes, this being really little more than a bid for words of comfort, and this woman was one of them. What had happened is quite immaterial. Something had been said or done that had completely upset her, and in her appeal for solace she sniffled.

As before remarked, he thought the children were in the other room, and one of the children had been suffering from cold in the head. Of course every one knows how annoying a youngster with a cold in the head can be, and he was not in the best of humor anyway.

"For heaven's sake, blow your nose!" he cried at last.

Oh, yes; it was a sad blunder, but even blunders have their compensations. The lachrymose one does not come to that house for sympathy as she formerly did.—Chicago Post.

Antiquity of Man.

From a review in Science of De Mortillet's great work on prehistoric times the following is condensed. Twelve chapters are devoted to the question of tertiary man. It is concluded that while man did not exist during this period, precursors of man more intelligent than any of the living anthropoids did exist.

Pithecanthropus erectus is considered as the immediate precursor of man. The Calaveras skull is rejected. The paleolithic period is considered as corresponding to the early quarternary, and 222,000 years is assigned as the length of this period. Add to this number 10,000 years for the protohistoric and neolithic periods and 6,000 years more for the historic period, and we have 238,000 years, which is, according to the authors, a moderate estimate of man's antiquity.

AFTER 20 YEARS.

A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the work of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder worker from all parts of the Union. Speaking of her experience a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jas. Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says:

"For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble, and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pains across my back extending up the right side; the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excruciating pain, is something much more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used three boxes. I felt like a different person. It was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left. I slept well at night. I could do my housework as well as I ever could, and I give the entire credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that too prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

THE DEADLY COBRA.

How Venomous Creature Is Handled by Hindoo Snake Charmers.

The creatures were on the defensive, but not one of them attempted to strike at the master, who sat serenely in front of them, so long as he did nothing to annoy them. Kullan talked to them as if they were his dearest friends. After a time one or the other of them would lower its head, collapse its hood and begin to try to wriggle away. Whereupon Kullan would give it a smart little rap on the tail with his stick and bring it instantly to attention again. Whether this man possessed any special magic over these cobras or whether the description given below of how he could handle and play with them was simply due to his method I cannot say. He himself repudiated the idea of magic and asserted positively that any one who had the necessary nerve and dexterity could do exactly the same.

He used no reed instrument or music of any kind to propitiate the reptiles. He would simply squat on his haunches in front of them, and, after they had been hissing and swaying their uplifted heads backward and forward for a few minutes, he raised his hands above their heads and slowly made them descend till they rested on the snakes' heads. He then stroked them gently, speaking all the time in the most endearing Hindoostanee terms. The serpents appeared spellbound. They made no effort to resent the liberty, but remained quite still, with heads uplifted, and seemed rather to enjoy it. Presently his hands would descend down the necks about three inches below the heads, his fingers would close loosely around the necks, and he would lift them off the ground and place them on his shoulders. The looseness of the grip appeared to be the main secret. The snakes, being in no way hurt, would then slowly crawl through his fingers and wind themselves round his neck, his shoulders and his arms. They appeared to realize that no harm was to be done them, and they made no effort to resent the handling. He would pick them gently off one arm and place them on the other and, in fact, stroke them and pet them as if they had been a pair of harmless worms.—Cornhill.

A TIGRESS WITH A GRUDGE.

She Gets Furious at Sight of a Keeper Who Once Beat Her.

There is a lean tigress in the Central park menagerie who spends a part of the day beating her head against the iron bars of her cage in a vain attempt to spring upon one of the keepers. Ordinarily the animal is quiet enough. It is only when this keeper passes that she ceases to be a purring cat and becomes a fiend incarnate. The other morning the tigress was in an extremely bad temper. When her fancied enemy stuck a mop in through the bars to clean her cage, she sprang at him, growling in thunderous bass. Nearly everybody in the crowd stepped back involuntarily. The keeper placed an iron bar in the cage at the great cat's feet and went on with his work, while the animal snarled in impotent rage and drew back her upper lip over two gleaming white fangs.

"She doesn't seem to be fond of you," ventured a bystander.

"No, there isn't much love lost between us," replied the keeper. "Her tantrums show that animals treasure grudges just like people. That tigress came here eight years ago. A day or two after she arrived I had to punish her, and she has never got over it. She watches me all day out of the corner of her eye, and every time I go by the cage she makes a jump. I suppose she thinks she'll get me some time. If she does, I might as well say goodby."

While the man talked the tigress looked at him with hate plainly stamped on her face. When he went away, she watched him until he was lost to view. Then she resumed her nervous tramp, tramp.—New York Mail and Express.

Profits In Fractions of Cents.

It is most astonishing that trade in these days is making its enormous profits in the fractions of a cent. In one of the cities of the country there was a bank president who gave his millions for philanthropic purposes. During his life, even on the days when he was almost too infirm to walk, he would trudge sadly and brokenly to his home. One day a man met him on the street and said:

"Why don't you take the street car?"

He instantly replied, "My dear friend, do you appreciate the fact that a hundred dollars would have to work half a week to pay that fare?"

And yet he gave two millions to a library and another million to a hospital. That is the spirit of modern money making. On the one hand it gets the millions through the fractions of cents, and with the other it spends the millions without regard to decimals.—Saturday Evening Post.

Squares of Consecutive Numbers.

Squares of consecutive numbers, as 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, etc., may be formed by the simple rule: To the square of the preceding number add the preceding number and the number itself. Thus:

$$0^2=0$$
$$1^2=0+0+1=1$$
$$2^2=1+1+2=4$$
$$3^2=4+2+3=9$$
$$4^2=9+3+4=16$$

The algebraic proof is:

$$(x+1)^2=x^2+2x+1$$
$$=x^2+x+(x+1)$$

HAIGHT & Co, Britton.

About 11 o'clock Thursday night our quiet little village was startled with the report that a man had been killed by the western-bound fast Wabash train. The accident was first discovered by Charlie Beasley, who was going from the depot down town. The body was lying on the walk. He notified Geo. Oliver and Will Britton and an inquest was held, after which the body was taken to the undertaker's rooms. It was so terribly mangled that it was almost impossible to identify him, the head and one leg having been severed from the body, but a coat belonging to the man was sufficient with which to identify him. The vest was found in Detroit the next morning fast to a baggage car. The body was found to be that of Andrew St. George, a young man about 29 years old. He had been in Tecumseh all day and came down on the Cincinnati Northern train at 6:15 and was intoxicated. He wandered around the fore part of the evening and was walking down the track when the train struck him. The remains were placed in a casket and taken to his father's home, Andrew J. St. George, of Lake Ridge. The funeral was held at the Catholic church at Cone Monday morning. The priest from Adrian had charge of the ceremonies.

F. G. Florance, of Sioux City, Ia.; T. J. Tobey and wife, Mrs. Jas. Sutherland, Layern Kelley and Mrs. A. B. Love, of Adrian, were called here to attend the funeral of Morgan Florance which occurred Sunday.

MORGAN M. FLORANCE

Was born in Middlesex township, Yates county, N. Y., June 11, 1828, and was the youngest but one of five children. After the death of his father, which occurred when Morgan was five years of age, he lived at the home of Augustus Montgomery, with whom he came to Michigan in 1833. At 16 he learned the shoemaker's trade, but soon abandoned it and worked as a farm laborer.

On December 29th, 1852, Mr. Florance was married to Juliette Tobey. To them were born five children, three of whom, Floyd G., of Sioux City, Ia.; Mrs. C. W. Culbertson, of Ridgeway; and Thomas T., who resides on the old farm; with the widow, survive a kind and affectionate father and husband. Two sons, V. Earl and Montie E., are now deceased.

In August, 1897, Mr. Florance was so unfortunate as to have one leg so badly mangled by a binder that amputation was necessary, and in March, 1898, with his wife, he moved to the village of Holloway where he resided at the time of his death, which occurred Thursday, April 18th. The funeral was held from his old home on the farm Sunday, April 21st, at 2 p. m., Rev. DeSpelder, of Raisin, officiating. The Masons, of which lodge, the deceased was a member, attended in a body and escorted the remains to their last resting place in Evergreen cemetery.

The Galloping White Hearse.

It was in the dark of the evening, and the streets were thronged with men and women on their way home at the end of the day's work. At Thirty-fourth street, where Broadway and Sixth avenue cross with a network of tracks, the usual clangor of gongs, the shouts of newsboys and the roar of the elevated trains filled the air, while myriad electric lights sparkled like so many stars.

Suddenly out of the gloom came a little white hearse, being driven rapidly home. Its sad day's work was over, and the little horses were probably anxious for their dinner. Still it gave one a shock to see them galloping so. Even more pathetic it looked when empty than with its precious little burden. The very emptiness spoke of the vacant little chair at home, the unused toys, the unworn frocks folded away for some woman to cry over on a rainy day.

Fathers hurrying home to their own little ones felt a sudden lump in the throat, mothers leading their children grasped the little hands with a quick access of tenderness, and a strange, sad sense of loneliness came to the heart of the passerby who had no child to lose. Just a little white hearse, seen only for a moment in the gathering darkness by the hurrying throng, but what a world of pathos it suggested!—New York Mail and Express.

Artificial Legs.

The most lifelike and serviceable artificial legs in the world are manufactured in America. Enormous quantities of these limbs are shipped to Europe every year.

The first great boom in the artificial leg business was brought about by the civil war. Since that time railroad and trolley car accidents have kept up a ever increasing demand. Another factor has been the general use of antiseptics. The mortality among those who have their legs amputated is far less than formerly, and a large proportion of the survivors become patrons of the wooden leg factories.

The old fashioned pegleg is practically a thing of the past. The modern artificial leg shows a great advance over the old forms. Every improvement has been with the idea of greater simplicity.

The main object of the manufacturers is to improve the fit of the legs. The best models now cost $100. It costs from $5 to $25 a year to keep one of these in order.

Few women wear artificial legs. On the other hand, it is becoming more common to fit limbs to children. Legs are made for children sometimes before they can walk. They are fitted as soon as the child learns to stand and make it possible for it to develop symmetrically.

Where Was the Swindle?

"Ethel," said Lionel Bertram Jones as he dropped his slice of bread in the plate with a noise that set the canary in the gilt cage overhead chirping merrily. "Ethel, I have something to say to you."

They had been married only four weeks, and the time had not arrived when she did all the saying.

"Do you remember the day on which I proposed to you?"

"Yes," she replied. "I will never forget it."

"Do you remember," he went on as he abstractedly drilled a hole in the loaf with the point of a carving knife, "how when I rang the bell you came to the door with your fingers sticky with dough and said you thought it was your little brother who wanted to get in?"

"Yes."

"Oh, Ethel! How could you? How could you?"

"How could I what?" she responded as a guilty look crept into her face.

"How could you make me the victim of such a swindle?"—London Tit-Bits.

Victoria's Proposal.

It was at Windsor castle that Queen Victoria, then only a girl of 20, did what she described as "the most nervous thing a woman was ever called on to do"—when she summoned the young Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha to a private interview and "proposed" to him. She had first met him when as a boy of 17 he came with his father to England, and when, three years later, he "made no secret" of his love for his fair cousin "no one was surprised and every one was delighted."—London Tit-Bits.

Feeble Pulse,

palor, fainting, smothering or sinking spells all point in the same direction—an impaired heart action. A heart that is weak or diseased cannot do full duty and the circulation of the blood is interfered with. There is a medicine that gives new strength to the heart, new power to the pulse and puts new color into cheek and lip.

"I was short of breath, dizzy, had smothering sensations, intense pain in heart, was feeble and pulse so weak that I could not raise myself in bed. I found a perfect cure in Dr. Miles' Heart Cure." A. T. JACKSON, Kewanna, Ind.

PURE BLOOD

Necessary to Life. Vinol Makes it.

POOR BLOOD CAUSES ERUPTIONS AND WEAKNESS.

Vinol Makes Pure, Rich, Red Blood.

BECAUSE WE KNOWN THIS WE GUARANTEE ITS ACTION.

Impoverished blood is a sure sign of internal disorders. We see every day too many people whose faces plainly show that there is something radically wrong.

We want all of our fellow-citizens to know of our splendid blood purifier and blood maker.

We refer to Vinol.

Vinol, as we have before stated, is a purely scientific preparation.

Vinol owes its virtue to the fact that it contains in a highly concentraced state the active curative principles, taken from the livers of live cods—the same elements that formerly were found in cod-liver oil, and which made it famous.

Vinol does not contain the grease or fat that characterized cod-liver oil and made it in many cases worthless.

Vinol acts upon every one of the great vital organs, and by invigorating and giving them strength, enables them to properly perform their functions.

Vinol's effect on the stomach is marvelous. It tones up this, the greatest of the organs of the body, and enables it to obtain from the food which is taken into it the necessary elements to create flesh and muscle tissue, bone structure and pure, rich, red blood.

We are in receipt of a letter from a Savation Army woman which reads as follows:

"I took Vinol after a bad attack of grippe, and so much good did it do me that I persuaded my sister to take it. She was all tired out. Had no appetite and her blood was very poor. It did her as much good as it did me."—BETSY HABERSHAW, 718 River St., Fall River, Mass.

Won't you please come in and see us? We are always glad to extol the merits of Vinol.

We will give you back your money if you don't find Vinol will do all we claim it will. Could any one do more for you?

Women suffering from female troubles and weakness, and from irregular or painful menses, ought not to lose hope if doctors cannot help them. Physicians are so busy with other diseases that they do not understand fully the peculiar ailments and the delicate organism of woman. What the sufferer ought to do is to give a fair trial to which is the true cure provided by Nature for all female troubles. It is the formula of a physician of the highest standing, who devoted his whole life to the study of the distinct ailments peculiar to our mothers, wives and daughters. It is made of soothing, healing, strengthening herbs and vegetables, which have been provided by a kindly Nature to cure irregularity in the menses, Leucorrhœa, Falling of the Womb, Nervousness, Headache and Backache. In fairness to herself and to Bradfield's Female Regulator, every suffering woman ought to give it a trial. A large $1 bottle will do a wonderful amount of good. Sold by druggists.

WITH LOUD ACCLAIM

The President Greeted by Thousands Along the Route

BIG TIME IN OLD VIRGINIA

President McKinley, Mrs. McKinley and the Whole Party Are Royally Welcomed Everywhere On Their Journey.

Charlottsville, Va., April 30.—The presidential train, with a tiny flag on the pilot of the engine denoting the chief magistrate of the nation was on board, arrived at Charlottesville on schedule time. The run from Washington was made without incident. A brief stop was made at Alexandria. A big crowd had assembled at the station there, and the president and Mrs. McKinley appeared upon the platform to acknowledge salutes. As the train approached Charlottesville the party had a glimpse of the old home of President Madison at Montpelier. The pillars of the old colonial mansion were plainly discernible through the trees. At Charlottesville there was an immense assemblage at the station. From the platform of his car the president spoke as follows:

"It gives me very great pleasure to receive the greeting of the people of Charlottesville and the cheers of the young men of the University of Virginia (applause). Your institution is linked with great names and great deeds, and has influenced both. (Applause). What an array of immortals Virginia holds in her keeping to remind us of lofty patriotism, broad statesmanship and noble achievements! (Applause.) To no other state of the union belongs such history to preserve and cherish and such examples to inspire and emulate. May the young men of the state of Virginia prove worthy sons of their noble ancestors and contribute in the future, as they did in the past, to the well being and honor and glory of the republic. Let me assure you young gentlemen that the present and the future hold rich reward for good scholarship, high character and noble endeavor; and the wish which I leave with you is that of these you may have your full share." (Prolonged applause.)

There were calls for Secretary Hay, but his only response was to introduce Postmaster-General Smith, who made an eloquent address.

In the city of Lynchburg, the home of Senator Daniel, there was a stop of 10 minutes. Senator Daniel, Mayor G. W. Smith, members of the board of trade and city council and a great crowd greeted the party with old-fashioned Virginia enthusiasm.

Senator Daniel made a speech of welcome, to which the president responded as follows:

"I am very glad not only to meet the people of the city of Lynchburg, but to be presented by your distinguished senator. It is a matter of no public interest but only one of pure personal recollection that the first time I ever tried to come to Lynchburg I did not succeed. (Laughter.) I came here with a number of other gentlemen who sought entrance, but the gates were closed. We could not open them, and you would not. (Laughter.) And so we departed to seek another host, if not more hospitable, less formidable, than the one that greeted us here. (Laughter.) It is a happy time for me to come to Lynchburg now—the war over, no exchange of greetings with shot and shell as then, but with the friendly welcome of all the people which typifies the respect and regard and good will which subsists between all sections of our common country." (Great applause.)

If yesterday's reception through Virginia is an indication of what is to occur throughout the rest of the trip, the president's tour across the continent will be a triumphal one. Some of the people, in their eagerness to grasp the president's hand, clambered up the railing surrounding the platform. The president received these demonstrations good-naturedly and never failed to grasp the hand extended to him. Mrs. McKinley, sitting at the window in the observation car, smiling and waving her handkerchief in response to the greetings of the multitudes, created no less enthusiasm than the president.

Premature and Inadvisable.

Albany, April 30.—Ex-Gov. David B. Hill yesterday gave out the following statement: "My attention has been called to the story going the rounds of the press that I am expecting to make a political trip through the west and south either this year or next. I desire to state that I don't contemplate any such trip. When recently advised that an invitation was being prepared in the state of Washington and elsewhere requesting me to make such a visit, I immediately replied that it would be impossible, and requested an abandonment of the proposed invitation. I will state further that I am not a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination in 1904. I am neither seeking the nomination nor expecting it. I regard all suggestions of candidates at this time as premature and inadvisable. No one can now tell what can or ought to be done in 1904."

Satisfaction.

Brown—So you lost your lawsuit with Smith?

Jones—Yes; but it's a satisfaction to know that Smith didn't win anything.

"But didn't you have to pay him $1,000 damages?"

"Yes; but his lawyer got that."—Philadelphia Record.

IT CONTINUES WITH US

Equal Taxation Legislation a Bone of Contention in the State Legislature.

TRUST BILL PUT IN PIGEON HOLE

Cigarette Has a Mighty Poor Show, and Reapportionment Less—Enactment of Special Laws.

Lansing, Mich., April 30.—Like the unfortunate poor, who are always with us, the equal taxation bill is still the source of solicitude and speculation in legislative circles, and bids fair to continue so for a number of days to come. As indicated last week, the senate "knocked the filling" out of the Chandler bill as it passed the house, the vote on concurrence in the numerous sweeping amendments made by a majority of the senate railroad committee, as set forth in my last letter, standing 20 to 8. This result was reached after a number of senators had discussed the question, but the arguments availed nothing so far as changing votes was concerned, every senator's head being "sot" long before the question was brought up for settlement.

JOHN J. CARTON.
[Speaker of the Michigan House.]

The house stands firmly by its first action, even more firmly, indeed, than before. On the final passage of the bill there were a dozen or so votes recorded in the negative, but the senate amendments were rejected by a unanimous vote, every one of the ninety-two representatives present voting to stand by their guns.

Satisfactory Measure Is Probable.

The bill is now in the hands of a conference committee, which has held two sessions—one last Thursday and one today. Just what was accomplished at these meetings cannot be definitely ascertained, as they were star-chamber affairs, the newspaper men being invited to retire so that the conferrees might feel quite free to express their convictions. There is lively speculation in both houses as to what the outcome of the struggle will be. The two bodies are so far apart that there would seem to be ample opportunity for a compromise without a great deal of humiliation for either. Many profess to believe that the senate will be conceded the separate assessing board, and, in return, will consent to the reinstatement of practically all of the other provisions that were stricken from the house bill. What appears to me to be a more likely solution, however, is that the task of assessing the corporate property will be left to the state tax commission, the membership of which, however, will be increased from three to five, and the balance of the house bill restored, with possibly a few minor exceptions. Some profess to see in the situation the final enactment of a law increasing specific tax rates and a continuation of the present system of taxing these properties, but I have no doubt that some sort of an ad valorem tax bill, and a generally satisfactory one at that, will be passed.

Bump-Up Against Trusts.

Appearances would indicate that at least two of the trusts have bumped up against it during the past week. The white lead trust is reputed to be anxious to force Michigan manufacturers of this commodity who are not in the trust to label packages containing their wares so as to convey to the public the assurance that they contain nothing—but absolutely pure white lead, when it is claimed that white lead without the addition of zinc to some extent is absolutely worthless for the purposes for which is it intended. A similar bill was up two years ago and was accompanied by a very unsavory odor. It was put to sleep then, [illegible] again this year it has been sent to a hostile committee, and is not likely to be heard from again. The old-time effort of the big baking powder companies to stifle the operations of the smaller manufacturers by securing the enactment of a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of so-called alum baking powders has again come to naught, the senate having given the bill an opiate that will hold it quiet until the close of the session. The theory that alum in baking powder is depopulating the nation at an alarming rate obtained some years ago, but very few persons take any stock in it now.

Anti-Cigarette Legislation.

There is a ray of hope for the enemies of cigarettes, the house having passed the McKay bill, which prohibits the manufacture, selling or giving away within this state cigarettes or cigarette paper. The sentiment in the senate is in favor of concurrence, even the most inveterate cigarette smoker in that body having himself introduced an anti-cigarette bill. As passed by the house, the bill makes only one exception, and this is that it shall not apply to sales by any person or persons to customers outside of the state in an interstate business. The penalties for violators are very severe. For the first offense a fine of from $25 to $[illegible]00 is provided, the offender to stand committed to the county jail until the fine is paid. For the second offense the fine is to be from $100 to $500, or imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding six months.

Small Hope for Reapportionment.

Notwithstanding the numberous bills that have been introduced to reapportion the state into congressional districts, there is small hope that any changes will be made in the present apportionment. Each congressman who was elected by heavy majority last fall will be quite content with a repetition of that majority, and while one or two of them can see an opportunity for a desirable change in their districts, yet if the work of readjusting is once entered upon there will be no telling where it will end, so in all probability it will be determined to leave well enough alone.

New Normal School in Doubt.

Whether an additional normal school will be established in western Michigan, as provided in the Kelly bill, is problematical, notwithstandnig the fact that the bill has already passed the senate and bids fair to go through the house. It is stated on excellent authority that each of the three normal schools already established has ample accommodations for quite a few more students than are now enrolled, and there is a strong probability that the bill, if passed, will run foul of the governor's veto. The appropriation of $25,000 provided for in the bill is, of course, simply an entering wedge.

Gov. Bliss Calls a Halt.

Governor Bliss has called a sharp and sudden halt on what had the promise of developing into a widespread evil. It was a little thing in its inception, but had in it the elements of rapid and widespread growth. This was the enactment of special laws increasing the compensation of election inspectors. A bill affecting one of the townships of Wayne county was promptly and very properly vetoed, the executive taking the position that a multiplicity of special acts on this subject was undesirable, and that if the increase was just and proper it might better be provided for in a general act applying to inspectors generally. Once started on their blithesome way, these special acts in whom none of the legislators save those from the locality affected are interested, having a habit of insidiously spreading until all the sections of the state are gathered in under their ever-expanding folds, whereas if the same proposition were presented in a general bill, it would be slaughtered at one fell swoop. It is through special acts that so-called grafts and undesirable legislation are fastened upon the people.

Less Money Appropriated This Session.

Appropriatoin bills are now sufficiently far enough advanced to warrant the statement that this year's budget will fall several hundred thousand dollars below that of two years ago. Chairman Dingley, of the ways and means committee, states that the appropriations thus far agreed to aggregate $3,527,290.94. In addition to this there will be the general-purpose bill, carrying approximately $2,000,000, and various other bills appropriating a total of about $420,000. This will make a grand total of $5,947,290.94. The aggregate of two years ago was about $6,600,000. The amounts asked for by the various institutions and interests this year were unusually large, and it was only by the most persistent efforts of the finance committees and leaders, coupled with constant admonitions from the governor, that the total has been kept down to anything like respectable figures.

General Game Bill Finally Passes.

The general game bill as finally passed by the house permits each hunter to kill three deer if his aim is good enough to bring them down, the number originally provided in the bill being only two, and the limit fixed by the present law being five. The quail season for the lower peninsula is from Nov. 1 to Dec. 10, and in the upper peninsula from Oct. 1 to Nov. 30. A special season for partridges north of the Bay county line was fixed from Oct. 1 to Nov. 20. The spring shooting of ducks is permitted.

Display of the Flag Optoinal.

The Randall bill providing for the display of the flag over election booths on election and registration days has been amended by the house so as to make such display optional instead of compulsory, as originally provided. A concurrent resolution authorizing the governor to designate June 14 as flag day and issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the state to generally observe it has been adopted by both houses.

Pontiac and the State Fair.

The action of the executive committee of the state agricultural society in selecting Pontiac as the place for holding the state fair this year was what may be called a "distinct shock" to Grand Rapids, which was so confident that the committee would decide to go to the second city again this year that the matter was practically allowed to go by default. Grand Rapids professes not to be at all concerned about the matter, but she protests this fact so much through the columns of her newspapers that there is a lurking suspicion on the part of the public that it is something of a case of sour grapes. The bill appropriating $4,500 annually for the next two years for use by the society for premiums on Michigan products has been signed by Governor Bliss, and the money will be offered to the best possible advantage, the programme committee having been instructed to arrange classes open to Michigan products alone. No part of this fund can, under the law, go to outside parties.

Factory Inspection Legislation.

Labor Commissioner Griswold is endeavoring to secure several needed amendments to the factory inspection laws. He wants in particular provision made for the employment of a woman factory inspector, and more stringent regulations governing the employment of children. The bill provides that no male under 18 or female under 20 years of age shall be employed in any factory or store for a longer period than sixty hours in any one week; children under 14 are prohibited from being employed in factories, stores or hotels, and it is made mandatory that children between 14 and 16 years of age have a sworn statement from their parents or guardians, stating age, etc., and setting forth the fact that they can read and write, before they are eligible to employment.

JAMES V. BARRY.

Found the Combination.

Jackson, Mich., April 30.—The postoffice and general store of George D. Shearer, at Francisco, was entered by thieves Sunday night, and $61.48 in cash and $50 in stamps taken from the safe, which was found unlocked. Evidently the robbers discovered the combination, as Shearer insists that he locked the safe. Nothing else is missing. It is supposed to be the work of professionals.

Big Salmon Trout.

West Branch, Mich., April 30.—Frank Noble, while fishing on Big creek, caught a salmon trout that dressed 6½ pounds. The trout fishing season opens the 1st of May. Lots of men come from all parts of the state to fish in the fine trout streams of Ogemaw county. The brooks are alive with these fish.

Coal Mine Disaster.

South McAlester, I. T., April 30.—Five miners were killed outright yesterday, seven others were burned seriously and one is missing, the result of an explosion at the coal mines at Anderson, owned by the Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf railroad and operated by the McAlester Coal Co.

Smallpox Among the Indians.

Washington, April 30.—The bureau of Indian affairs Monday received an official report from the Tulalip Indian agency, Washington, announcing that smallpox exists not only in the state of Washington, but also in communities adjacent to the Tulalip reservation and in other reservations within the jurisdiction of Madison, Swinomish, Lummi and Tulalip reservations, and a liberal additional supply of vaccine points will be sent to the agent at Tulalip.

TOM IS ON THE SPOT

With "Ripper" Bills and is Ready for the Fray

WILL SCOUP IN EVERYTHING

The Advance Guard of the Federal Push Buttonholing Members of the Senate and House to Get Them Lined Up for the Bills.

Lansing, Mich., April 30.—Tom Navin, with a bunch of Detroit "ripper" bills in his satchel, and his derby hat tilting sidewise on his head, came breezily into town at 8 o'clock last evening. He registered at the Downey house, where he had had a room "with bath" reserved in advance by telegraph. He was accompanied by Attorney John J. Speed, W. D. Gordon, ex-Senator Wm. G. Thompson, J. Herbert Cole, Fred R. Fenton and Rep. Ames. Senator Holmes, who had been discussing the "rippers" with Navin, on the train from Detroit, followed soon after.

The advance guard of the Detroit federal republican push soon began buttonholing members of the house and senate to get them lined up for the ripper bills. Soon after, Messrs. Navin, Ames and Cole reached the capitol, Rep. McCallum, who some weeks ago cracked the McMillan whip so successfully in the house for the Ames bill to abolish off-year municipal elections in Detroit, took off his coat and began to work among the representatives in the interest of the proposed "ripper" bills. It then began to look seriously as though the federal push had, at the eleventh hour, been swung into line for the proposed legislation.

Tom Navin had a heart-to-heart talk with Rep. Hunt, who is said to be decidedly opposed to the "ripper" bill program of the Navin-Moreland push.

Men who are "on the inside" say the program includes the passage of bills empowering the Detroit common council to appoint D. W. H. Moreland, superintendent of the public works department; Frank C. Andrews superintendent of the police department, and "Bob" Bolger superintendent of the park and boulevards department, and probably bills legislating Corporation Counsel Tarsney and his assistants out of office and empowering the common council to appoint Allan H. Frazer as his successor; consolidating the office of receiver of taxes with that of the city treasurer; and, possibly, taking the appointment of the city controller away from the mayor and placing it in the common council's hands.

Detroit, Mich., April 30.—Acting in response to a number of petitions from business and professional men of this city, Mayor Maybury has called a mass meeting of citizens for to-night to take action regarding the "ripper" bills about to be presented to the legislature regarding the appointment of Detroit's municipal commissions.

CHILD FATALLY BURNED.

Started a Fire While the Mother Was Absent.

Marine City, Mich., April 30.—The 11-year-old child of James Barney, a resident of this city, was perhaps fatally burned yesterday morning. Mrs. Barney had left the children for a few minutes, leaving kindling and wood in the stove soaked with kerosene ready for lighting. The children attempted to light the fire, and the result was that the child's clothes caught fire from the explosion that followed. She ran screaming into the front yard. At about this time a Rapid Railway car going down came in sight of the house. It was stopped at once by Conductor Dave Quick, who quickly jumped off and wrapped his coat around the little one. The fire was smothered, but not before the child was fatally burned. The conductor was also severely burned about the legs, arms and face, but not fatally. Dr. F. W. Lang says the child cannot live.

A Youthful Suicide.

St. Joseph, Mich., April 30.—Arthur J. Wilson, the 19-year-old son of Mrs. Kate M. B. Wilson, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart in his room at noon yesterday. The unfortunate young lad suffered a stroke of paralysis five years ago, from which he never fully recovered. A few days ago he suffered another mild stroke. He distributed papers Monday morning, finished his duties at 11 a. m. and immediately went to his home, where he secured a revolver unnoticed by his parent and committed the deed. Mrs. Wilson is a well-known music teacher, and is prostrated by the blow.

Was Badly Used Up.

Jackson, Mich., April 30.—Ira Lugers and Joseph Douglas were attacked Sunday night by three men on East Main street, and Lugers was so badly used up that he is now at the hospital in a semi-conscious condition. Concussion of the brain is feared. Douglas says Lugers was struck with a stone, shaken and knocked down, his head striking the cement walk when he fell. The assailants have not yet been arrested.

Lugars remained unconscious till last night at 10 o'clock, when he died. Frank Daniels, Elmer Lilley and John O'Day were arrested on suspicion.

To Fix the Responsibility.

Lansing, Mich., April 30.—The state military board has appointed Lieut.-Col. George H. Turner, Capt. John C. Durst and Lieut. Frank T. Colliver members of a board of survey to meet here May 1, or as soon thereafter as possible, to fix the responsibility for loss of quartermaster's stores, ordnance and ordnance stores and camp and garrison equipage; also to view unserviceable property in the quartermaster-general's apartments of the state.

Our first regular factory for manufacturing glass was established at Temple, N. H., in 1780 and was operated by imported German glassmakers.

The Old Salon Opened.

Paris, April 30.—The Old Salon was practically opened yesterday with the official visit of President Loubet. The general opinion seems to be that the pictures, despite their immense number, are above the usual level. Among those that attract particular attention are M. Benjamin Constant's portraits of Alexander and M. Leonnett's portraits of M. Loubet. The Transvaal war inspired a number of the pictures, including several depicting incidents of Mr. Kruger's visit to France.

GERMANS FOUGHT VALIANTLY

Berlin, April 30.—The latest China specials to arrive here show that the German troops behaved with the greatest gallantry during the engagements with the forces under Gen. Liu, storming the strongest positions of the enemy even after dark, and in spite of the huge rocks rolled down upon them.

The Chinese artillery, although firing splendid guns, made in 1898 at the arsenal in Han-Yang, aimed badly. The Germans demolished the fortifications near the gates of the great wall. They suffered intensely from the heat. The French received instructions from Paris while marching toward the province of Shan-Si, but they held Ku-Kwan, which they have since left, destroying the field telegraph and thus cutting off German communications. The German press is loud in praise of the bravery of the Germans. The opinion is generally expressed that Gen. Liu's conduct was due either to the duplicity of the Chinese court or to a state of anarchy which augurs ill for the future.

"Under such conditions," says the National Zeitung, "German victories like these over larger numbers than had hitherto been encountered during the whole war—the Germans fighting one to four—have the greatest significance."

CAUGHT RED-HANDED.

"Jack the Ripper" Arrested By German Detectives.

Ludwigshafen, Baden, April 30.—The notorious "Jack the Ripper," who has assaulted and mutilated 18 women, has been caught here red-handed by two detectives attired as women.

A dispatch from Berlin, March 26, said that the Bavarian police had captured the man who, for several months previous, had been terrorizing Ludwigshafen by a succession of outrages such as were committed in the Whitechapel district of London years ago by a man who was termed "Jack the Ripper." The man then taken into custody was a butcher named Damian, but he was subsequently released.

Appreciates American Methods.

St. Petersburg, April 30.—Frank A. Vanderlip, former assistant secretary of the United States treasury, was received by the finance minister, M. De Witte, Monday. They had a long and interesting conversation. Mr. Vanderlip was greatly impressed with M. De Witte's knowledge of American affairs and appreciation of American methods. M. De Witte took occasion to again emphasize his friendship for the United States.

Wants An Explanation.

Washington, April 30.—Assistant Secretary Spalding yesterday wrote a letter to the secretary of state, asking him to request of Lord Pauncefote an explanation by the Canadian government of the seizure, on April 23, at Nanaimo, B. C., of the barge Ajax, belonging to a firm in Seattle, Wash., which was sent into Canadian waters to raise the wrecked steamer Willamette, which is said to be in violation of the Canadian laws.

The First Conviction In Years.

New York, April 30.—Benjamin Levy, alias Bernard Leroy, was yesterday convicted of bookmaking before Recorder Goff in general sessions and remanded for sentence. This is the first bookmaking conviction in this country in years. Levy was arrested by agents of the Society of Crime in a poolroom raid, and detectives swore they had purchased tickets on the New Orleans races in the room.

Signed the Engineers' Scale.

Buffalo, April 30.—The strike of the marine engineers, so far as Buffalo is concerned, is practically off. Two of the leading lines, the Anchor and the Western Transit Co., signed their engineers at the rate demanded by them and it is expected the other lines will follow. The engineers' association was not recognized.

His Eminence Won Kentucky Derby.

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—His Eminence won the Kentucky Derby, Sannazarro second, Driscoll third; time, 2:07¾.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, but, he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1 1-2 boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." For eruptions, eczema, tetter salt rheum, sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them. C. A. Wright will guarantee satisfaction or refund money Only 50 cents.

A BOLT OF ELECTRICITY

Causes the Death of an Edison Employe in Detroit.

Detroit, April 30.—An accident happened yesterday morning at the substation of the Edison Illuminating Co., located at the Michigan Central railroad and Foundry street, resulting in the death of Burr Lively.

Lively was standing on a ladder painting a transformer, when his hand came in contact with a live wire bearing a heavy current of electricity. The poor man was killed almost instantly, the electricity entering at the tip of the middle finger of his right hand and leaving his body through his feet, burning clean holes through the soles of his shoes.

The unfortunate man quivered for a moment on the ladder and then fell heavily to the asphalt floor.

He has been an oiler for the Edison company for 10 years. At his home are a widow and three children. He was a member of the Maccabees.

DISASTROUS FIRE

Destroys the River Raisin Paper Co.'s Plant.

Monroe, Mich., April 30.—The most disastrous fire in Monroe in the past decade occurred at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, when the River Raisin Paper Co.'s plant was gutted. The fire department responded promptly, but the only thing they could save was boilers and engine. The valuable paper machinery is a total loss, and the building nothing but a heap of charred wood and ashes. The loss is between $20,000 and $30,000. Manager Waldron could not be seen, but banks say the insurance nearly covers the loss. The Union Trust Co. of Detroit owned the plant up to a year ago. About $3,000 repairs were completed Saturday. The fire is thought to have originated from a cinder pile. It is a serious blow to Monroe, throwing 60 men out of work.

Found Wandering Around.

Battle Creek, Mich., April 30.—Jas. H. Brown, president of the state live stock commission, was found eight miles from this city Monday by a farmer wandering around in a dazed condition. He was brought to his home, from which he had been absent since Saturday. He is completely broken down and unable to tell how he reached the country. Later he was taken to his father's farm in the country for rest. Since his trial at Lansing, which resulted in a disagreement, he has suffered from nervous collapse.

Cut His Head Off.

Houghton, Mich., April 30.—James Hoolihan, aged 27, a deckhand on Hingston & Wood's dredge No. 10, at the ship canal, was killed Monday morning when the dredge started for work for the season, in a most extraordinary manner. He was attending the rope at the spool of the dredge, when a slack noose in some way caught around his neck, and before the doomed man could extricate himself the rope tightened and his head rolled upon the dock, severad as cleanly as if with the executioner's sword.

Carrie Nation's Husband Robbed.

Indianapolis, April 30.—A special to the Sentinel from Marion, Ind., says: David Nation, husband of Carrie Nation, was robbed of $78 in cash, some jewelry and his return railroad ticket at Wichita yesterday. Mr. Nation attended a circus and later, it is said, visited a saloon, where, it is alleged, he was robbed.

Large Land Owner Dead.

Springfield, Ill., April 30.—Hon. Clinton H. Moore, one of the largest land owners in the west, died yesterday at his home in Clinton, Ill. For half a century he had been a leading lawyer in Central Illinois, and in early life traveled the circuit with Abraham Lincoln. His estate is valued at $2,000,000.

U. S. Treasury Statement.

Washington, April 30.—Monday's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $158,207,875; gold, $95,545,133.

Victory for Possart.

Chicago, April 30.—The feature of the racing Monday was the victory of Possart, the American Derby candidate, who won by a dozen lengths.

The Way to Force Plants to Branch.

There is only one way in which a plant can be forced to branch, and that is by cutting off the stalk. The plant thus interfered with will make an effort to grow, and either a new shoot will be sent up to take the place of the lost top or several shoots will be sent out along the stalk. If but one starts, cut it back. Keep up this cutting back process until you have prepared as many branches as you think are needed. Persistency and patience will oblige the plant to do as you would like to have it do.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Poor Target Practice.

A general was hard pressed in battle and on the point of giving way when suddenly a spirit soldier came to his rescue and enabled him to win a great victory. Prostrating himself on the ground, he asked the spirit's name. "I am the god of the target," replied the spirit. "And how have I merited your godship's kind assistance?" inquired the general. "I am grateful to you," answered the spirit, "because in your days of practice you never once hit me."—From "A Century of Chinese Literature."

What They Got.

On his way home from the lodge Mr. Jymes was held up by footpads and relieved of all his valuables.

"What did they get, Rufus?" anxiously asked Mrs. Jymes after he had reached his home and reported his loss.

To Drive Ants From the Lawn.

Fine coal ashes sprinkled about the burrows of ants will cause them to leave. Ashes may be used on the lawn without injury to the grass. Sifted ashes are best, but those fresh from the stove, shaken from the stove shovel, will answer the purpose very well.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Raging, Roaring Flood

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Omaha said I had consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." Positively guaranteed for coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles by C. A. Wright. Price 50c and $1.00.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

There was a subdued sound of sniffling on the balcony without. Over the moonlit Alpine sea the mater was gazing toward the shores of France and wondering if many mothers had such trials as daughters at whose farthingales dangled half the eligibles in society. Smythe's mother, it seems, had taken up the pen to second the plaintive baa of her golden calf and was dealing trenchant blows at her old crony, the mother of the belle of the season.

"Mother will be in here in a moment, Darcy. You must be frank with me, and Rokeby may be up any moment. You will stay here until you've had time to look about you?"

"I've had plenty of time today. Everything's settled. Tell Rokeby I'm sorry I shan't be able to take him bear and elk hunting, as I promised."

"Do you mean you're going soon—tomorrow?"

"No," said Gray, rising. "I'm going tonight."

One instant the beautiful face beside him wore an expression of utter woe, of genuine sympathy and sorrow, then decked itself with winning and conventional smiles, for the salon door, opening at the moment, revealed young hopeful, the brother, tugging at the hand of the other hopeful, monocled. Knickers and evening dress confronted each other at the threshold. Rejected Yank, accepted Briton, met as do modern mortal rivals without sign of rancor.

"Er—ah—what's up, Gray?"

"Nothing. I'm down."

By the midnight express he left via Bern for Basel. He could not face the throng of inquisitive sympathizers on the morrow. He meant to skip away unnoticed, but he had been too genuinely popular, and there are men and many of them, Briton or Boston, who will go out of their way to say good words to a fellow in distress. Three of them trailed Gray to the station and ran him to earth on the train, and said impetuous things about being his banker, and made other offers impossible to take seriously. The only thing he could take was a drink with all three, until they tumbled off at the conductor's shrill summons, and through the night, under the glitter of the lamps, something came gleaming and spinning, and he caught Rokeby's handsome flask and Rokeby's parting words:

"Take a drink for me once in awhile, will you, old boy? Au revoir."

CHAPTER I.

The major was sprawled on the broad of his back under the shade of a spreading cottonwood, a slouch hat, battered and weather stained, pulled well down over his fine, dark brown eyes, their heavy brows concealed by its jagged brim, their long, thick, curling lashes downward sweeping toward the bronzed, sun tanned cheeks. The bristling beard and curling black mustache concealed the lines of the mouth and jaws, rendering speculation as to the major's characteristics mere guesswork, which wouldn't be the case, said Captain Trotter, a physiognomist of the first order in his own estimation, if the major's face were, as usual with him in garrison, freshly and cleanly shaved except as to the upper lip. Open at the throat, the major's dark blue flannel shirt rolled easily back, revealing a black waste of hairy stubble down to the protuberant "Adam's apple," below which the fair skin showed almost as white as a child's and well nigh as soft. A devotee to cold water was the major, even in his cups, and that, too, in days when the traditions of the great war still held sway in the cavalry and the cocktail was the rule, not the exception, at morning stable call. Not that he preached the doctrine of total abstinence or looked upon himself as a model of virtue in any way. "Whisky never did me any good," was his modest explanation. "I never seemed to need it or to care for it. I never saw any fun in getting full, and the only time I ever did, it made me sick for a week—a thing that never happened to me before or since. If you like it, Ray, or if it agrees with you, Blake, why, go ahead. So long as you don't get full and neglect your business, it's none of mine." Time was in the regimental past, as the major very well knew and the minors sometimes said, when Ray occasionally "got full" and when Blake seemed to think it agreed with him—until the day afterward at least. But Blake and Ray had found reason to part company with their old familiar friend, that intimacy having led, as often do others, to later estrangement; that familiarity having bred contempt; that warmth, as Tom Hood would have said, having produced a coldness.

"Singed cats" was what the unreconciled of the subalterns called these erstwhile jovial blades, but never where either "cat" could hear, as each was known to be unpleasantly ready to back his views. Both officers had so far mended their ways in this respect that neither would sip from the seductive bowl, yet each was entirely willing that the rest of the commissioned list should be free agents in the matter, with the possible exceptions of Brady, who never drank that he didn't make an ass of himself, and Rawson, who never drank that he didn't make trouble for somebody else.

And about these five men—the major, whose name is spelled M-a-i-n-w-a-r-i-n-g and always pronounced "Mannering," and Ray and Blake, who have often appeared in these chronicles of bygone frontier days, and Brady and Rawson, who have never yet so appeared and who never will again so far as this chronicler is concerned—about these five men and one other yet to appear hangs most of this story—these six men and just two women.

Place aux dames, though this bivouac on the Boxelder was no place for them whatever, and neither woman was there at the time, and only one of them was known to any one of the men referred to. One of the women was Mrs. Mainwaring, and the other, a spinster, was Kate Leroy.

It was a hot day, a dusty day, and the command could prove it without the use of a word as it unsaddled in the grove and men and horses made for the nearest water. They had marched since early morn and covered 20 miles when the trumpets rang the signal for the final halt. They had been winding for hours in long column of twos down the sandy bottom of a vanished creek, and the sight of this oasis in the desert, the clump of cottonwoods with its outlying stragglers farther down stream, was indeed a grateful one. It told of the presence of living water, and the regiment, said Trooper Kelly, "was as dhry as the chaplain's temperance sermon the night before Patrick's day in the morning."

Mainwaring's four troops, being first on the ground, pre-empted what grass there was before breaking for the spring. Trooper law reserved to the horses of the owner all space within lariat length of the firmly driven picket pin, and woe to the man that "jumped the claim." In like manner had the major's "striker" pre-empted the biggest cottonwood for his master's roof tree, and there, dusted, shaken and smoothly spread, were the major's blankets when, fresh from his dip in the stream, that sturdy, keen eyed, compactly built soldier came back for his rest.

And there he lay, the picture of trooper content, beguiling the moments until dinner should be ready and trying hard not to go to sleep meantime, with a copy of "Les Miserables," hauled from the depth of his capacious saddlebags. Having had little schooling to speak of, Mainwaring was an assiduous reader of fiction, and prided himself on the fact.

Presently, without lifting his eye from the page or glancing toward the party interrogated, who was sprawling in similar fashion under an adjacent tree, the major popped the following question:

"Blake, what's savvy ke pew?"

And Blake, without lifting his eyes from the written pages of the missive in his lean brown hand, responded, after the manner of soldier folk, "Damfino."

The major's brows contracted in a scowl. Suspiciously he glanced at his long legged comrade. "Thought you spoke French," said he.

To which Blake blandly responded, with modest and not inexcusable hesitancy:

"Well—er—not always. Isn't it—possibly sauve qui peut?"

"Well, sove ke puh, then," responded Mainwaring, with disdainful emphasis on the convenient monosyllable. "What's that?"

"That," said Blake, "is what the girls say when Brady tries to dance—jump for your lives and—Brady take the hindmost. It's polite French for 'the jig is up.'"

Captain Ray, stretched at ease upon a costly Navajo blanket of which he was inordinately proud, reached out with his moccasined foot and indented the canvas re-enforcement of his comrade's field riding breeches. "Quit it, Blake," he muttered.

But the major needed no man to protect his interests. He might not know French, but he knew Blake and liked him—ordinarily

"I more than half thought you didn't know, Legs," he said, with a yawn. "Legs" was a regimental pet name for the longest and lankiest of the commissioned list. "You West Pointers have nearly all had two years' schooling in that tongue, and another year in Spanish, and I'm blessed if ever a one of you could speak either. I'd have a heap more respect for you if you'd come out like a man and say you didn't know, like Ray, for instance. There's no nonsense about him."

Here Blake kicked backward, in delighted return of his comrade's broad hint. "Well, major," he hastened to say, "my translation was a trifle free perhaps, but the phrase is a clumsy one to turn into English. Ray will agree with me as to the translation. The main trouble with his French is the accent. It's a combination of blue grass and Apache."

"Well, he has the good sense to keep it to himself then," answered Mainwaring, still a trifle sulky. "I'd pattern after him if I were you."

"Faith and so I would, major mine, did not my innocent associates so often take me for a lexicon. But now you ought to speak French like a native. Mrs. Mainwaring does. You couldn't have a better teacher, and Stannard says all a man needs to learn anything in this world are brains and time. You've got lots of—time."

"What's that about Stannard?" interrupted the major sharply, and Blake's diversion had told, as he meant that it should. If there was one man in the army of whom Mainwaring was jealous, it was Stannard. He, like Stannard, had been a capital troop commander for years. He had attained at last the rank of major, vice Barry, promoted, only a year or so after Stannard; had served just as well as had Stannard; had as fine a war record, and an honored and honorable name; had a charming wife, health and competence, yet mourned in secret—even at times made audible moan—over the fact that among the officers and men of the regiment what Stannard said, thought, did, was never to be questioned. Stannard was authority on all points of soldiering; Stannard was the expert engineer, builder, draftsman, topographer and all round military "sharp;" while he, Mainwaring, whose troop had been a model, whose battalion was now really in finer shape than Stannard's, and who had abundant means and spent where Stannard saved, was looked upon in the cavalry as a good soldier, a fine officer, despite his surly mannerisms, and yet because he hadn't enjoyed Stannard's advantages and a college or even high school training he must submit to perennial playing of second fiddle. It set him against Stannard, and it led eventually to trouble.

"If you'd only be wise, Leonard," his brighter better half had said to him, "you wouldn't ask questions of Blake. Look it up in the encyclopedia, or even ask me."

"Why, hang it, Laura," interrupted the major, "half my years are spent in saddle out in the field. You and the encyclopedia are a month's march away. I can't help wanting to know what things mean."

"Then ask Captain Truscott or Captain Freeman." She knew too much to wound him by suggesting Stannard. "Blake's propensity to burlesque everything is irresistible unless you happen to be alone with him." And Mainwaring would promise, and despite his promise would fall, for, as he frankly admitted, he couldn't help wanting to know, you know, and, as it never occurred to him that he could mispronounce any word, foreign or domestic, poor Mainwaring was eternally putting his foot in it. He and Tommy Hollis were Blake's entire delight, and neither man could resent his witticisms, even when they verged on the personal, for Blake, like Ray, was a regimental idol because of deeds that won a tribute outvying the Victoria cross or congressional medal of honor. Mainwaring swore by both as soldiers, and Hollis fairly worshiped Blake. But Tommy was away on other duty just now, and the shafts of the long legged captain's ridicule fell most improperly on his sluggish witted chief.

Blake did not thoroughly like him. He thought Mainwaring selfish, opinionated and conceited. He admitted him to be a first rate soldier, a fine drillmaster and tactician, a truthful, honest and pure minded man, a devoted husband and father—in fact, one of the representative men of the cavalry. It wasn't that he was narrow (his tolerance on the whisky question was an evidence that he was not), yet he was "buttheaded," said Blake. "He's perpetually referring to Ray and to me as the exponents of the liquor habit, when both of us quit long ago. We all like Stannard, and he doesn't; at least he is always ready to disparage anything Stannard says or does, and if he were Stannard's senior instead of junior he'd overrule any decision or order of Stannard's just because it was Stannard's. So when he comes out with his bulls I can't help goading him a bit. Somebody's got to keep him in check or we'll be getting the laugh from those fellows of the Eleventh and Twelfth."

"They wouldn't see the blunders, Blake, only you show 'em up," said Ray, in remonstrance, and with not a little reason, for Blake was incorrigible. "Some day you'll cut Mainwaring to the quick, and he comes of a stock that hits hard and doesn't forgive easy or forget at all. Better hold off, Legs."

And "hold off" Legs had to for several days of a dreary homeward march, dreary because the colonel meant to rest the horses thoroughly after a fierce and furious chase and campaign, and so made short marches where the officers and men would gladly have made two a day. The road was dusty, the October sunshine was hot and dry, the nights were snapping cold, but here at last they were only one day out from their new station, Fort Ransom, and Blake had broken bonds again. Raising himself on elbow and peering across the blue shirted shoulder of his friend, Ray could see that Mainwaring was still glowering at him and evidently pondering over that reference to his having time enough to learn anything. As yet its full significance was not apparent, but it was the policy of wisdom to distract his attention and set his wits to work on something else. Like the horse, which noble animal Mainwaring almost worshiped, he could consider only one point at a time. So up rose Ray and strolled over to him. "If you've no objections, major, I'd like to ask the colonel to let my quartermaster sergeant ride into Ransom tonight. He tells me his wife is quite ill. The ambulance is going and will give him a lift. We'll lead his horse with the troop tomorrow."

"Why not ride him in tonight?" asked Mainwaring, who had served but little under Atherton since the war and knew not how strict were his rules regarding horses.

"Because the colonel wishes every horse to share and share alike. The sergeant's horse would have an extra 20 miles if ridden in tonight. Yonder comes Stannard's battalion now," he said, pointing to the dust cloud sailing slowly toward them from the north. "He'll bivouac above us, I reckon."

"Yes, and spoil our water, like as not," growled Mainwaring. "But we've got the grass and shade."

"Devil doubt you," muttered Blake, "and you've got the best of both." Then aloud: "Ask the old man, with my compliments, if I may do him the honor of dining with him tomorrow, Billy. Mrs. Atherton has everything ready for his coming, I'll be bound, while your better half and mine and the major's here can't come till we get there and choose quarters."

"Mrs. Mainwaring will be there quicker than I will," said the major promptly.

"That's all easily explained. Mrs. Mainwaring knows the major's quarters can go to nobody but the major, and she can move in at once. We poor devils of troop leaders must wait till our seniors have chosen. What's more, Mrs. Mainwaring has no nurse and babies to look after."

"No, but she's bringing a companion with her in the shape of her niece that she's often talked to me about. I think I told you about her—Miss Leroy. She's been abroad for a year and wants to come and see something of her own country. They ought to reach Butte tonight or early in the morning."

"Will she?" exclaimed Blake. "Then like as not she'll have an escort. Rawson's coming out with a batch of recruits."

"Bah!" growled Mainwaring, who had little use for Rawson or any other officer who was away on leave when his regiment was in the field. "Mrs. Mainwaring's never met him, and if she had would feel mighty small security in his escort—a fellow that'll be held up with a whole carload of passengers by only two robbers."

Mainwaring alluded to a matter that was a sore spot in the —th and that never yet had been fully explained. But Mr. Rawson, three months earlier that summer, had unquestionably been relieved of his few valuables at the point of the pistol on the K. P. road. The regiment meant to worry the life out of him when he rejoined, but didn't like it that Mainwaring, a newcomer, should be the first to crack the whip. Blake almost wanted to blaze up, but thought it best perhaps to wait for Ray, and so subsided.

He Had Molted.

"That fellow is a bird," said the admiring stranger as he looked after the fresh young man.

"Not now," replied the native, "but there was a time when your description might have been justified."

"When was that?"

"The night we tarred and feathered him about a year ago."—Chicago Post.

Hygienic.

"Your poetry," we ventured, "is eminently healthy!"

"It should be!" rejoined the poet, with dignity. "I am always extremely careful to boil my Pierian spring water before drinking, or, rather, quaffing it!"—Detroit Journal.

For Those Who Smoke.

The great point in pipe smoking is to learn to smoke slowly. When this habit is acquired, the full flavor of the tobacco will always be enjoyed, every smoke will be a cool one, and tongue burning will be unknown. It is, however, very hard for nervous people to smoke slowly. We know of cases where smokers have tried for a score of years to check their smoking speed without success. They probably did not begin to make the effort early enough in their smoking careers. With good tobacco and a root pipe the slow smoker attains a degree of pleasurable enjoyment in smoking of which the rapid smoker has not an inkling.

Perhaps all smokers do not know that it makes no difference in the flavor of pipe tobacco how many times a pipe goes out. A cigar which is allowed to go out once has its flavor ruined and is most appreciably termed a butt. A pipe, however, tastes, if anything, better for going out.

Fastidious smokers always have at least two pipes at hand and never fill one until it has entirely cooled off. This is a help toward cool smoking and reasonable life in a pipe. A good test by which to tell if you are smoking too fast is to hold the bowl in your hand. If it is too hot to do so, then you may know your speed is too great.—Exchange.

The Slav and Woman.

Abhorrent even to the strongest "Slavophile" is the position occupied by woman in the family and in social life. To escape the charge of prejudice I shall quote a few proverbs current among the southern Slavs—a few out of many hundreds:

The man is the head; the woman is grass.
One man is worth more than ten women.
A man of straw is worth more than a woman of gold.
Let the dog bark, but let the woman keep silent.
He who does not beat his wife is no man.
"What shall I get when I marry?" asks a boy of his father. "For your wife a stick; for your children a switch."
Twice in his life is a man happy—once when he marries and once when he buries his wife.

And the woman sings, in the Russian folksong which I have freely translated,

Love me true and love me quick,
Pull my hair and use the stick.

Although there are love songs of another kind, in which woman is praised for her charms, she becomes virtually a slave as soon as she marries, and the little poetry of the folksong does not accompany her even to the marriage altar. She is valued only for the work she can do in a household and for the children she can bear, and should this latter blessing be denied her her lot becomes doubly pitiable, and she often seeks release by suicide.—Outlook.

Naming the White House.

Why is the president's mansion at Washington called the White House? It has been so called for years and years, and now no one thinks of using any other name, although "executive mansion" is the official term. The name White House is a reminder of the second war with England. Aug. 24, 1814, the British army captured Washington and burned the public buildings, the president's mansion being among those to suffer. It was damaged to some extent, and to hide the fire stains it was painted white, and white it has been painted every year or two since.

The home of Washington's mother was called the "white house," and this may have suggested the name, but the fact that the mansion was so assiduously painted white after the war of 1812 doubtless brought the term into popular use.

Verdi and Bismarck on Titles.

The composer Verdi was offered a title of nobility by King Victor Emmanuel. It was intended that he should be created Marquis or Comte de Busseto, after the estate upon which he lived. The composer refused the offer energetically. He considered that Verdi was somebody and that the Marquis de Busseto would be nobody.

Even Bismarck was unable to parry a blow of this character. When the young emperor broke with him, he conferred upon him the title of Duke of Lauenbourg. Bismarck received the parchment with this exclamation:

"A pretty name! It will be handy for traveling incognito."

Bismarck, to whom it was delivered, being then at table, arose and, offering the letter to his wife, remarked ironically:

"Duchess, enchanted to make your acquaintance!"

Where He Shone.

A Thespian who spent several years trying to get beyond "the carriage awaits milord" station in first class Broadway productions was induced by his brother to join him in the dairy business in the City of Mexico. While on a business trip to this city recently buying new machinery and appliances for his prosperous Mexican creameries he met one of his former companions who was still struggling for an opportunity to "say lines." An exchange of confidences revealed the fact that the former actor was now making a snug fortune in the milk business, and his friend, the persevering player, remarked: "You're all right, Billy. You could never have shone in a theatrical way, but you are a star in a milky way."—New York Sun.

The Word Gazette.

The word "gazette" is from the name of an old Venetian coin worth about one-half cent of our money. The name is applied to newspapers because it was the sum charged for reading the first written journals that made their appearance in 1550. After the paper was read it was handed back to the owner, who charged the next comer a gazette for taking a peep at it.

English Robes of State.

Every robemaker in London always keeps some of the most expensive robes of state—those of a registrar, for instance—ready and lends them out when officials have to use them at any great ceremony. Many a peer, when his portrait is to be added to the family picture gallery, has obtained the crimson and ermine from his tailor for a small consideration.

Why She Discarded Him.

"Don't despair, Edward, even if father does say you'll be young enough to marry five years from now."

"Oh, I don't care for myself, but how about you?"—Philadelphia Times.

The editor of the Fordville, Ky., Miscellaneous writes as a postscript a business letter: "I was cured of kidney trouble by taking Foley's Kidney Cure." Take nothing else. J. J. Orr.

RAILROAD NEWS.

It was learned here to-day that, at a recent meeting of the Cincinnati Northern, J. H. Seaman tendered his resignation as vice president and secretary of the company. C. E. Schoff, general manager of the Big Four, was selected as Mr. Seaman's successor. The change is only a part of the arrangement by which the Vanderbilts will take charge of the Cincinnati Northern. The property is now virtually a part of the Big Four. When Mr. Seaman took charge of the Cincinnati Northern three years ago, the security holders were about ready to take up the road and sell it for scrap iron. It was on the market at almost any price but no buyer could be found. The recent spirited bidding for the property by the Vanderbilts and Woodfords tells the story of the point to which the road was brought under the management of Mr. Seaman.—Toledo Blade.

Miss Grace Alberts, who for the past six weeks has been visiting her grandparents at Cincinnati, came home Saturday morning. Her grandfather, Mr Spillard, accompanied her, returning yesterday morning.

Mrs. Jennie Graham, of Pasadena, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Bert Mize, returned home this morning. Mrs. Mize accompanied her as far as Marshall.

Ernest Keathly, of Battle Creek, was in town Sunday.

A Bold Burglary.

Mrs. Ruth Ayres, widow of Andrew Ayres, a lady of 80, who lives alone in an old hotel building at Springville, was the victim of a bold burglary last Friday morning. Her daughter lives in the next house and it is her practice to go over every morning and see if her mother needs anything. She found the doors locked Friday morning and suspected something had happened, procured a ladder and gained entrance through a chamber window. She found the lady unconscious, having been gagged, blindfolded and tied to the bedstead. Her hands were drawn up and securely tied to a bedpost, one on each side, and the ankles were secured in a like manner, both wrists and ankles being cut by the cord used in tying her. Marks on her body showed she had been pounded, as she said, to make her tell where her money was hidden.

Strange to say, Mrs. Ayres was not much injured, yet considerably prostrated by the excitement. The object was robbery, as the house was thoroughly ransacked. The lady is positive she could identify the scoundrels if she should see them. She is supposed to have had a large amount of money but declines to give any information as to how much, but on the floor was picked up a $50 bill and one of $20.

A party of men have lately been robbing the cottages at Sand Lake and some of them have been arrested, warrants having been sworn out for the arrest of two more. These two are the suspected ones in the burglary.

BIG PILGRIMAGE TO TECUMSEH.

D. O. K. K. will Travel in State May 16—Imperial Prince Hinsey Will Lead the Caravan.

About 175 members of Mecca temple, Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan, will go to Tecumseh, May 16, in a special train, to initiate a big class. There will be 100 knights from Detroit, 20 from Mt. Clemens, 20 from Port Huron and delegations from Monroe, Milan, Northville and Oxford. They will leave Detroit at 4:50 p. m., and on reaching Tecumseh will form a gala procession to the hotels, where the knights will be regaled and the camels watered preparatory to the trip across the hot sands.

Imperial Prince John A. Hinsey, of Chicago, will come to Detroit to lead the pilgrimage, and Imperial Secretary H. W. Belding, of St. Louis, Mo., is expected to take part in the festivities. The entire jurisdiction of the D. O. K. K. is taking great interest in the trip. The special train, on the return, will leave Tecumseh at 1:30 a. m., Khorassan time.—Detroit Free Press.

Holloway—Carpenter.

Wednesday evening, April 24, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Phoebe Carpenter, of Holloway, and in the presence of about thirty guests Miss Grace became the wife of Kenneth Holloway, Rev. DeSpelder performing the ceremony. Miss Bertha Macham acted as bridesmaid and Lloyd Bartholomew as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Holloway were the recipients of many pretty and useful gifts consisting mostly of silver.

The bride and groom are both well known here, the groom having attended school here for some time. Among the guests from out of town were: Mrs. Gloves and Mrs. Spaford, of Manchester, cousins of the bride, Miss Grace Carnahan, of Adrian, Ed. Dawson, of Ottawa Lake, and Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Whelan, of Tipton.

First Ball Game of the Season.

The first game of ball of the season was played on the ball grounds Saturday afternoon between the Clinton Stars and the Brownvilles of Tecumseh. It was a very exciting game and close for seven innings but the home boys made a good ending by their heavy hits. The features of the game were the pitching of Marsh and the heavy hitting of Hanna. The score was 10 and 20 in favor of the Tecumseh boys. The two teams are playing a series of three games and this is a good start for the home team.

Knew All Their Tricks.

"Gentlemen," said Frederick the Great, "I am entirely dissatisfied with the cavalry. The regiments are completely out of hand; there is no accuracy, no order; the men ride like tailors. I beg that this may not occur again and that each of you will pay more attention to his duty, but I know how things go on. You think I am not up to your dodges, but I know them all and will recapitulate them.

"When the season for riding drill comes on, the captain sends for the sergeant major and says: 'I have an appointment this morning at ——. Tell the first lieutenant to take the rides.' So the sergeant major goes to the senior subaltern and gives him the message, and the latter says: 'What! The captain will be away? Then I am off hunting. Tell the second lieutenant to take the men.' And the second lieutenant, who is probably still in bed, says: 'What, both of them away? Then I will stay where I am. I was up till 3 this morning at a dance. Tell the cornet I am ill and he must take the rides.' Finally the cornet remarks: 'Look here, sergeant major, what is the good of my standing out there in the cold? You know all about it much better than I do. You go and take them,' and so it goes, and what must be the end of it all? What can I hope to do with such cavalry before the enemy?"—"History of Frederick the Great."

By Main Strength.

Mr. Jowders looked gloomily at the letter to which he had just painfully affixed his signature and then cast a dubious glance at his wife.

"Do you want to just run this over before I send it to son James?" he inquired, and when Mrs. Jowders shook her head he hastily folded the sheet, which bore the marks of hours of toil, and thrust it into an envelope, which he sealed with trembling expedition and then leaned back in his chair with an air of relief.

"I was afeared you'd want to read it, and then most likely 'twould be all to do over again, mother, like the last one," he said, "but I'm glad James wrote he didn't mind a word misspelled here and there. There's some things I can do, but I never could seem to get a good purchase on the system of spelling, some way.

"As I view it," continued Mr. Jowders, "there's some words you can spell by the looks and some you can spell by the sound. Them I can most gen'ally manage, but when you come to spelling by jedgment and main strength my chances are about as slim as they make 'em."—St. Louis Republic.

A Policy Approved.

"No," said the policeman kindly, but firmly, "you cannot photograph that statue."

"Why not?" asked the tourist.

"Because it is against the law."

The tourist looked at the statue in question, a massive piece of contract work, and then answered:

"Well, I don't blame you. It's always decenter for people to keep their troubles to themselves instead of letting them be advertised all over the country."—Washington Star.

George Pocklington.

George Pocklington, son of Cornelius and Mary Pocklington, was born in Yorkshire, England, Jan. 20, 1820. He was married to Sarah Burleigh March 31, 1844, the wedding occurring in the church and on Sunday. A few weeks after his marriage, he and his bride came to America, being seven weeks in crossing on a sailing vessel. They made a slow passage on the canal through New York and by boat to Monroe, then on foot to Ridgeway. He first settled below the ridge about three miles from Ridgeway, but in 1865 moved to the home in which he died.

He did not aspire to any official position in church or municipality, but was one of the first members of the M. E. society here before a church was built, when they worshipped in an old schoolhouse. He was regular in his attendance at worship and a liberal supporter of the church; a true friend, a manly man and very much respected and beloved by his neighbors and friends.

His health generally was good for the 81 years of his life. He was sick only a week with pneumonia and, although he had the best of care by his friends and devoted wife and grandson, yet it was soon seen that he must die. He passed away April 17th at 9 a. m.

His daughter, Mrs. Russell, and grand-daughter, Mrs. McRoberts, both came to his bedside from Lansing, almost at the peril of their lives, both being quite ill.

The funeral was largely attended at the home by numerous relatives and friends, six of the nephews acting as pallbearers. A beautiful floral pillow, inscribed 1844-1901, was brought by friends who had intended to make a golden wedding, but had been disappointed by sickness. A floral piece of lillies, representing the only daughter, was placed upon the casket. Another of six roses represented the six grandchildren and one of five carnations the five great grandchildren.

The large concourse of people in attendance at the funeral manifested the great respect held for Mr. Pocklington in this community. Services were conducted by his pastor. One aged brother, John Pocklington, attended the funeral and was deeply moved on this sad occasion.

LITERARY NOTES.

Pan-America is the coming sensation, and art, letters, science and commerce are feeling the influence. Hence such an appropriate tale as "The Slavery of Moises," which Edwin Knight Buttolph contributes to the May "New" Lippincott Magazine.

Many women have been reproached for living for the sole object of entertaining. No one doubts that such an aim is petty and narrowing, but it is equally certain that it is a woman's duty to understand The Art of Entertaining, and this forms the subject of an attractive and useful article by Lady Jeune in The Cosmopolitan for May.

An earnest plea for the preservation of Niagara from the encroachment of commercial and manufacturing interests, so far as these may injure the beauty of the greatest natural wonder of America, is made in The Outlook's Magazine Number for May by Miss Mary B. AN AGED VETERAN.

A Detroit Veteran talks of the War and a Legacy it Left Him.

When the annual reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found veteran O. P. Newcomb, of Detroit, at his place of residence, No. 237 Second street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words of advice tersely told. He said:

"A lake covering about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of 20 mules, is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed through during the civil war, and it is no wonder that G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these troubles can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or any one suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

NAPOLEON'S WISDOM.

THE GREAT GENERAL UNDERSTOOD THE VALUE OF DISCUSSION.

It Does For the Brain What Exercise Does For the Muscles—The Mighty Corsican's Ideas on Religion and the First Great Cause.

Man exercises his muscles to improve them. He competes muscularly with his fellows, and rivalry of muscle ends in muscular improvement all around.

The importance of discussion Napoleon appreciated thoroughly.

And when he discussed, he discussed like a big man, selecting questions to exhaust the mind and lead far away into fields of conjecture and widest speculation.

His was no dreamer's brain, giving to speculation the time needed for doing. First came the real work of the day or hour—the planning and finishing of details, from the disposing of army corps to the smallest final arrangements.

Then, free from actual work, seeking relief from concentrated application, his brain sought rest in talk worth while.

On his voyage to Egypt, determined to waste no time, he organized serious discussion as methodically as he ever organized a fighting plan.

The discussions were regularly appointed affairs.

Needless to say, Napoleon arranged everything and controlled everything.

He selected the subject for discussion, he chose the three or four on each side to support and oppose any given proposition.

These were his favorite topics: First, the art of war; second, the art of government; third, religion.

From his point of view his chief subjects for discussion were admirably chosen. They represented the only two things he cared for here below and the final question affecting his fate hereafter.

But his field of thought, like the scope of his ambition, was unlimited.

Once he asked his chosen debaters to decide whether the planets are inhabited.

Again, he discussed this earth's probable ending, by fire or water.

He discussed also the meaning of dreams and the value of "presentiments."

In practical life he discarded everything save realities, but in discussion all abstract questions interested him.

It may interest you to know that in general he denied positively the existence of hell—perhaps that was caution on his part—and maintained that no man should die without confessing his sins:

"Only a fool says that he will die without a confessor. There is so much we do not know and that we cannot explain."

It is deeply characteristic of Napoleon's thought that he should have declared for Mohammedanism in preference to Christianity.

He admired the religion of Mohammed "because it conquered one-half the world in ten years, whereas it took 300 years for Christianity to establish itself."

The old French king became converted because he thought the Christian God beat his pagan god in battle. Napoleon had not traveled far beyond that old king.

The man who seeks for all sorts of wisdom in Napoleon will be deeply disappointed when he comes to analyze the great fighter's religious thought.

But for the hero worshiper there is comfort in this:

On the deck of his ship on a fine night there was much irreverent, flippant, materialistic chatter. The revolution had made stupid atheism fashionable.

But Napoleon was impressed by the calm night, the blue, dark water and the silent, beautiful stars shining down in cosmic rebuke of the tiny blasphemers below.

He stopped very abruptly the prattle of atheism.

Toward the stars he pointed the short, thick arm so soon to rule this little planet.

"You may talk as long as you please, gentlemen, but who made all that?"

There was no answer, and there was no more atheism that night.

The man who was to build up the code Napoleon could appreciate the force and necessity of law. His mind realized the feebleness of man, coping even with little problems of earth.

He felt that great laws and a Great Lawgiver must swing and direct those millions of silent worlds above.

When Napoleon was still a Corsican patriot, the great Paoli said to him:

"Napoleon, you are not a modern. You talk like the heroes of Plutarch."

Earnestness of the old kind was indeed Napoleon's characteristic—as emperor, planning to rule Asia from the back of an ornamented elephant, or as a poor, half starved lad, taking off his muddy shoes to enter the presence of the matronly Mme. Permon and listening to her stories of descent from the emperors of Constantinople.

Napoleon in his hours of work was a doer, and in his hours of leisure he was a discusser.

He exercised constantly the two sides of his brain, the practical and speculative.

QUAINT SAM HOUSTON

HIS PICTURESQUE ATTITUDE IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

Clad In an Indian Blanket, His Principal Employment Was Whittling Pine Sticks—His Quitclaim Deed to One Hundred and Sixty Acres of Land.

General Sam Houston of Texas was the most picturesque figure in the senate during my first years of service at the capitol. Like Benton, he was very fond of young men and soon came to count me as "one of his boys." Only those who were youngsters in the forties can realize the interest people felt in Houston in the days when his part in the struggle for the independence of Texas was still fresh in the public mind. Visitors to the senate chamber invariably asked to have him pointed out to them, and they were never disappointed in their hero, for he was large of frame, of stately carriage and dignified demeanor and had a lionlike countenance.

Always unconventional in dress, he would now and then appear at the capitol wearing a vast and showy sombrero and a Mexican blanket, a sort of ornamental bedquilt with a slit in the middle through which the wearer's head was thrust, leaving the blanket to hang in folds around the body. His principal employment in the senate was whittling pine sticks, of which he seemed to have an unlimited supply. It was only at rare intervals that he broke silence, but when he did speak he always proved himself capable of contributing his quota of sound and patriotic advice to the deliberations of the senate.

No passage in Houston's career was nobler than the heroic stand against disunion which marked its close, while of his kindliness of nature and generous helpfulness to those in distress one could recall stories sufficient to fill a volume.

Near Quincy, Ills., there was a stretch of country known as the "Indian tract," to which Houston held title, a fact many of the settlers thereon, a careless pioneer brood, failed to search out. One of them called upon William A. Richardson, long member of the house from the Quincy district and subsequently a senator from his state, and asked if he knew Houston. Richardson said he did, whereupon his visitor confided to him that he had inadvertently settled upon 160 acres of Houston's land and that all he was worth stood in improvements on it. He wanted Richardson to see Houston and make the best terms that he could. Richardson upon his return to Washington told Houston the story and asked what he would take for a quitclaim deed to the 160 acres.

"What sort of a man is this constituent of yours who has blundered upon my land?" asked Houston.

"A good, square, honest man," was the reply.

"When I turn him off my land, I reckon he and his family will be beggars?"

Richardson nodded.

"What's this farm worth now?" asked Houston.

"Improvements and all about $6,000," was the response.

"What was the bare place worth when you fellows went on it?" queried Houston.

"About $5 an acre; $800 in all," answered Richardson.

"Best in the world," said Richardson.

"Tell him to send me $800, and I'll make him a deed."

In due time the $800 reached Washington in the shape of a New York draft. Richardson sought Houston, who, having executed a deed, took the draft and indorsed it.

"You say this man of yours is a good fellow?" he asked thoughtfully.

"Couldn't be a better one," was the emphatic answer.

"Send him back this draft and tell him Sam Houston has changed his mind. What can you buy a good saddle horse for out in that country?" He was told that $200 would do it. "Well, then," said Houston, "write to your friend and tell him to buy a first class saddle horse about 4 years old and keep him for me. When congress adjourns, I will go home with you and ride the horse down to Texas."

Without delay the man in Illinois received back his draft and bought a saddle horse, the best he could find. Just before adjournment Houston sought Richardson. "You say the fellow who's got my horse is a tiptop good man?" Richardson again declared him one of the best in his district. "Well," said Houston, with a sigh, "I should have liked first rate to see him and also my horse, but as affairs turn out I must go straight to Texas. When you get home, go over and see this man and tell him to sell the horse and do what he pleases with the money. And, by the way, Richardson, I wish you would write and tell me if it was a good horse or not."—Personal Recollections of Galusha A. Grow as Related to Rufus Rockwell Wilson in Saturday Evening Post.

A Boasting Epitaph.

Stop, passenger, until my life you read.
The living may get knowledge by the dead.
Five times five years I lived a maiden's life;
Ten times five years I lived a widow chaste.
Now, weary of this mortal life, I rest.
Between my cradle and my grave have been
Eight mighty kings of Scotland and a queen.
Four times five years the commonwealth I saw;
Ten times the subjects rose against the law.
Twice did I see old prelacy pulled down,
And twice the cloak was humbled by the gown.
An end of Stewart's race I saw; nay, more—
My native country sold for English ore.
Such desolations in my life have been;
I have an end of all perfection seen.

This lady was born in 1613 and lived to the age of 125 and, therefore, must have lived through the following list of rulers: James I, Charles I, the commonwealth of Oliver Cromwell as protector, Charles II, James II, William III and Mary, Anne, George I and George II.—London Chronicle.

Methods of Curing Jungle Fever.

I got over my attack, but it was a marvel that I did. One morning my doctor bled me till there was scarcely a drop of blood left in my body. He then gave me 40 grains of calomel, and in the evening, as the fever was still raging, he ordered me to be taken out to the yard of my quarters, laid on a bare rattan couch and buckets of cold water thrown over me for about 20 minutes! I was then put back to bed and fortunately fell asleep for several hours. After some weeks on the sick list, I was able to return to my post at Kornegalle.—"Fifty Years In Ceylon."

Easily Explained.

A Glasgow cabby once had as a fare an Inverness minister and his wife. He had to drive them through the poorer districts of the city, and on reaching their destination the minister, at the same time handing cabby his legal fare, asked:

"Why are there so many poor people in this city, cabman?"

Jehu looked hard at the parson for a minute before he replied:

"Well, sir, I'm no verra sure; but, ye see, maist o' the poor folk drive cabs, and tips are scarce here."—London Answers.

Slowest Yet.

"Blitherby's restaurant has the slowest service I ever saw," said the gentleman with the gloomy brow.

"How's that?" asked the individual with the overworked smile.

"I ordered some eggs there once, and I had to wait so long that they brought me"—

"Chickens?"

"No; eggs that had been laid by the chickens hatched from the eggs I had ordered."—Baltimore American.

The Truth at Last.

"Oh, doctor, is it very dangerous to swallow cement?"

"Very dangerous, indeed."

"And gutta percha, doctor?"

"Very serious."

"And porcelain—oh, doctor, is it very poisonous?"

"Excuse me, madam; have you attempted suicide?"

"No; I've swallowed one of my false teeth."—Pearson's.

Off Again, on Again.

"Very well," said she in a huff; "all is over between us. I'll thank you to return my letters."

"All right," said he; "I'll send them to you the first thing in the morning."

"Oh, there's no killing hurry! Suppose you—er—bring them with you when you call tomorrow evening."—Philadelphia Press.

CHILD LOVE.

Two little arms were clinging,
And a little head was pressed
(The rosy face all hidden)
Closely against my breast.

"What is it, dear?" I questioned,
Caressing the golden head.
Whispering sweetly and shyly,
"I love you!" the darling said.

What had I given to win it—
This offering pure and sweet?
A story told in the twilight,
A merry word when we meet?

Oh, child love, so gladly offered,
So easily won, I pray
Through life I may find this treasure
Mine, as it is today!

There are trials to meet and vanquish
And sorrows crowned with the years,
And lips curve less to smiling,
And eyes fill oft with tears,

But the heavy heart grows lighter,
Half of its grief beguiled,
When love, with a heaven born impulse,
Speaks from the lips of a child!

COUNTERFEIT ART.

Americans Are Easily Swindled on Pictures by "Old Masters."

There will doubtless never come a time in the history of the art world when the discovery of "old masters" will cease, certainly not as long as American picture buyers possess the almighty dollar and are willing to be swindled.

Nearly every week in New York for the last year there have been auction sales of "rare old masters." Some of them are rare, indeed; one that was shown at the Macbeth gallery and also in Detroit some time ago, supposed to be a study of an old man by Rubens, the left hand of which was nearly twice the size of its mate, and the term "rare" did certainly apply very aptly to the flesh tints.

Do people ever stop to think how many of these "old masters" there are in existence? Any one may have an "old master" these days who has the "price to pay the dealer to find one or, go abroad and get one 'made.'" There are many artists in Paris and elsewhere who make a good living, or what they consider a good living, copying "old masters" in the various galleries to sell to dealers for little or nothing, and they in turn bring them to America and clear hundreds by selling them to some moneyed art lover who in some cases is doubtless in the possession of more money than judgment in art matters.

One well known New York art collector some time ago paid a large sum for a certain painting that an enterprising dealer had "discovered" and who represented it to him as very rare and the only one in existence. The same gentleman while on a recent tour through Spain was shown the original painting upon the walls of a certain monastery. The sequel of the story does not say what he did with the dealer. If there be a hereafter for these discoverers of "old masters," their consciences, which seem very elastic, will have to do a deal of rubbering to get back to the required shape to fit them for their celestial abiding places or to meet the frowns of the shades of departed masters themselves.—Detroit News Tribune.

A Fiend Collector Snubbed.

Collectors of autographs, postcards, etc., are not always conscious of the importunacy of their demands, and the following anecdote, which comes from Triest, gives a striking example of their failing and of the humorous way in which the intended victim treated his tormentor. An Italian painter received a letter in the following terms:

> Dear Sir—I should like to ask you a great favor and hope you will excuse the liberty I take. I am making a collection of painted postcards and should feel myself highly flattered if you would kindly send me one, with a little picture painted on it by yourself. It will certainly be the most treasured card of my collection, as I should be able to say that you were one of the first to honor me in this way. Hoping to receive one, I beg to thank you in advance.

The artist replied:

> Dear Sir—I should like to ask you a great favor and hope you will excuse the liberty I take. I am making a collection of thousand franc notes and should feel myself highly flattered if you would kindly send me one. It will certainly be the most highly treasured thousand franc note of my collection, as I should be able to say that you were one of the first to honor me in this way. Hoping to receive one, I beg to thank you in advance.

Bread and Cheese.

A couple advanced in years got married lately.

The husband had a room in the house securely locked, the inside of which his wife had never seen, and, being curious as to its contents, she begged again and again to see the room.

At last he consented, and, lo and behold, the room was full of whole cheeses!

He explained matters by telling her that for every sweetheart he had in his young days he bought a cheese.

His wife began to cry.

"Don't cry, dear," he continued. "I've had no sweetheart since I met you."

"It's not that," she replied, still sobbing. "I only wish I had been as thoughtful as you and bought a loaf of bread for every man that kissed me. We could have had bread and cheese enough to last us all our days."—London Tit-Bits.

Wheels and Wheels.

The woman who had been abroad was describing some of the sights of her trip to her friends. "But what pleased me as much as anything," she continued, "was the wonderful clock at Strassburg."

"Oh, how I should love to see it!" gushed the girl in pink. "I am so interested in such things. And did you see the celebrated watch on the Rhine too?"—Kansas City Star.

Remembered Whole Books.

Walter Savage Landor carried his library in his head. When he had read a book, he always gave it away on principle, having, as he said, observed that with such a purpose in his mind he was sure to retain of a book all that was worth keeping. In his old age Landor was furious if he did not at once remember any passage of a book or any name or date.

Forever Settled.

She—I tell you the moral superiority of woman is recognized in the language itself. There isn't any feminine for "rascals." Is there?

BRONCHITIS

We Know is Hard to Control.

Our Vinol is Making a Wonderful Record in Curing This Dangerous Disease.

CALL AND LET US TELL YOU ABOUT IT.

Here is a letter that has just come to our attention. It will interest people suffering from bronchial troubles. It is from Mr. Geo. W. Brown, of So. Hanover, N. H., and reads as follows:

"I have suffered with bronchial troubles for over a year; tried two doctors and have taken three or four kinds of medicine, none of which did me any good. At times I was so hoarse I could not speak. Then I heard of Vinol. After taking three bottles of it my voice has perfectly returned to me. I can see that in a short time I will be all right. When I began to take it I was very weak, but it has built me up and given me a good appetite."

This is what Vinol always does. This is the way Vinol accomplishes its mission of doing good.

Vinol, as we wish every one to know, owes its power of accomplishing the cures that it effects to the fact that it contains the most wonderful medicinal elements known to science for the cure of all wasting diseases, as well as being in itself a marvelous tonic. These medicinal properties exist and have heretofore been found only in cod-liver oil. Vinol contains these elements. For by a scientific process the necessary curative properties of the cod-liver oil have been separated from the fat and grease which formerly made cod-liver oil preparations so objectionable.

As long as Vinol does not contain any of the vile-smelling oil, and is prepared by combining the sought-after properties with a delicate table wine, it is a most delicious and palatable preparation.

We know of what we speak when we recommend Vinol, and because we do know that Vinol does all we claim for it, we unhesitatingly endorse it, and guarantee at any time to refund the money paid for the remedy if you are not satisfied it will do all we claim for it.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

For coughs and colds Benson's Porous Plasters are an incomparably better remedy than any other—external or internal. Their medicinal properties enter the skin and go straight to the seat of the disease.

They relieve and cure a "seated" cold without disturbing the system or upsetting the stomach. Cough mixtures often nauseate. Benson's Plasters are medicinal in the highest degree, and quickest to act.

Placed on the chest or back or on both at once in serious cases, the good effect is felt immediately. The congestion yields, the cough abates and the breathing improves.

Lung or bronchial affections or kidney disease, are cured with the least possible suffering and loss of time.

Benson's Plasters are immeasurably superior to Belladonna, Strengthening, Capsicum or any other combination in plaster form. They are also preferable to ointments, liniments and salves.

Benson's Plasters have received fifty-five highest awards over all competitors; and more than 5,000 physicians and druggists have declared them to be one of the few trustworthy household remedies. For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

OLD NEW ORLEANS

Visited by President McKinley and His Party

RIGHT ROYALLY RECEIVED

The Weather Could Not Have Been Fairer—The Entire Population Apparently Was Out to See the Presidential Party.

New Orleans, May 3.—The day in New Orleans will live long in the memory of the president and of his party. In no other city in the United States is the old and romantic preserved and placed in such sharp contrast with the modern as in the Crescent City, and as the presidential party drove through the flower-embowered city from the new into the old French and Spanish quarter, it was like passing mysteriously from America into a foreign land, from this country into another that has gone. And the illusion of the transition was heightened by the interesting ceremonies which occurred in the old cabildo, the seat of the government of the former Spanish and French rulers, which is preserved in its original by the Louisiana Historical society.

The weather could not have been fairer. The entire population apparently was out to see the chief magistrate. After a short visit to the Southern university, where a thousand colored students greeted the president with waving bits of colored bunting, so arranged as to make the whole an American flag and where the president made a brief speech, the party passed across Canal and Rampart streets, the boundaries of the new city, into the old town, with its narrow streets, its quaint galleried residences, its cathedrals, old Spanish buildings and the French market, all with the flavor of another generation and all now unfortunately going into picturesque ruin. There was a striking picture when the party drew up before the moldering cabildo, over 150 years old, which is situated opposite what is now called Jackson square, but which, in the old days, was the Place d'Armes, where Spanish generals formerly drilled their soldiers. As the president alighted, a squad of the cadets blew a fanfare on their French trumpets, the Louisiana field artillery fired a salute of 21 guns and the bells of the cathedral and all the churches in the quarter pealed out their welcome. As in a dream, the visitors were carried back to the days long ago when Spanish kings ruled here, and to that memorable day almost a century ago, when the keys of the city of New Orleans were delivered up in this very room to Wilkinson and Claiborne, the American commissioners, and French dominion over the Louisiana territory passed to the sovereignty of the United States.

Alcee Fortier, a distinguished creole, president of the Louisiana Historical society, recalled these great events in his address to the president, and the president in his response dwelt upon their momentous bearing upon the world's history. The president spoke as follows:

"I rise only for the purpose of making acknowledgment to the Louisiana Historical association for its cordial and generous welcome to this historic place. It has been a great honor to me to be received here by the governor of this great commonwealth, by the chief justice and his associates of its highest court, by the mayor of the city to this place, memorable not only in American annals but memorable in the annals of the world. (Applause.) I am glad to stand near by where that great transaction took place which transferred the Louisiana territory to the flag of the stars. A transaction which changed the map of the world and made this union what it now is,—the strongest and the freest nation on the face of the earth." (Great applause.)

When he had concluded, the president appeared upon the balcony to show himself to the waiting thousands outside. The cadets below presented arms and the square and the building surrounding it fluttered with handkerchiefs and flags, while the air was torn by the hoarse roar of the shouts of the multitude. He acknowledged the demonstration with a bow, right and left, and spoke as follows:

"My fellow citizens: I have great honor in standing on this historic ground to receive the greetings of my countrymen, and to recall the fact that here nearly 100 years ago a great scene was enacted that dedicated a larger area than the original 13 states to liberty and union forever." (Applause.)

The party then returned to the hotel for luncheon and in the afternoon embarked on a Mississippi river steamboat for a trip along the river front, from Audubon park to the battlefield of Chalmette, where the monument erected in memory of the defeat of Packenham by Gen. Jackson commands a view of the river. A little further up and on the Algiers side of the stream the presidential party had a good view of the preparations now being made for the reception of the new floating dry dock in course of construction for the government at Sparrows Point, Maryland.

The ladies of the party had remained quietly at the hotel during the ceremonies of the morning, only a few of them taking a quiet ride about the city, but they participated in the river trip and enjoyed it.

At 6 o'clock last night the presidential special resumed its long journey to the Pacific. Houston, Texas, was reached this morning.

Three Negroes Found Dead.

Selma, Ala., May 3.—Three negroes were found dead yesterday in a cabin in which Deputy Sheriff Edwards was killed Sunday night, 10 miles south of Selma. They are supposed to have been implicated in the murder of Edwards. The negroes are terrorized and fleeing to this city. There is no clue as to who did the shooting.

Curiously, the men who are easiest to get along with are the very men who have no faculty for getting along.—Detroit Journal.

Best Way to Cure Backache.

Backaches are caused by disorder in the kidneys. Foley's Kidney Cure will make the kidneys right. Take no substitute. J. J. Orr.

B. Presson, Pressonville, Kans. writes: "Nothing like Foley's Honey and Tar" is the universal verdict of all who have used it. Especially has this been true of coughs accompanying la grippe. Not a single bottle failed to give relief. J. J. Orr.

PRESIDENT SHAFFER CONFIDENT

That the Iron and Steel Workers' Wages Will Be Raised.

Pittsburg, May 3.—Arrangements were completed yesterday morning by President T. J. Shaffer, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tinworkers, for an earlier adjustment of wages than usual, owing to the annual convention being held on the 21st of this month. The wage scales of the three branches of the organization are fixed bimonthly under the annual agreement, based on the selling prices.

There is every indication of advances in the iron and sheet workers' wages. The latter will receive an advance of at least 6 per cent. The pay of the puddlers is likely to be increased to $5.25 a ton, and the finishers will get a proportionate advance of 4 per cent. The tin plate workers will not get any increase this time, as the selling price fixed by the American Tin Plate Co. remains unchanged, and is below the base of the scale.

President Shaffer is confident that the workers will receive an advance, but will not make any prediction as to the amount.

Brother and Sister's Affection for One Another.

El Dorado, Kas., May 3.—Jessie Morrison, charged with the murder of Mrs. Olin Castle, her former admirer's wife, here last June, and who was tried in November for murder, the jury disagreeing, is acting as a nurse for her brother Hayward, who has smallpox. When Hayward was taken ill his father, mother and brother left home for the country, but Miss Jessie remained to care for him. She has never had the smallpox, and if taken sick it may interfere with her second trial, set for June.

Miss Morrison has been her brother's favorite, and when the tragedy took place he gave her several hundred dollars he saved teaching school. With this money he expected to attend the Paris exposition, but he gave up the trip to assist in defending his sister.

Hayward was with his sister in the cell both day and night for a long time after she was arrested, and was with her during the greater part of the trial.

Miss Morrison has been out on bond since her first trial and has spent part of the time on her brother's farm.

Keeping Tab on American Army.

Berlin, May 3.—A military contributor in the Berliner Neueste Nachrichten reviews, with much detail, the reorganization of the American army. The writer points out a number of improvements, especially that the commanding general of the artillery arm is appointed from the branch of the service that has commands, but considers it a disadvantage that the new general staff about to be formed should be composed of line officers detailed every four years.

Statistics On Bubonic Plague.

London, May 3.—Sir Walter F. Hely-Hutchinson, the governor of Cape Colony, has wired the colonial secretary, Mr. Chamberlain, that the total of deaths due to the bubonic plague up to April 27, is 217. This number includes 41 Europeans. If the reported cases at Mafeking, that have the symptoms of the plague, are embodied in the report the total number of cases would be 519, these including 135 Europeans.

In Honor of American Visitors.

London, May 3.—The chamber of commerce has selected a large committee, including Lords Rothschild, Avebury, Revelstoke and Hillingdon, the lord mayor, Mr. Frank Green and Sir Thos. Lipton, to receive the visiting delegates of the New York chamber of commerce. Besides a banquet, a garden party will be given in honor of the American visitors.

Increase of Population.

Melbourne, Australia, May 3.—The population of the district of Victoria according to the last census report, is 1,195,874. This is an increase of 5,469 in the last ten years.

Filippino Insurrectionists Fire Into Batangas

WASTED THEIR AMMUNITION

It Is Again Reported That Cailles Will Shortly Surrender—The Remainder of Gen. Tino's Army Are Giving Themselves Up.

Batangas, Isle of Luzon, May 3.—A score of insurrectionists fired into the town last night. No casualties were reported. The few outlaws remaining in the province have been nearly pacified.

The commission has established a government at Sorsegon, at the southern end of the island of Luzon, and has appointed Capt. J. G. Livingston, of New York, governor, and Capt. E. W. Terry of the Forty-seventh regiment treasurer. The conditions at Sorsegon are regarded as admirable.

The commission touched at Marindique yesterday and fulfilled the pledge made that if the insurgents surrendered, municipalities would be organized and a separate provisional government established at Marindique. Capt. Brandholdt was a candidate for governor, but a native was appointed.

The commission will go to Nadia today.

Felix Roxas, editor of the Democracia, a daily organ of the federalists, has been appointed governor of Botangas. Lieut. R. D. Blanchard, of the Thirty-eighth volunteer infantry, was appointed treasurer.

Manila, May 3.—The evidence for the defense in the trial of Capt. James C. Reed, ex-depot commissary at Manila, charged with soliciting and receiving bribes and other official misconduct, was submitted yesterday. It is generally believed the court will find Reed guilty.

It is again reported that Cailles will shortly surrender. The remnants of Tinio's army are surrendering.

Married in a Police Station.

Chicago, May 3.—Martha Snyder, the 17-year-old girl from Steubenville, O., and Fred Cook, in whose company she was arrested Tuesday night, while they were attempting to board a freight train, were married in the armory police court yesterday. Miss Snyder wore a boy's cap and suit. Her hair was cut short and to all appearances she was one of a number of boy prisoners. Cook did not have money to pay for the license, so the court attaches, policemen and reporters contributed enough to pay the expenses of the wedding and give the couple $7 surplus to start life on.

Broke Up the Meeting.

Nyack, N. Y., May 3.—Norman Hemingway, from Kansas City, who has been living in Rockland county for several months, was initiated in the lodge of Odd Fellows at Spring Valley last night. During part of the ceremony W. R. Sherwood, an officer of the lodge, acted in a stern manner and rushed toward Hemingway, intending it as a joke. Hemingway thought Sherwood was in earnest and pulled out a revolver and fired it. The powder burned Sherwood's face, but the bullet missed him. There was great excitement in the lodge, and the incident broke up the meeting.

Intense Heat at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, May 3.—The intense heat of Wednesday and Thursday has practically closed several of the bar mills in the city and badly crippled several others. Several workmen were completely exhausted and others were almost prostrated, and with the heat and the scarcity of workmen the manufacturers are having all the trouble that could come their way. There is a tremendous demand for iron and steel, and muck bars are scarce because the manufacturers cannot get men to work.

Statue Unveiled.

New York, May 3.—A statue of Henry B. Hyde, the founder of the Equitable Life Insurance Co., was unveiled yesterday in the arcade of the company's building. The ceremonies were brief. Speeches were made by Senator Chauncey M. Depew and Jas. W. Alexander.

This Is Too Much.

Rome, May 3.—The Capitain Flassa of this city announces that King Victor Emmanuel will sign a decree next Sunday creating a new order, to be known as the Order of the Knights of Labor, which will be conferred upon citizens, including workmen, distinguished in the study of labor questions or the amelioration of the condition of the laboring classes.

A Brilliant Comet Seen.

Santiago de Chile, May 3.—A brilliant comet was seen after sunset last evening in the western district.

BASE BALL.

American League.—Chicago 5, Detroit 8; attendance, 2,200. Baltimore 11, Washington 4; Milwaukee 9, Cleveland 7; Boston 23, Philadelphia 12.

National League.—Brooklyn 5, Philadelphia 4; Cincinnati 16, St. Louis 12; Pittsburg 3, Chicago 2.

Western League.—Toledo 7, Marion 4; Indianapolis 10, Dayton 1; Louisville 14, Columbus 2; Fort Wayne 7, Grand Rapids 8.

Mrs. Sankey Dead.

Newcastle, Pa., May 3.—Mrs. Mary Sankey, mother of Ira D. Sankey, the world famous evangelist and singer, died at her home in this city Thursday. She was 90 years old, being born July 17, 1811, and death was caused by the infirmities attendant upon her advanced years.

Animal Peculiarities.

If a female fox (vixen) gets caught in a steel trap and is discovered by the male or fox dog, it is said he invariably kills her, although I have not heard it stated that the vixen would kill the dog fox or another vixen or the male another male.

If a cow becomes impaled on a fence and groans with pain, the whole herd instantly rush wildly to the spot, fight and apparently do their best to destroy her if not beaten off.

A hog confined with others in a pen breaks out and on being returned to the pen is at once set upon and bitten by the others.

Why, with all the instinct animals possess, is the desire so strong to injure or destroy rather than to help or rescue?—New York Sun.

THE GAUGE OF BATTLE.

W. J. Bryan Says It Has Been Taken Up By Senator Tillman.

Lincoln, Neb., May 3.—In a statement made yesterday W. J. Bryan takes Senator McLaurin, of South Carolina, to task for what he declares is his political flop. At the same time Mr. Bryan admits Senator McLaurin's action marks the beginning of a movement in the south, which will have an influence upon the policies of the nation. He says:

"It is not likely that Mr. McLaurin will be the leader of the movement because he is handicapped by the fact that he is using his official position to misrepresent the views and interests of his constituents, but some leader will arise to give direction and force to the aristocratic and plutocratic element for which Mr. McLaurin speaks. There is such an element in each community, and now that the race question no longer unifies the white people of the southern states, it will doubtless manifest itself.

"Senator Tillman has already taken up the gauge of battle thrown down by Senator McLaurin, and will doubtless be able to marshall a considerable majority in that state, but the same influences are at work in other states where there is greater danger of their success.

"The democratic sentiment is strong enough to resist and overcome the McLaurin movement, but those who believe that the man is more important than the dollar will have to bestir themselves."

JIM FAIR'S ESTATE.

Bulk Will Be Distributed Among His Children.

San Francisco, May 3.—The supreme court has rendered a decision in the Fair will case, the effect of which is to distribute $20,000,000 among the three heirs of Senator Fair.

The decision is probably final, for the chances of an appeal to the supreme court of the United States are small. The ruling of Judge Slack, of the lower court, is upheld, and the trust declared by the will of Senator Fair is void.

This means that, after the payment of special legacies, the remainder of the estate will be divided among the three children—Theresa Oelrichs, Virginia Vanderbilt and Charles Fair.

As the remainder of the estate, after the payment of special legacies, is valued at $20,000,000, each of the three children will get at least $6,666,666.

People Pouring In.

Mountainview, O. T., May 3.—Thousands of people are pouring into southwestern Oklahoma and camping in and about the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache and Wichita Indian reservations, for the opening schedule for some time in August. It will be possible for the government to have the land ready for settlement much sooner than Aug. 6, the last day on which the land may be opened. The law regulating the opening does not require any notice to be given. Little attention is given to the order to keep out of the reservations, and covered wagons may be seen from almost any hill top.

One Result of the Trust.

Youngstown, O., May 3.—One hundred and fifty men were discharged at the steel rail department of the National Steel Co.'s plant yesterday. It is stated that the steel rail mill now in this city will be discontinued and removed to Chicago, to be added to the steel rail department of the Illinois Steel Co. The plant is now under the control of the United States Steel Corporation.

Two Thousand Pounds a Week.

London, May 3.—A dispatch to the Daily Express from Vienna says that Pietro Mascagni, the Italian composer, has signed a contract for a tour of the United States. He will start Oct. 15 and take with him an orchestra of 80 members. His personal stipend will be £2,000 a week for eight weeks.

Starvation and Typhus.

St. Petersburg, May 3.—Starvation and typhus are increasing among the village population of Bessabarabia. Seventy per cent of the people of that district have lost all their horses and have no seed for spring sowing.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

Gen. von Hahnke, until recently chief of the emperor's military cabinet, has been appointed governor of Berlin.

Oshkosh, Wis., high school, a four-story brick structure, was destroyed by fire. Loss, $70,000; insurance, $16,000.

Melvin C. Dodge, Hamilton college 1890 and librarian of the college several years, has been appointed librarian of Leland Stanford, Jr., university, California, at a salary of $5,000 per year.

Brig.-Gen. Henry L. Burnett, U. S. V., was elected commander of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States at the annual dinner and meeting held in New York.

Fr. Gregory Loggio, pastor of the Catholic church at Mountain View, Cal., positively identified C. B. Crill, the Dunham suspect, as a man whom he married under that name to Miss Dora Schreiber, at Pueblo, Col., in 1887.

The London bar will rally in force at the coming dinner of the Hardwicke society given in honor of Maitre Labori. Nearly all the leaders of the English bench and bar will join in this tribute of respect to a great French advocate.

A partial confirmation of the police suspicion that William Rosenfield drowned his four children and himself one week ago in the Mississippi river was obtained when the body of the 9-year-old Rosenfield boy was taken from the river near Fort Snelling.

Amos Sterling, colored, was convicted in Philadelphia of murder in the first degree for the killing of Roy Wilson, the young University of Pennsylvania professor, who was robbed and beaten to death with an iron bar on a street in West Philadelphia on May 15 last. Two other negroes are under death sentence for complicity in the murder.

Won.

"Dear," said young Mrs. Jellus, "I thought you ought to know. There's a married man who is violently in love with me."

"What?" he cried. "Who is he?"

"If I tell you, will you give me those earrings I wanted?"

"Yes. Who is it?"

"You."—Philadelphia Press.

Beardless Soldiers.

Modern warriors generally wear hair on their frontispieces. It is thought to give them a martial appearance. But Alexander's invincible soldiers were all bare faced. He compelled them to shave for a sufficient reason—viz. lest the "outside barbarians" of Asia should seize them by their beards and so capture them.

TO BE CONSULTED

Railroads Will be Heard on the Compromise Tax Bill

TO COME UP NEXT TUESDAY

Bill to Prevent Druggists and Pharmacists From Selling Liquor Without a Saloon License Defeated—Grand Rapids Bill Passed.

Lansing, Mich., May 3.—It is expected that Senator Atwood will go to Detroit shortly to find out whether the railroad people will permit the senate to make a compromise with the house by authorizing the state tax commission to be increased in membership from three to five, and charging it with the work of assessing railroad and other corporate property under the ad valorem system. Senator A. L. Holmes will probably accompany Atwood. At a short meeting of the conference committees yesterday afternoon members of the house committee told Senators Atwood and Holmes that it was up to them to decide whether the proposed compromise should be recommended. They called attention to the fact that the house had unanimously declared opposition to the senate plan for the creation of a separate board of assessors. Atwood asked that an adjournment be taken till next Tuesday afternoon in order to give him opportunity to confer with his associates in the senate. Some of the representatives figure that he wished also to have a chance to consult the railroad people. Members of the house conference committee privately declare that Atwood's move looks like an indication to them that the majority of the members of the senate committee will agree Tuesday to recommend that the membership of the tax commission be increased from three to five.

Senator Nichols and Reps. Chandler, Dingley and Atwood are lined up solidly for the tax commission compromise proposition.

Chairman Holmes, of the senate conference committee, said last night, when asked if he would yield any as to the stand for a separate board:

"I am one of the most reasonable men in the legislature. I sincerely believe the committees will get together, and probably next Tuesday. I personally believe now, as hitherto, that the specific tax system is the one railroads should be taxed under."

The senate voted not to concur in the house amendments to the joint resolution for the state to reimburse Ingham county for the expense of the late grand jury and the state trials relative to allowance of the claims of ex-Judge Cahill, special counsel. It was claimed Cahill's bill was not a county but a state claim. The bill was the special order. On Senator Doherty's motion the house amendments relative to paying ex-Judge Cahill were stricken from the bill, and the senate concurred in this action of the committee of the whole by a vote of 18 to 7. Robson made a long-winded opposition to Doherty. He also wanted to raise the figures from $10,000 to $16,000, but was beaten. On third reading the bill was tabled on Robson's motion.

After a lively discussion the house, in committee of the whole, passed Senator Humphrey's bill, which seeks to prevent druggists and pharmacists from selling liquors without a saloon license. Later, however, the bill was defeated by the house, 49 to 19.

The bill provides that bottled liquors shall not be displayed in any drug store windows or sold in drug stores. If the secretary of the pharmacy board shows that a registered pharmacist has violated the law in either of these respects, the board is empowered to revoke the latter's license.

The senate yesterday passed another ripper bill, to amend the charter of the city of Grand Rapids. It is aimed at Mayor Perry and City Attorney Salsbury, democrats. Provision is made that the mayor, city attorney and a few other officers shall be elected by direct vote of the people, but the provisions of the proposed law relative to the city attorney are not to go into effect till May, 1902.

Manistee Will Get It.

Cadillac, Mich., May 3.—The state military board met here yesterday and looked over Cadillac's proffered site for the state encampment. The board was greatly impressed with the natural beauty of the location, and particularly with the magnificent lake frontage, extending for a distance of nearly two miles. It was decided, however, that it was impractical for this year, on account of the vast amount of work to be performed in preparing the grounds for the encampment. The board therefore decided unanimously in favor of Manistee for this year.

A Peculiar Law Suit.

Port Huron, Mich., May 3.—Mrs. Mary C. McCouth has commenced a peculiar suit against Chester Wansey, administrator of the estate of John A. Wansey. She alleges that an agreement was entered into between her husband and the late John Wansey for the purchase of a half interest in the Davidson & Wansey salt block for $25,000. It is claimed part of the money was paid, and she asks the court to dissolve the partnership and appoint a receiver to wind up the affairs of the company.

Will Stay In America.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 3.—Mrs. Ellen G. White, the prophetess of the Seventh Day adventists, will not return to Coornborg, Australia, where she has been living for the past eight years, but has bought a farm at St. Helena, California, where there has been located a branch sanitarium, and will spend her declining years there. She will leave for her new home May 15, by the Northern Pacific route, and will stop along the way wherever there is an adventist church and make her people a visit.

SWEPT OVER THE RAPIDS.

Boat Containing Two Persons Tipped Over.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 3.—A small boat, containing two persons, presumably boys or young men, was swept over the rapids of the St. Mary's river yesterday afternoon. Neither boat nor passengers have been seen since.

The boat was seen above the International bridge about 3 o'clock. One of the passengers was rowing hard against the current, but the boat was carried under the bridge and caught by the rush of the waters below it. It overturned when a few hundred feet below the bridge and the two attempted to retain hold of it. They were finally dragged from the overturned boat and disappeared.

The boat was carried down the rapids and has not been picked up. Wm. Sweet, keeper of the light at the western end of the ship canal, and a number of others witnessed the accident.

TWO BOATS DAMAGED,

And Others Are In Danger in the Ice Jam.

Marine City, Mich., May 3.—At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the ice began to move, but only for a short time. Within a few minutes vessel after vessel went adrift. The boats have been lying three abreast along the water front here.

As the ice came down upon them, the lines began to break with reports like cannon shots. Steam had been kept up on all the boats, so as to be ready for any emergency.

The Northwestern made fast after drifting some 300 yards down the shore. Half a mile down the river a group of vessels got adrift with serious results. The stern of the Uranus crashed into the stem of the Pickands, and carried away part of the forward deck house. The Uranus suffered almost as much in her after deck house, and it is said will lose her rudder as well.

U. P. Merchants Invited.

Detroit, Mich., May 3.—At a meeting of the Merchants & Manufacturers' Exchange yesterday morning it was decided to invite the upper peninsula merchants to attend the bicentennial celebration in Detroit July 24-26. The members of the exchange will be asked to send in lists of names, comprising their customers in the upper peninsula, and the merchants so recommended will receive personal invitations.

The Hottest May Day.

St. Joseph, Mich., May 3.—Tuesday was the hottest May first in the history of this section. The temperature in this city at 3 o'clock in the afternoon was 85, while at Stevensville, a small hamlet south of here, it was 92 in the shade. There were several heat prostrations. The severe heat is rushing the fruit crop to an abnormally early harvest.

May Succeed W. H. Elliott.

Lansing, Mich., May 3.—State Banking Commissioner George L. Maltz may be appointed a member of the national republican committee to succeed the late Wm. H. Elliott. He was a member of the committee before Mr. Elliott was elected last November. The state central committee will make the appointment.

A Blacksmith Killed.

Marshall, Mich., May 3.—Benjamin Puff, a blacksmith, two miles south of here, was killed by a Michigan Central train at noon while attempting to cross the track at Marshall avenue in this city. He was struck in the head and both legs broken.

An Atlantic Ocean Liner.

Benton Harbor, Mich., May 3.—The H. W. Williams Transportation Co. has bought an Atlantic ocean liner for the Chicago and South Haven route. The steamer will be brought to South Haven at once by the St. Lawrence river and Welland canal. The steamer is rated at 17 knots.

Clergy Discredit It.

Menominee, Mich., May 3.—The "Bleeding Picture" of Christ at the home of Anton Czarnecki is still visited by crowds. It is not allowed to be touched. The Catholic clergy discredit it.

Veteran Killed.

West Branch, Mich., May 3.—Hiram Kennedy, a veteran of the civil war, fell down stairs and broke his neck. He was 56 years old.

Lightning Struck Twice.

Chicago, May 3.—A dozen people were severely shocked and two seriously injured by a bolt of lightning which struck the tower on the Ozark apartment building at Thirty-fifth street and Wabash avenue last night. Exactly eight years ago last night this building suffered from a similar accident. Last night's bolt, after demolishing the tower, ran down the electric light wires leading to the fourth floor, where it entered the flat occupied by Dr. Anna Wells. Mrs. Wells and her companion, Mrs. C. M. Shafer, were thrown to the floor and rendered unconscious by the shock. Although seriously injured by falling glass, both will recover.

Convicted Man Married.

Indianapolis, May 3.—Clyde B. Wynegar was sentenced in the criminal court yesterday to a term of from two to fourteen years in the state prison for embezzlement. Within an hour after being taken back to jail he was married to Laura Spoon, a woman who has stood close to him since he was arrested in New Albany. Wynegar will be taken to Michigan City to-day.

Prospects of a Settlement.

Chicago, May 3.—Prospects for a peaceful settlement of the differences between the Illinois Central Railway company and the machinists in its employ are exceedingly bright. Business Agent Roderick practically admitted that there will be no strike, that most of the concessions made by the company had been accepted and that the international officers will confer further with the company regarding other points in dispute.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J.B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

"Ray, however, had sauntered out to the edge of the scanty patch of timber, and, shading his eyes with his brown hand, was scanning with professional interest the long column of dusty troopers, two abreast, that came filing into view around a little point 500 yards away. Well out in their front, short, square and stocky, rode their major, his adjutant, trumpeter and orderly jogging along behind. To him rode the colonel's messenger, the regimental adjutants and pointed out a line some distance up stream. Thither the head of column veered, moving at steady walk. The guidon bearer, at a signal from the battalion adjutant, spurred out to the front, and, with the old silken swallowtail streaming in the wind, loped across the level to a point ten yards or so from the bank, was halted there by the young officer in person, and then, lance at rest, he and his horse stood motionless. Never quickening the pace, the captain at the head of Stannard's foremost troop directed his march on this living guidepost. The guidon of the second troop, followed speedily by those of the third and fourth in like manner, darted out across the prairie, each in succession being halted and established at half distance in rear of his predecessor on the line of guides. Each troop directed itself upon its own color; each in succession formed line to the left as its leading two came opposite the guidon; each was aligned to the right; then, without loss of time, the trumpets sounded, "Prepare to dismount;" the brown carbines were jerked from their sockets and tossed over the right shoulder as the odd numbered troopers rode clear of the rank. "Dismount," clamored the trumpet, and down out of sight sank some fifty odd blue flannel shirts and rusty old hats in each line. "Form rank." And out from among the chargers popped the vanished riders, each laying hold of the reins close to the bit as the line reformed and the captain said his brief speech: "Water as soon as you like, men, and graze well out to the north until nightfall. No side lines necessary today. Dismiss the troop, sergeant."

And the next thing a dozen men were scampering like mad, lariats and picket pins swinging, heading for the most promising patches of grass.

Each picket pin was stamped home, the lariats uncurled to their full length, and then back ran the troopers to unsaddle and lead to water. Ten minutes more and the chargers of Stannard's battalion, perhaps 250 in all, were being slowly driven in four distinct herds well out upon the northward slopes, where, after a preliminary roll, each horse set contentedly to grazing. Those pre-empted patches close at hand were reserved for their further use at night.

And then the little cook fires began to blaze along the bank, and the pack trains shambled in and were unloaded in the twinkling of an eye. The mules went blinking off to water, and the major, never quitting his saddle until his last trooper dismounted, slowly lowered himself to earth and went off in search of the colonel.

"If you've no objections, sir, I'd like to send a s[illegible]nt in ahead tonight."

"Why, Stannard," said the colonel, looking up from under his hat brim in some surprise, "that's just what Ray's been asking. Anything amiss?"

"Well, his time expires tomorrow, sir. It's old Bannon of B troop, and he'd like to catch the east bound train so's to have all the time possible to go and visit his children in Illinois. He'll re-enlist at once."

"And your man, Ray?"

"Is Sergeant Merriweather, sir. He says his wife's at Ransom quite sick, and he's anxious and troubled about her."

"Isn't he the man that we had to reprimand for letting certain horses stray up on the Belle Fourche?"

"The very man, sir. He is careless at times and not altogether reliable, but he's one of the smartest, nattiest men I've got, and"—

"Didn't he marry that pretty maidservant of the Freemans' after we got back from the Ute campaign?"

"Yes, sir, and Freeman hasn't forgiven me yet," answered Captain Ray, his white teeth gleaming. "I'm very sure I should be glad to have him take her back. She's turned the heads of some of my best men and is running Merriweather heels over head in debt."

The colonel pondered a moment. "I greatly dislike to refuse you anything," he said, "but every time we come in from scout or campaign, since I joined the regiment, no sooner are we within a day's march or so of the home station—or any station, for that matter—than several men ask to ride in ahead. At first even the officers did, and there were as many as a dozen men. Now we've reduced it to two. When did Merriweather hear from his wife?"

"The mail rider, sir, going up to the Sioux agency, met us this morning early and gave him a letter. He brought it to me to read. It was written by the post trader's wife. She says Mrs. Merriweather is really seriously ill."

"Very good. Then he can go by the ambulance. So can your man, major. Tell them both to report here at 3 o'clock. Isn't Merriweather's time nearly out, Ray?"

"Only two months to serve, sir, and he says he's going into business with a brother in Chicago. I lose three noncommissioned officers this fall in that way, and one of them I couldn't take on again. He's all broken down with wounds and rheumatism. You'll have to favor me a bit in the matter of recruits, colonel. I need six, or shall before we're a month older."

"You shall have the first good man that enlists at Ransom, Ray. I'm told we may pick up some first rate material there, the mines have broken so many."

"All right, colonel, and I'll remind you if I see any likely civilian hanging around headquarters. Good day, sir, and thank you very much." So saying Captain Ray wheeled about and trudged away down stream to make report to his battalion commander.

"Did he say Merriweather could go?" asked the major, glancing up at Ray's sunshiny face. "I wouldn't, if I were in his place."

"He wasn't overwilling at first," was the answer. "However, my fellows will all be wishing themselves back in the field before they've been home a fortnight—small blame to them."

"What's the reason you're so down on garrison life, Ray?"

"I'm not down on it exactly, major, but if it weren't for the wife and boys I'd be glad if we were forever in the field," answered Ray. "Men get killed in this Indian business, but they—keep out of trouble. There's Merriweather, now. He was a tiptop sergeant in the Sioux campaign. He was one of the best all round troopers and noncommissioned officers in the regiment all through the campaigns that followed in the next three years, and he's been running down steadily ever since he fell in love with that flibbertigibbet of Freeman's. Garrison life and girls spoil many a good cavalryman," he concluded oracularly.

"Don't dare me to tell that to Mrs. Ray as your sentiments," grinned the major.

"Oh, everything depends on the girls, of course," said Ray, growing instantly grave. "Blakey and I—well, I, at least, owe everything to my wife," he finished almost reverently. Then presently he spoke again. "But what chance has the average trooper? What manner of woman has he to mate with, if he mate at all? Next batch of recruits I get should be anchorites, so far as women are concerned."

"Sailors are just as bad as soldiers," said Mainwaring sagely, whereat Blake ducked his head under his blanket in convulsions of delight.

"I know, sir," said Ray, glancing vengefully at the contortions of the worn gray slumber robe and biting his own lip hard to repress the bubbling fun. "What I mean is that I'd like to get the troop full of fellows that couldn't be twisted around a woman's finger."

"You never will, Ray," said Mainwaring, thereby proving that he knew human nature, if not books. "You can take your pick of this gang that Rawson's bringing out with him or of any of the men that offer themselves at Ransom, and I'm willing to bet that the next man you enlist will be woman driven from the word go."

CHAPTER II.

The night express was 50 minutes late already, and engine 783, waiting at the Junction with her snowplow set, was hissing and rumbling impatiently. The big brown building, embracing hotel ~~and waiting rooms, ticket and station~~ master's office, loomed up against the star dotted sky. The switch lights gleamed in crimson, green and dazzling white here, there and everywhere along the glinting rails. Bleary lamps were burning in frost covered windows, and tiny sparks fluttered from the pipe of the solitary biped on the platform, a burly man in the toil stained garb of a locomotive engineer, a sturdy fellow who limped as he stamped up and down the creaking planks of the platform, his hands in his pockets, his eyes everywhere. To him came forth his fireman, splitting his mouth with a wedge of bilious looking pound cake. He strove to speak, but, finding articulation impossible, jerked backward his head and pantomimed the process of serving himself with a cup of comforting drink—coffee, presumably—for he was fresh from the lunch counter.

"Come, swallow the rest of that grub, now, and be lively with your oil can. We can't wait two minutes after she once gets in. No," he continued as the younger repeated his persuasive pantomime, "I had my tea at home, and that's enough. You'll die of overeating, first thing you know. Do your best now. We've got an extra Pullman and a carload of greenhorns to haul up to Butte this night of all others, and I'm betting it's snowing in the mountains now."

So saying, the engineer turned and gazed anxiously westward, where even the stars seemed blotted from sight, then quickly whirled about and bent his ear.

"Coming at last," he muttered. "That's old Coyote's yelp for the crossroads. D——d little wind for whistling has she left either. No wonder No. 3's late, with nothing better than that limping carcass to drag it. She ought to be in the boneyard—ought to 'a' been there a year ago. But here's the beauty," said he to himself, as he turned and laid a loving hand on the massive driving rod of the huge machine. "Lively, Scut," he added. "Three's coming."

Scut was descending from the cab as a cat comes down a tree backward. "What'n 'ell they takin recruits to Ransom for now?" he asked. "The war's over."

"It's to fill the gaps made when the war wasn't over, young man, and mighty hard they'll find it to fill some of 'em too. Jim Strang, that was killed at Cave Springs, was corporal with me in Bate's troop eight years ago, and there wasn't a better sergeant in all the cavalry. Lo loves a shining mark, or I'd never got hit twice in one day."

"Would you go back to soldierin if you could, Mr. Long?" asked the fireman, tilting up his long necked can as he thrust the nozzle deep in between the spokes of a massive driver.

"I? Give me back the legs I had before the Sioux made a sieve of my skin, and it isn't the rail I'd be riding, but the best sorrel in Billy Ray's troop, and with the best office in it, and that's first sergeant."

"It's takin chances to be in the cavalry these days," said he of the oil can, listening to the low, faraway rumble of the coming train. "Do you see her headlight yet?"

"She isn't through the cut," was Long's answer. "As to taking chances, they've done nothing but take chances in that regiment ever since the war, yet there isn't a day of our lives we don't take chances, and bigger chances, right here on this mountain division."

A tall young fellow in traveling cap and ulster had come out from the lunchroom and was strolling over toward the hissing engine. He stopped and listened as Long spoke, then seemed to be pondering over the words and looking to the engine man for explanation.

"How do you mean?" asked Scut, pausing in his work and looking up.

"We haven't had a 'hold up' on the road for over a year."

"Neither have we had a head on collision, nor spreading rails, nor a plunge from a trestle, but they are only three of the things likely to occur any minute, especially when trains are running behind as we are tonight—all on account of that one eyed coyote that's peeping at you down yonder."

It was the headlight of No. 3, just dawning on the view at Mile End Crossing, to which the engineer referred.

"Watch how slowly she comes," he added. "The old maid is about worn out. Here's the girl that can shake that train up grade as though 'twas made of bandboxes. I'll bet you we make Butte by 7 o'clock."

"I'll bet you don't, if you'll let me in," was the cool interjection of the young man ulster clad; "for Butte's my objective point."

"What do you know about it, or about railroading?" asked Long suspiciously.

"As much as you did when you quit soldiering, and no more, wherein we have much in common, Mr. Long, but here's where the difference comes in. You quit soldiering to take to the railroad; I quit the road to take to soldiering."

"Oh, I see. Then, you're an officer?" queried Long, his accustomed lips framing the little word "sir" and almost resenting his enforced omission of the once familiar monosyllable. Long said "sir" to no one under the division superintendent now.

"I? Devil a bit," was the laughing answer. "I'm not even a lance—not even a recruit. Man, I haven't signed my papers yet."

"Then take a fool's advice and don't sign them," interposed Long. "You've got no call to go soldiering. Such as you come in only when it's whisky or women or cards."

"Say it's all three if you like," was the half laughing answer. "I heard of you as one of the old cavalrymen at the barracks yonder," and the stranger nodded carelessly over his shoulder in the direction of the post, established long years before when the road was being built. "They sent me there by mistake. It's the cavalry I want, not infantry."

The engineer looked the speaker over in surprise. Away down the track the headlight of the incoming train was growing bigger every moment and the rumble of the bulky approach could be plainly heard.

"You don't look like a man who had to take to soldiering," he said.

"Oh, I'm not!" was the prompt, good natured reply. "I do it simply because I've a hankering that way—and no other," he added under his breath. "Perhaps you can tell me something of the regiment at Ransom?"

"Enough about it to talk from here to Frisco, but there's no time now. We've got to pull out with that train the moment their engine gets out of our way. But you're the first man I ever met out here who would openly say he was going to enlist. They all come up shamefaced like, as though it was the last thing they wanted people to know."

"Oh, I never found it paid to sail under false colors," was the answer in a tone of gay good humor, not unmixed with a dash of reckless disdain. "I've nothing to lose. But I would like to ask you something about the troop commanders there at Ransom. Can't you give me a lift in the cab? I've a pocketful of better weeds than you get out this way if that's any inducement." And, so saying, he reached down into the deep pocket of his ulster and brought out a handful of cigars.

Mr. Long's manner changed in an instant. "'Gainst orders," said he briefly, gazing suspiciously into the stranger's face as he spoke. "Better get your ticket if you're going to Butte." And, swinging himself up to his perch, he grasped the reversing lever with one hand and the throttle with the other. Scut laid hold of the cord and set the big bell to swinging warning of their coming. The huge machine began slowly to move rearward as the much maligned and belated coyote came hissing by on the fireman's side, and that begrimed young man availed himself of the chance to chaff his fellow workers in the flitting cab. He took no heed, therefore, of the stranger's parting hail, but Long was eying him closely and listening for any word.

"I've got tickets all right," said the lonely man on the platform, "but I'd rather sit up in a cab than sleep in a Pullman. It's all right, though. Have a smoke anyhow." And with lavish hand he tossed half a dozen cigars into the cab as he walked beside the moving engine. Then, with a cordial wave of his hand, he turned aside to the lunchroom, into the doorway of which a half score of hungry passengers from the arriving train were eagerly pushing.

"Only three minutes, gents," sung out the conductor. "We've got to make up time before we reach the Rockies—can't do it there." And he darted into the train dispatcher's office to register and receive his orders.

Meantime Scut, still clinging to the bellcord with one hand, was scooping up cigars with the right. "That fellow's a prince," said he. "Just look at that for a seegar." And he held it admiringly up to Long to see and was amazed at the gloom in his companion's face. "Why, what's up?" he asked.

"What's up?" repeated the engineer, as he slowed down on nearing the forward end of the mail car. "A hold up, unless I'm mistaken, and the fewer of them cigars you stick in your mouth the more brains you'll have left in the morning." With a sharp click the heavy coupling pin was driven home, and Long sent the reversing lever over to the front, then poked his head out of the side of the cab and shouted to a train hand he saw hurrying by, "Where you got them recruits, Billy?"

"First coach behind the baggage," was the answer as the man glanced over his shoulder. "There's some of 'em now." And as he spoke, bounding, laughing and dodging through the knot of hungry passengers, half a dozen young fellows in fatigue uniform or bright blue overcoats went hastening by to the lunchroom, followed by shouts from somewhere back along the train.

Presently a middle aged man in the garb of a sergeant of cavalry came stalking after them, a man who seemed just aroused from sound sleep, and not too well pleased as a consequence.

"Get back to that car, you men," he ordered authoritatively. "Didn't I tell you not a soul of you could leave it without my permission?"

But the recruits were lined up at the lunch counter by this time, and gleefully shouting for coffee and reaching for doughnuts, pie, anything edible within reach. The waiter looked perturbed and hesitated. The proprietor came hurrying over from his desk. The little throng of passengers seemed sympathetic and interested. "Who's to pay for this?" demanded the owner, as the sergeant came fuming and almost fighting his way into the crowded room. "Have your men got any money?"

THE LITTLE OLD SPINET.

Do you see the little spinet standing in the corner there?
Great-grandmother loved to play it when she was a maiden fair.
Sunbeams through the window twinkle, flick'ring on its yellowed keys,
And we almost hear the tinkle of the old time melodies.

Sat there, while a smile of pleasure lighted up her fair young face;
From without the rose scent lingers, drifting on the summer breeze,
While she plays with fairy fingers all the old time melodies.

And the little spinet waits her patiently these long, long years,
Till its mellow voice is broken, harsh, and has the sound of tears
Yet it seems the sunbeams straying, flick'ring on its yellowed keys,
And her fairy fingers playing all the old time melodies!

A CASE OF LAW.

The Decision That Was Rendered by a Basuto Solomon.

Law is a complicated thing, and some of its decisions seem not to be founded in equity. Probably most readers will pass that criticism upon the case recorded below:

Basutoland, being broken and mountainous, was until recently the resort of lions, leopards and other wild animals. Now, however, the hillsides which were once the resort of these savage creatures are the pasture grounds of tens of thousands of cattle. Nearly all dangerous animals have been driven away from Basutoland, but not long ago a leopard appeared on the outskirts of a village. The animal soon became as badly frightened as the villagers and sought safety in flight.

The next morning the inhabitants turned out for a hunt. One of the hunters was climbing a steep rock when he suddenly found himself face to face with the leopard, whose retreat was cut off by the rock itself. Neither the man nor the animal could escape the encounter.

The dilemma was an awkward one, for the climber was unarmed. Realizing his danger, he put forth his hands and in desperation caught hold of the leopard on each side of its jaw, holding it at arm's length and calling for help. The leopard clawed and tore his captor, but the man held on till help arrived, and the beast was speared.

Now came a question of law. By Basuto law the skin belonged to the chief, who must reward one of three claimants—either the man who speared the leopard or the man who held it so that it was possible to spear it or the man who, being warned by the barking of his dog, first discovered the animal in the village.

The Basuto Solomon decided the case as follows: The man who speared it could not have done so but for the man who held it, and the man who held it could not have known of its existence if the dog had not first warned the village; therefore the credit for the killing belonged to the dog, whose owner was entitled to the reward.—Youth's Companion.

Now She Hates Him.

A young man and a young woman lean over the front gate. They are lovers. It is moonlight. He is loath to leave, as the parting is the last. He is about to go away. She is reluctant to see him depart. They swing on the gate.

"I'll never forget you," he says, "and if death should claim me my last thought will be of you."

"I'll be true to you," she sobs. "I'll never see anybody else or love them as long as I live."

They part.

Six years later he returns. His sweetheart of former years has married. They meet at a party. She has changed greatly. Between the dances the recognition takes place.

"Let me see," she muses, with her fan beating a tattoo on her pretty hand, "was it you or your brother who was my old sweetheart?"

"Really I don't know," he says. "Probably my father."—London Answers.

Rang In Its Third Century.

The bell on historic old St. John's church, in Richmond, where Patrick Henry made his famous speech prior to the American Revolution, rang in the twentieth century. This bell is thus given the distinction of being the only one in this country, with the possible exception of that on old Liberty hall, in Philadelphia, that has rung in three centuries. Old St. John's bell has an interesting history. Many years ago, when the old structure for which it was made was repaired, the bell was removed and sold. Later its last owner presented it to the Virginia Historical society, by which it was restored to the church.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

When Babe Is Teething.

The time of the first dentition, which lasts usually from the infant's sixth or eighth month to the sixteenth, is one of the critical periods of life, yet its dangers have been greatly exaggerated. Formerly it was the custom to refer every imaginable disease affecting a baby during the eruption of its teeth to this process as the cause. Now medical belief is perhaps inclining too far the other way, and some doctors refuse to credit teething with producing any other than merely local troubles.

The process of cutting teeth is undoubtedly a normal one and in a healthy infant is usually accomplished without any great difficulty or disturbance, but in puny and sickly children it is sometimes laborious and the cause of much distress.

Among the many affections formerly regarded as provoked by teething the most common are diarrhea, cough and convulsions, but probably the last named is the only one caused directly by this process.

When a tooth comes through with difficulty, the child's nervous system is worn upon by the local irritation, and it may become more and more irritable until finally an explosion occurs, and the child has convulsions. This is, however, a rare occurrence, and it is probable that the nervous constitution of such children is already weak and needs only some slight irritation, whether from the teeth, the stomach or the skin, to become convulsively excited.

The diarrhea and the cough are no doubt both due to indigestion caused by nervous irritation.

Local disorders of teething are more common. They consist for the most part in inflammation of the gums, which are red, swollen and hot, and in the drooling of a ropy saliva.

In order to prevent inflammation the mouth should be kept perfectly clean, being washed out often with a solution of borax or boric acid, 15 or 20 grains to the ounce. The baby's desire to bite should be gratified by providing it with a hard rubber, ivory or silver object on which to exercise its jaws.

The general health should be carefully watched. Any tendency to diarrhea or especially to constipation should be corrected, and the child should be kept in the air as much as possible. If the nervous symptoms are threatening, sedatives are needed, and it may be necessary to lance the gums.

It should be remembered that a teething infant may have an illness quite independent of the teething process, and hence one should never neglect to call a doctor under the theory that its troubles are all due to the teething and consequently are of little moment.—Exchange.

Did you ever board one of the Lansing street railway cars with the intention of getting anywhere on the line? If so, you will probably be pleased (?) to learn that the common council of that city has extended the franchise of the company so that it expires 30 years hence. McClure—Hoblit.

The wedding of Mr. Harry McClure, of New York City, to Miss Emma Hoblit of this city occurred Wednesday, May 1, at 12:30 p. m. at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hoblit, 505 College avenue. The ceremony was celebrated by Rev. Charles M. Rauch, of St. Louis, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church there, and a former college mate of the groom. The service was a very simple one and was attended by only relatives of the contracting parties and a very few intimate friends. Following the ceremony an elegant wedding breakfast was served. The parlors and dining room were tastefully decorated in honor of the occasion.

The bride is one of the popular ladies of Lincoln. She is pretty and highly educated in literary and musical arts. Besides being well educated and talented, she possesses an abundance of practical sense, She will prove a perfect helpmeet.

The groom has many valuable attainments and is one of the prominent and rising young men of the greatest city in the United States. He is literary and holds a responsible position at the head of the McClure & Phillips Book Publishing Co. In carrying on his literary work he has traveled extensively over this country and Europe. Mr. McClure is a cousin of the publisher of the McClure magazine. He is a graduate of Wabash college.

Mr. and Mrs. McClure departed on a trip to the north and east. They will make their home in New York City.

It is said by those claiming to know, that Frank Hoblit sent to his daughter Emma a draft for $6000 as her wedding present. Mr. Hoblit is in Texas and telegraphed his inability to be present, but did not forget to send something so useful in married life, no matter how wealthy the contracting parties may be. —Lincoln Daily Courier.

From El Paso, Texas.

Following is a clipping from a letter dated April 23, received from Carl Wisner, a former Franklin boy, who is now in El Paso, Texas, on business for a Chicago law firm:

"This is a queer quaint frontier town, half Mexican, half American. I was across the river, or rather river bed, into Mexico this morning and it seemed as if I was in another world from the one in which I have been spending my life. The queer little "dobe" houses, the Mexicans with their tall broad hats, the signs all in Spanish, the dark skinned natives with their queer costumes, the donkeys which seem to be the principal draft animals, the advertisements of the bull fights and national lotteries, the occasional Mexican soldier—all give the impression of a queer quaint land and a queer quaint people.

"The climate is wonderful in its perfection. The air is so clear and invigorating. I think one could dream away life here with the sunshine and beautiful people in a way which would render it hardly possible to note the flight of time and would make trouble only a mere incident.

"The people are so indolent. They turn and stare when I walk down the street as though wondering as to the possible excuse for so much energy. I make an appointment with a man at 10 a. m. sharp and he saunters in at 2:30 p m. and thinks he is on time."

RAILROAD NEWS.

The Cincinnati Northern grain elevator at Marshall was destroyed by fire Tuesday evening. The loss is $3000, fully covered by insurance. The building contained about 3,000 bushels of wheat, oats and rye, owned by Ham Coleman, whose loss is $2,500 and no insurance. Fire started in the engine room where a railroad employe was filling switch lamps and a lamp exploded.

A MAYOR'S MIRACLE.

He Made the Blind See, the Deaf Hear and the Lame Walk.

From the many anecdotes of Bampfylde Moore Carew's rogueries in Arthur Montefiore Brice's essay on that "Amazing Vagabond" we quote one in which Carew and his gypsy crew who had rigged themselves up as cripples and gathered at Bridgewater fair to plunder the junketers came off second best.

When the mayor of Bridgewater heard that this motley group of cripples had arrived, he announced to some of his friends that he was possessed of a power they perhaps little suspected—that, in fact, he could make the blind see, the deaf hear and the lame walk. Bets were freely made that he could do nothing of the kind, and thereupon the mayor had the gypsies arrested and immediately brought before him and, after hearing their harrowing tales, ordered them to be confined for the night in the lockup.

About 10 o'clock at night, however, the municipal surgeon entered with a lantern and announced that he would examine them all in the morning in order to report to the mayor whether or not they really suffered from deformity of one kind or another, and he went on to say that those who were found to be impostors would be treated by the mayor with severity so extreme that, moved to pity, he would allow any such misguided wretch to escape there and then from the lockup on condition that he immediately left the town.

At this intelligence a great commotion arose, and in less time than it takes to write it the whole crowd surged out of the lockup, flinging away their crutches and wooden legs, patches and bandages, and made off down the town at topmost speed, the blind leading the way with unerring steps, the dumb crying aloud their fears, the deaf replying to them, and the lame sprinting along at a rattling pace. Now, just opposite the lockup, on the farther side of the street, stood the witty mayor and his friends, convulsed with laughter at the success of his scheme.—Argonaut.

CATCHING CICADAS.

How Certain Malays Obtain a Curious Delicacy.

Certain natives of the Malay peninsula catch cicadas and eat them and that as a considerable luxury. To eat a cicada seems distinctly curious, says the London Daily Mail, when we reflect that this insect is in reality a glorified member of that insect group which contains as its most prominent representative the diminutive and swarthy creature which shall be nameless here for evermore.

The way in which the Siamese proceeds was related to the Zoological society the other day by a naturalist who has spent some time in the Malay peninsula observing men as well as insects. At night, when these insects fly, the native sallies forth armed with a torch and but little raiment. The torch is deposited in a convenient place, and the swarm of natives proceed to clap their hands in a perfectly regular fashion so as to produce a considerable sound.

It is the combination of light and sound that allures the cicada from its haunts to its destruction. The insects come also in swarms and settle upon the bodies of the applauding natives, whence they are easily detached, preserved, cooked and eaten.

The Greek sage remarked that happy are the cicadas in that they have voiceless wives. It is apparently the lady cicadas who are attracted by what they fondly believe to be the love cry of the male and are thus lured to their fate by that most dangerous of passions.

Victoria and Dickens.

Literary celebrities, as a rule, were not those who attained to any high degree of personal favor at the hands of Queen Victoria, but she paid Charles Dickens a delicate compliment. Dickens, who, by the way, in his youthful days was devoured by a grand passion for the youthful queen, was invited when at the climax of his fame to dine at Windsor castle. He was after dinner presented by the queen with a copy of her book "Tour In the Highlands," and on the fly leaf was inscribed in her own hand this sentence: "From the humblest to the most distinguished author in England." The queen afterward showed many favors to Lord Tennyson, but even in making him a peer of the realm she did not bestow as great a compliment.

The typical Moro is never unarmed. He fights equally well on foot, on horseback, in his fleet war canoe or in the water, for he swims like a fish and dives like a penguin.

THE FRENCH SOLDIER

SOME OF THE BRUTALITIES TO WHICH HE IS SUBJECTED.

Hazings and Other Punishments Which Sometimes End In the Victim's Death That Are Winked at, if Not Ordered, by the Officers.

Soldiers in the French army are not subjected by law to corporal punishment any more than it has been a part of the regulations governing the Military academy at West Point that cadets should "brace" or "qualify" on molasses and prunes. Nevertheless the French soldier is put through a hazing process which is most severe and several times has caused death. The French soldier is known as Picton or Dumanet, just as the English soldier is known as Tommy Atkins. Dumanet finds when he joins the colors that life is not all skittles for a soldier.

The thing which distinguishes the hazing in the French army from the hazing in American colleges and universities is that it is suggested and almost ordered by the commissioned officers. An officer will say to a corporal or a sergeant, "You have a man here who has done so and so," naming some trivial offense, more than likely to be some neglect of the deference due to the officer. "It would do him good if he were tossed in a blanket."

The officer turns on his heel and walks away, while the unfortunate soldier is placed in a blanket, with saber, spurs, jack boots, bayonets and such pleasant bedfellows, and the combination is tossed until the hazers are too tired to continue. This is great sport for the man's comrades, especially if they are half drunk, which they are likely to be. This diversion has rather gone out of favor just now, because several soldiers who have been tossed had the bad taste to die after the discipline.

In some of the French barracks a favorite method of punishment is to hang the offending soldier up by his heels and then to spank him with a sword bayonet. In Algiers, where the men are far removed in the outlying garrisons from the central authority and at the mercy of their tormentors, they are subjected to many forms of hazing at the suggestion of the officers.

At one time the "vilo" was much in favor among the hazers in the Algerian army of occupation. It consisted in putting a man in a deep hole made in the shape of a reversed funnel dug by the Arabs in the ground as a place for the storage of corn. The unfortunate man was left there sometimes for days, with hardly anything to eat or drink and exposed all the time to the heat of the sun, while at night the place was cold. Many died from hunger, thirst or cold, while many others became insane.

The military authorities when they became aware of these tortures issued an order prohibiting such a punishment, but it is still practiced in isolated parts of Algiers where no eye can see of which the officers are afraid.

Several years ago Prince Piguatelli d'Aragon, a young Spanish noble, ran away from his home and went to Algiers to join the foreign legion, the refuge for men "with a past." His friends announced to the French military authorities that the prince had gone to join the legion, but the authorities were able to get no word of his arrival. At last a soldier suggested that perhaps a stranger who wandered into camp and had considerable difficulty in speaking French might be the prince. The sergeant to whom the prince had spoken was drunk at the time and became annoyed at the Spaniard's broken French, so he ordered that the stranger be placed in the "vilo" without more ado. Here the miserable young man remained for two days without eating or drinking, and then a good natured sentry broke the rules and gave him food. As soon as he was rescued from the "vilo" the young man started for Spain, having most thoroughly reconsidered his determination to enter the celebrated foreign legion.

Another form of punishment which used to be popular in Algiers was the "carcan." A piece of wood, usually the trunk of a tree, was used. The man was laid on it, usually bound so that the middle of his back would be resting on the wood, with his head and feet hanging down to the ground. His feet were tied to an iron bar and his hands to another, and, left lying face upward, he was exposed for hours to the terrible heat of the sun. Some men have survived 12 hours of this torture.

A form of punishment still popular among the French colonial troops—that is, popular with those who inflict it and not with those who suffer it—is the "crapadine." It consists of throwing the man face downward and tying his wrists and ankles behind his back so that his wrists and ankles are brought together.—New York Press.

AN AGED VETERAN.

A Detroit Veteran talks of the War and a Legacy it Left Him.

When the annual reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found veteran O. P. Newcomb, of Detroit, at his place of residence, No. 237 Second street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words of advice tersely told. He said:

"A lake covering about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of 20 mules, is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed through during the civil war, and it is no wonder that G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these troubles can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or any one suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Counterfeit China.

Other things besides money are counterfeited, and purchasers of old china have to be continually on their guard or they will be paying many dollars for what is worth only a few cents.

"The market is full of imitation china," said a lower Fourth avenue dealer in antiques who was asked about the matter. "Persons who rely on marks are sure to be deceived, for marks are easily imitated, and there is not one that has escaped forgery.

"Both French and English manufacturers forge all of the most sought after marks and find sale for their products. In looking for old china I find that every mark of importance has been forged, from Dresden to Worcester and Crown Derby, not excepting old Sevres. Every day would be purchasers come here and visit other New York shops, looking for china, and have no mortal idea at all correct of what they are buying. Yet they will talk after a most learned fashion and will take offense at the very suggestion that they may be deceived.

"If you are going to judge of china by its marks or evidence of its age and use from discoloration cracks and chipping, you are more than likely to be cheated, for all of these things are easy for an expert and dishonest dealer to imitate. If you are not a judge of china, then hire an honest expert to purchase for you."—New York Herald.

An Advertising Scheme.

Several old acquaintances of the late D. H. McAlpin, the tobacco manufacturer, were discussing his business success in an up town club, and one of them told the following story as illustrating the farreaching effect of comparatively insignificant things sometimes.

"It was after Mr. McAlpin was well started in the tobacco business," he said, "that an enterprising rival began to cut into his business by advertising that he placed a dime in every tenth package of tobacco put up in his factory. One day a foreman of the packing room went to Mr. McAlpin and said:

"'I have a suggestion to make that promises to knock out this dime in every tenth package scheme of your riv Will you hear it?'

"'Yes; go ahead.'

"'Well, then, just put a dime in every package of tobacco put up in our shop and don't advertise it. It will advertise itself quickly enough.'

"Mr. McAlpin saw that the suggestion was good, and he accepted it. It cost him a good deal of money, but its success warranted it. Within a few weeks farmers were buying McAlpin tobacco, knowing that they would find money in each package, and if they had found diamonds it would not have surprised them."—New York Sun.

Wood That Causes Sneezing.

Among its many curious products South Africa includes the "sneeze wood" tree, which takes its name from the fact that one cannot cut it with a saw without sneezing, as the fine dust has exactly the effect of snuff. Even in planing the wood it will sometimes cause sneezing. No insect, worm or barnacle will touch it. It is very bitter to the taste, and when placed in water it will sink. The color is light brown and the grain very close and hard. For dock work, piers or jetties it is a useful timber, lasting a long while under water.

GRANDMAS OF TODAY

THEY KEEP IN THE RACE WITH THE YOUNG PEOPLE TO THE END.

The Old Fashioned Grandmother, the One Who Placidly Sat In the Chimney Corner Darning Stockings, Is a Thing of the Past.

I was bemoaning the fact that I had never known my grandmothers. One died before I was born and the other when I was a few months old. I thought it would be so comforting to have a grandmother because they always regarded their grandchildren as being incapable of doing wrong. At least they were sure to multiply one's virtues and minimize faults. Their chief object in life, as I picture them, was to minister to their descendants' comfort, to make the crooked places straight. The grandmother of my fancy would keep my clothes in repair, darn the stockings, knit plenty of wash-rags and silk mittens, surprise me with my favorite dishes, laugh at my jokes and generally submerge her life in the affairs of mine. What was I going to do in return for all this unselfish devotion? I would be her granddaughter. That, according to the old traditions, was quite enough compensation.

I was holding forth, exploiting my views and desires on the grandmother question in the presence of one of those people who delight to take a person down and make him feel cheap, especially if they imagine one is posing as younger than the family Bible records. This individual spoke up and said: "Why, if your grandmothers were living they would be so aged that they would be mummified. Instead of darning your stockings, knitting your mittens, they would be blind, deaf and imbecile. You would have to tend them with greater slavishness than a mother a newborn babe, and without the sweet recompense in the latter case. When people become imbecile with age, they grow repulsive, and the prolonging of this state is dreadful, while each day the unfolding of a budding life is filled with mysterious delights."

Of course I did not want a grandmother that was deaf, blind and imbecile. I thought I would drop the subject, as it appeared to be getting personal. But my companion continued: "Besides, could it be possible in the order of things for you to have a vigorous, industrious, capable grandmother, she would not be sitting at the chimney corner darning your stockings. She would be out attending to her lodge or club business, visiting the millinery openings, ordering a fashionable gown, playing cards or attending a high tea. The old fashioned grandmother is as much a thing of the past as the spinning wheel, the canalboat, stagecoach, making candles and family rendered soap."

I protested that I did not believe my grandmothers would be of the modern pattern. I had heard my mother tell often of how completely her mother lost her taste for society and outside affairs after she had grandchildren. She had raised a large family, but these reproductions were just as much a delight as had been the originals. She infinitely preferred their society to that of grown people. Their prattle, school experiences, little ambitions, filled her life completely. She was constantly planning surprises for them by making animal cakes, individual pies, candy, aprons, hoods, doll clothes.

"Yes, but if she lived now she would be different. The air she would breathe is filled with assertive germs which declare that every woman owes it to herself to have a career and stand at the helm and steer it to the very end. She must not allow her life to be submerged in that of her own children, as they make their appearance rather unwelcome frequently, but must have outside missions. As soon as her offspring is married off, which is accomplished with as great dispatch as diplomacy can secure, then she is free to carry out pet schemes and natural desires untrammeled."

"Perhaps you are right," I replied. Such a grandmother as this would be no comfort to me as a grandmother, while she might be a most helpful friend, and I could be proud of her position in the literary, artistic or philanthropic world as her tastes might dictate her pursuit.

A grandmother of my acquaintance said to me not long ago: "It would be a great trial to me to have my grandchildren or any children in the house with me now. I could not adapt myself to their demands and interruptions. I have raised my family and now want my time for individual pursuits." This woman has especial talents and necessities for using them, and in her case these feelings may not seem unnatural. But this is much the sentiment that possesses the grandmothers of the age who have no special missions or avocations outside the domestic circle. If they have means, they buy handsome gifts for their grandchildren and wish them to have all the advantages possible that do not represent personal self sacrifice or curtailment of freedom of action.

Women are imbued with the spirit of the age, which demands that there shall be no old ladies with caps and shawls who stay at home and guard the fireside, but that they must keep in the race with the young people to the very end.—Susan W. Ball in Terre Haute Gazette.

Then He Hurried Up.

He was too modest to be a successful lover, and he had let 40 years of his life go by without ever coming to an emotional point.

He was in love with a fair being of suitable age, but he would not tell her so, and though she knew it she could not very well give him a hint about the situation.

She was willing because she had arrived at that time of life when a woman is not nearly so hard to please as she might have been at some other time, but he was stupid and went away without a word.

He was gone a long, long time, and when he came back he found her still ready.

"I have come back after many years," he said to her as he took her hand in greeting.

She had learned something in the years since she had seen him last.

"Well, for goodness' sake, Henry," she exclaimed fervidly, "why don't you take them? I'm 35 now. How many more years do you want?"

Then a great light shone upon him, and he did not wait for any more.—London Answers.

She Took Our Vinol with Good Results.

WE WANT EVERY ONE TO KNOW ABOUT IT.

READ WHAT WE HAVE TO SAY. COME AND SEE US.

We don't want any one in this city to drag themselves through life in pain and misery for the want of enough strength to feel well and happy.

If you feel listless, without ambition and run down, it is a bad sign.

You are running grave chances. You are in a condition to be attacked by most any disease.

This feeling of debility is a symptom that your system is generally demoralized. You should take a tonic.

You should take Vinol, which we know and will guarantee will restore your strength.

Following is one case where it did this. Mrs. T. H. Boyle, of 56 Chestnut St., West Newton, Mass., says:

"Last spring I used one bottle of Vinol. At that time I was all run down and sick. I find that it did me lots of good, and by its use my strength came back to me."

Vinol is a delicious preparation, containing the active curative principles that are found in cod-liver oil, dissolved in a delicate table wine.

Vinol acts directly on the stomach, aiding digestion and at the same time creating a healthy appetite. It gives strength and vigor to every organ of the body.

We endorse Vinol, and guarantee its action, and will gladly refund to any one who is not satisfied the money which they paid for it.

Rock-a-Bye Baby

These are sweet words, but how much pain and suffering they used to mean. It's different now. Since Mother's Friend has become known expectant mothers have been spared much of the anguish of childbirth. Mother's Friend is a liniment to be applied externally. It is rubbed thoroughly into the muscles of the abdomen. It gives elasticity and strength, and when the final great strain comes they respond quickly and easily without pain. Mother's Friend is never taken internally. Internal remedies at this time do more harm than good. If a woman is supplied with this splendid liniment she need never fear rising or swelling breasts, morning sickness or any of the discomforts which usually accompany pregnancy.

The proprietor of a large hotel in Tampa, Fla., writes: "My wife had an awful time with her first child. During her second pregnancy, Mother's Friend was used and the baby was born easily before the doctor arrived. It's certainly great."

THE "RIPPER" BILLS

State Lawmakers Seemed To Have a Healthy Appetite for Them.

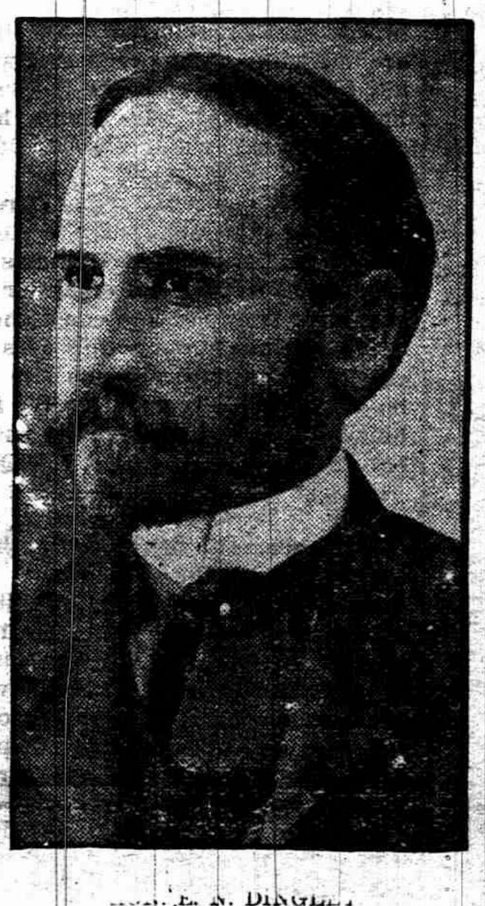
MEASURES' EFFECT ON DETROIT

The Grand Rapids Charter Bill—Important Changes in Country School Law.

Lansing, Mich., May 7.—It is generally understood that "all signs fail in dry weather." This being the case, it is probable that I will be spared the embarrassment of going into a more elaborate explanation of my failure to call the turn in my last letter on the subject of so-called "ripper" legislation. Really now, one was quite warranted, in view of the emphatic remarks indulged in by numerous legislators concerning their own actions in voting for the first of this class of bills to put in an appearance, that it would be a very cold day before they would vote for another. This, however, appears to have been only a way they had for concealing their appetite for legislation of this kind, and when more was presented, and this time in a job lot, too, they swallowed it with a promptness and apparent avidity that augurs well for a similar disposition of whatever more may come up in this line.

How Detroit Is Affected.

In consequence of the legislators' fondness for bills of this sort, Detroit now has a one man police commission, one man park commission and a one man public works commission. Further than this there are reasons that the good work has only fairly been entered upon, and before the close of the present week, the fire and water commissions will be similarly transformed, and the legal department of the city turned inside out. It is possible that some of the new plans may not be carried out just as outlined, but my recent experience in predicting possible opposition to this class of legislation has put me out of the list of doubting Thomases. I would not now predict anything on the off side of these propositions for a consideration. The odds are a long ways greater on the other side, and the solons now appear to have caught their second wind, as it were, and be in shape for new triumphs in this direction.



[illegible] E. N. DINGLEY
Chairman House Committee on Ways and Means.

The only other bill savoring at all of the ripper passed by either house last week, was the Grand Rapids charter bill which went through the senate. The bill passed by the senate, however, is vastly different from the one sent to the governor for his signature a fortnight ago and withdrawn because of the opposition of that official. The clause in the present bill rendering defaulters ineligible to occupy certain offices in the city government is not retroactive, so that persons who have defaulted in previous years and whose bondsmen have settled with the city are on easy street, there being nothing to prevent them from holding office as long as a majority of their constituents continue to admire their style of doing business. This saving clause is a great relief to some ambitious gentlemen who have mapped out great fields of future usefulness in the political vineyard for themselves.

Changes in School Law.

One of the new laws enacted and just signed by Govenor Bliss is of unusually importance in the rural district, inasmuch as it makes important changes in the school law. The bill had the endorsement of the department of public instruction. In the first place it raises the minimum age of teachers from 17 to 18 years, the educators of the state being agreed that the former age is too young. It also provides for a wider range of territory for teachers who hold a second grade certificate by providing that any county school commissioner may, upon the request of the holder of such a certificate, send the examination papers upon which such certificate was granted to the board of school examiners of any other county, and such examiners may, in their discretion, accept such papers and treat them in the same manner as if written at a public examination in their own county. In the renewal of a certified first grade certificate the holder shall not be restricted to teaching in any one county. In counties containing more than 120 districts the commissioner of schools is authorized to appoint such assistants as may be necessary, and in counties containing less than 120 districts, the appointment of assistants may be made only with the consent of the board of supervisors.

The Humphrey rural high school bill looks like a winner. It has passed the senate and been agreed to by the house in committee of the whole. It will probably come up for final passage in the house today.

Taxation Legislation.

The perennial subject of railroad or equal taxation legislation is still as fruitful a topic of speculation as it ever was. The conference committees of the two houses have held numerous sessions, but this morning they were as far from an agreement as when they first started in to consider the bill. The confreres are in session again today, and there are reasons for believing that an agreement will be reached at this sitting. The rock on which they have thus far split is the make of the board of assessors, or rather whether the assessing shall be done by an enlarged tax commission or a separate board. This was just the situation last week when I predicted that the result would be the enlargement of the tax commission. I still believe that this will be the outcome.

The question of final adjournment continues to be a live one, but there is practically no chance that a date will be fixed for this important event until the tax bill has been disposed of. The members of the lower house feel that some of the senators would like to have them formally commit themselves on this subject in the hope of thus forcing them to agree to a tax bill that is not to their liking or adjourn without perfecting any tax legislation whatever. They are not likely to be caught napping in this manner.

For Shorter Work Day.

The battle for a shorter work day still continues, and the house has taken a step in the direction of shorter hours by passing the Byrnes bill making eight hours a legal day's work in all the mines of the state. The measure will meet with some opposition in the senate.

There is no longer any hope that this legislature will take any definite action looking to the control of railroad freight rates. The Hardy bill covering this subject has been considered at several sessions of the committee with the result that the legislators are quite generally agreed that the subject is altogether too intricate for them to handle at this time. Its complexity proved to be appalling, and the general opinion is that the best thing to do would be to appoint a state commission to hear shippers' complaints of discrimination of freight rates and adjust them.

The project to have the state asylum at Ionia abandon the present buildings on the north side of the river and be provided for by the erection of additional buildings on the south side, and then use the north side buildings as a reformatory for women, has been put to sleep by the house, which eliminated from the appropriation bill the item for new buildings. The senate had previously passed the bill, and there may be a controversy between the two houses over it, although it is probable that the senate will concur in the action of the house. The only appropriation bill about which there are serious differences betwen the houses is that for the home for the feeble-minded and epileptic at Lapeer. For several years the managers of this institution have been fighting for an administration building, but the item for this expenditure has regularly been cut out. The house cut it out again this year, but it was reinserted when the bill reached the senate. Then the house refused to concur, and the bill has been turned over to the tender mercies of a conference committee.

Ruling by Speaker Carton.

Speaker Carton ruled on a point of unusual importance a day or two ago. It came up in connection with the passage of a bill empowering the state banking commissioner to take charge of an insolvent bank and appoint a receiver therefor without waiting the action of the courts or in any way appealing to a tribunal. The bill received 54 votes, but the banking law as ratified by the people provides that amendments may be made only by a vote of two-thirds of the members of each house. Speaker Carton, therefore, declared the bill not passed, 67 being the necessary two-thirds. Representative Colby raised the point of order that the constitution provided that only a majority vote is necessary for the passage of a bill, and the people cannot amend the constitution by adopting a contrary provision in a proposed law. The speaker ruled that the point of order was well taken, and declared the bill passed.

The ways and means committee of the house, of which the Hon. E. N. Dingley is chairman, has favorably reported a bill appropriating $50,000 for the establishment at the university of a psycopathic hospital for the treatment of acute mental diseases.

Druggists Must Be Good.

Druggists throughout the state will have to be good hereafter if they wish to continue selling malt, brewed and spirituous liquors, for in all probability the Humphrey bill which seeks to restrict the sale of liquors will become a law notwithstanding the fact that it fell two votes short of passing the house when it came up on third reading the other day. The bill vests the state board of pharmacy with authority to revoke the license of a druggist who is convicted of selling liquor in violation of the law, requires druggists to make sworn reports of all sales of liquors, prohibits the making of window displays of liquors and empowers the pharmacy board to retain an attorney by the year to look after violators of the law. The Hurst bill which provided that no drug clerk shall be required to work more than ten hours a day has been killed, the plea being that there are hundreds of drug stores in the state which do not do business enough to warrant the employment of two pharmacists as would be absolutely necessary if this bill became a law, for it is well known that drug stores are kept open about sixteen hours a day.

Good Roads Amendment.

Senator Earle's good roads amendment to the constitution will probably be submitted to the people for ratification or rejection. It has already passed the senate, and while there is some opposition to it in the house, the necessary two-thirds vote will doubtless be forthcoming. The proposed amendment empowers the legislature to appropriate money for building and improving permanent highways.

Not Entirely Alone.

As he entered the car he saw at a glance that there was one seat with a young lady in it, and he marched straight down the aisle, deposited his overcoat, sat down and familiarly observed:

"I entirely forgot to ask your permission."

"That's of no consequence," she replied.

"Thanks. Just arrived in the city, I presume," he ventured to remark as he glanced at the bundles and grips on the floor near by.

"Not exactly."

"You're all alone, eh?"

"Almost, but not quite. My husband is the conductor on this car, the motorman is my cousin and my father and a brother are in the seat back of us."

"Aw! Aw! I see," gasped the man, and the floor of the car suddenly became so redhot that he lit out without another word.—Salt Lake Herald.

FIGHTING COAL TAX

Some Very Caustic Remarks in the House of Commons

IN DEFENSE OF COAL MINERS

Denounced the Government as a "Pack of Riotous Hounds After a Ewe Lamb," By Which He Referred to the Coal Industry.

London, May 7.—By a vote of 333 to 227 the coal tax bill passed the house of commons. Consequently the tax of a shilling a ton on export coal was adopted by a majority of 106. These figures, apparently don't represent the feeling of the members of the house, but the government made the issue strictly a party one and secured the record attendance for this parliament and by vigorous efforts polled within a score of the normal majority. The galleries were packed to overflowing.

The principal figures during the last day of the discussion of the coal tax were chiefly within the liberal ranks. Sir Edward Grey, Mr. H. H. Asquith, Mr. Wm. Abraham (liberal) and Mr. Chas. Fenwick all assailed the tax eloquently, the last two speaking with no little pathos and a broad accent on behalf of the miners, in whose station of life they worked before coming to Westminster.

Perhaps the most interesting feature was the speech of Hon. Frederick Lambton, brother of the Earl of Durham, who, standing amid the conservative members, denounced the government as "a pack of riotous hounds after a ewe lamb," by which he referred to the coal industry. He declared that the chancellor of the exchequer had represented the colliers as liars and forgers and maintained that they were "as honorable a set of men as ever sat on the government benches." Sir Michael Hicks-Beach attempted to explain, but Mr. Lambton paid little heed. The sleepy peers who had come in to hear the final stages of the debate blinked vigorously as they heard the right of miners to strike proclaimed by an aristocrat, who declared the miners were "as good as many a man who has won the Victoria cross."

Another supporter of the government, Mr. John Wilson, objected to the tax, bringing up the question of American competition and contending that the duty would give the United States a chance to cut out British coal.

This started the ball rolling, and for some time the house gave itself up to a discussion of the relative merits of "Pocohantas" and "smokeless Welsh," with frequent references to America's growing merchant marine and the advantages of coal. Mr. Balfour, in rambling style, summed up the debate, basing his argument upon the proposition that such a great and ever increasing industry as the export of coal could not be seriously affected by the imposition of a tax of a shilling a ton. He dismissed as highly improbable the theory that American coal would ever be able to compete with English.

In the division which followed there was much cross-voting. Mr. John Morley voted with the government. Several liberals abstained from voting, while almost all the conservatives representing coal counties joined the opposition. During Mr. Balfour's summing up one of his own adherents remarked audibly, "It is a wretched speech, but of course Balfour does not know what he is talking about." This was a verdict which seemed to meet with the approval of other government supporters nearby. Indeed, if the most urgent whips had not been issued and if it had not been feared that the government was likely to be defeated, many ministerialists who voted in favor of the tax would either have abstained from voting or would have voted against it. What the miners' federation will do now remains to be seen. Judging from the speeches of the labor members during the last stages of the debate the federation is quite likely to declare a general strike, thus precipitating a struggle between organized labor and parliament. Such a collision as was said frequently during the discussion might prove ruinous to the coal industry and highly injurious to the country.

Denver, Col., May 7.—A special to the News from Santa Fe, N. M., says: Four beautiful turquoises from the Porterfield mines, in the Burro mountains, were presented to President McKinley yesterday by Gov. Otero at Deming. The largest stone weighed 20 karats and was a superb specimen.

Vigorous Offensive Campaign.

Manila, May 7.—The island of Samar, one of the Visayan group, has been transferred from the department commanded by Gen. Wade to that commanded by Gen. Hughes. Gen. Hughes has been ordered personally to Samar, and if he is unsuccessful in negotiating the surrender of the insurgent general, Lukban, the force of American troops in Samar will be increased and a vigorous offensive campaign will be inaugurated. The military authorities have prepared a schedule and forwarded the same to Washington covering the sailing dates of the ten regiments of volunteers still in the archipelago. Unless unforeseen delays arise, the last of these regiments will reach home before June 30.

Ex-President Dead.

Paris, May 7.—Mariano Ignacio Prado, ex-president of Peru, is dead.

Mariano Ignacio Prado was born in 1826. He participated in Gen. Castilla's revolution against Echenique's government in 1854. He marched against Lima in 1865 and entered the capital Nov. 6 at the head of a victorious army. On Nov. 26 he declared himself dictator and was subsequently elected constitutional president by the Peruvian congress. He was again elected president in 1876.

Babies in Greenland.

The bed of the baby Eskimo is not always one of elder down. There are times of famine now and then when the condition of the ice makes hunting impossible, and old and young starve to death. Cases have been known on both shores of Baffin bay where babies have been eaten by starving adults, but infanticide in Greenland is unknown because of a belief that the spirit of a murdered infant turns into an evil spirit called Angiak that forever haunts the entire village and brings endless misery and distress.

When a friend is in trouble, don't ask, "Can I do anything?" Do something.—Atchison Globe.

Do but half of what you can, and you will be surprised at your own diligence.

A TERRIBLE CRASH.

Passenger Train Runs Into a Freight, With Fatal Results.

Ottumwa, Ia., May 7.—Burlington passenger train No. 3 yesterday, while passing Thayer, a small town 18 miles east of Creston, struck an engine attached to a freight train which was endeavoring to get out of the way by backing on the side track, and was derailed, killing Engineer S. D. Brown of Burlington and injuring 20 people. All but the two rear cars of the passenger train left the rails and rolled down a 20-foot embankment.

Thayer is situated in the bed of a deep ravine, through which the track is laid. A heavy train in order to make schedule time is compelled to use steam down one hill to reach the top of the other. Owing to the fact that both tracks for a distance are heavily curved, neither engineer could see the other train until within 200 feet of it. The engineer of the freight train heard the passenger train and made frantic efforts to back the heavy train on the side track. He succeeded in getting all but his engine to a place of safety.

On came the passenger train at the rate of 70 miles an hour. When within 200 feet of the point of collision, Engineer Brown saw the danger, threw the air brake to the emergency notch, applied the sand and stuck to his engine in the grim endeavor to save the precious freight behind. The crew of the freight engine, making desperate efforts to avoid impending catastrophe, stayed with the engine until the last moment, when they jumped and saved themselves from instant death. The freight engine was thrown across the track. The passenger engine was hurled down the 20-foot embankment, followed by the baggage car, express car, day coach and three chair cars, the chair cars and day coach having a large number of passengers, many from this city. The agent telegraphed to Ottumwa for a relief train and a special with surgeons and nurses left for the scene.

CLEVELAND BANK CLOSED.

Depositors, Mostly Workingmen, Clamoring for Their Money.

Cleveland, May 7.—The doors of the Cuyahoga Savings & Banking Co., at 1461 Woodland avenue, were not opened for business yesterday. The following notice was posted on the window:

On account of the continued absence of R. N. Pollock, the president, the directors have concluded to suspend payment until such time as they can make an examination of their affairs. It is confidently expected that every depositor will be paid in full.

Hundreds of depositors, mostly working people, gathered around the bank soon after the notice was displayed, clamoring for their money.

The last statement published by the bank indicated that the individual deposits amounted to $299,000; loans on real estate, discounts, etc., $309,863.

Didn't Whip His Man.

Santiago de Cuba, May 7.—Senor Corona, editor of the Cubano Libre, shot and slightly wounded Ricardo Miranda in the theater here last night. The Cubano Libre had published a statement accusing Miranda and two companions, who are all prominent republicans, of indulging in drunken and disorderly conduct the previous night. The article called particular attention to the private character of Miranda and his friends. Miranda, accompanied by his companions, called at Corona's house during the day, but the latter refused to see them. They left a message that they would whip Corona on sight. Last night at the theater Miranda entered Corona's box and attempted to assault him with a cane. Corona quickly drew a revolver and shot Miranda above the ear, inflicting a painful but not dangerous wound. The attack is a result of the political feeling between the two Cuban factions and considerable excitement has been aroused. All the participants in the affair are in jail.

Meeting of Board of Dentistry.

Bay City, Mich., May 7.—Secretary F. O. Gilbert of Bay City has sent out notices for the next meeting of the state board of examiners in dentistry, to be held in Battle Creek commencing Monday, May 13. The announcement is made that all temporary licenses will expire upon the first day of the meeting and cannot be renewed.

Shot in Self-Defense.

Tien Tsin, May 7.—The Russian Lieut. Telekovsky, from the gunboat Bobr, was shot dead by a German soldier during a fracas on the Taku road. The German fired in self-defense, Lieut. Telekovsky having attacked him with a dirk.

As to Gushers.

"My dear," said a careful mother to her daughter, "don't gush."

"Very well, mamma," replied the dutiful girl, "but you know that in the oil regions it is the gushing wells that are thought the most of."

"But you must also bear in mind that it is the unrefined oil which gushes."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Japanese Story Tellers.

Professional story tellers roam from house to house in Japan to spin their yarns. In the city of Tokyo there are about 600 of these professional romancers. Their pay averages 20 cents an hour. When the story teller discovers that his romances are becoming dull from frequent repetition, he moves into a new district.

Rippers are Taking a Survey o the Situation

EARMARKS OF PINGREEISM

Lansing, Mich., May 7.—If any more Detroit ripper bills, except the Ames measure to extend the terms of hal the aldermen and several other city officials, including Mayor Maybury, are jammed through the legislature there promises to be a bitter and foundation stirring factional fight in the republican party of the metropolis of the state. McMillan men yesterday viewed with anxiety and alarm the prominent part taken by old Pingree leaders and lieutenants in the conference of the g. o. p. rippers held at Concordia hall Detroit. They now say it looked to them as though such former stanch Pingree men as Charles Flowers, Alex I. McLeod and Robert Oakman were urging on the more rabid of the rippers for a double purpose—the belief that further legislation along the line of the public works, police and park department bills will cause the people to turn against the Navin-McMillan machine builders and re-elect Hazen S Pingree as mayor, and will also result in prominent and able Pingree lieutenants securing control of some of the politically powerful municipal departments with a view to using them in reestablishing Pingree in control of the republican organization of Detroit.

It is for this reason that one of the most prominent McMillan men in the Wayne delegation declared that he believed no more Detroit ripper bills will be passed by this legislature after Ames' term extension bill goes through the senate, which will probably be to-day.

Gov. Bliss has signed Rep. Bland's bill appropriating $8,406 for the Michigan naval militia, the money to be used in paying the organization's indebtedness that has accumulated since the Spanish-American war, in purchasing uniforms, etc., for new recruits, in building a new spar deck on the Yosemite and for other purposes.

Bland's bill to appropriate $4,000 for the purchase of bronze medals for the Michigan military and naval heroes of the Spanish-American war, has passed the house and is now before the senate committee on finance and appropriations. Senator Holmes will probably have it reported out this week.

In the senate last night, 23 members being present, Senators Murfin, High and Gad Smith, the special committee to confer with Detroit citizens relative to celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of the foundation of Detroit, reported in favor of the state participating. Then Senator Murfin offered a concurrent resolution to appropriate $25,000 and requesting Gov. Bliss to appoint a committee. On Murfin's motion it was referred to the committee on finance and appropriations.

Arrested on a Serious Charge.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., May 7.—Wm. Hahn of Utica, deputy game warden, was arrested yesterday and arraigned before Justice Lyons of this city on a charge of criminal assault preferred by Minnie Fenska, a crippled girl of Macomb township. Minnie claims she was walking along the highway on the way to church when overtaken by Hahn, who was on a wheel; he accosted her and introduced himself as the school teacher of that district; when they reached a secluded place the assault was committed, she being paralyzed on one side and helpless. Hahn denies the charge and waived examination, giving bail in the sum of $500 for appearance at the next term of court.

Prominent Politician Dead.

Port Huron, Mich., May 7.—A telegram was received here yesterday morning stating that [illegible] collector of [illegible] this port, had died at Lakeland, Fla., Monday morning at 2:30 o'clock. The news causes a great shock, as it had been announced that he was improving in health, and would arrive home some time this month. Neuralgia of the heart was given as the cause of death.

A. R. Avery was one of the most prominent republican politicians of the state, and had figured, together with his brother, Lincoln Avery, in every political battle of past years.

Practical Jokers Killed.

Davenport, Ia., May 7.—Emil Mohr and Charles Reis were killed yesterday while pretending to hang August Blunk on a pulley rope outside the Independent Malting Co.'s building. Mohr and Reis, with Gus Siems, were teasing Blunk and wound up by tieing the rope about his waist with the avowed intention of hanging him. The strain on the rope caused the fastenings 60 feet above to give way. An iron pulley struck Reis on the head, crushing it. A falling scantling brained Mohr. Blunk was slightly injured.

Liquor Got the Best of Him.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., May 7.—James Johnson of Port Huron, who robbed the Rapid Railway ticket offices at New Baltimore of a number of tickets, pleaded guilty before Justice Lyons and was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail. Johnson has been master in several lake vessels, but liquor got he better of him, and to that he attributes his downfall.

Salsbury Re-Elected.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 7.—City Attorney Lant K. Salsbury, indicted in Chicago in February for the alleged embezzlement of $50,000 from Omaha parties, the money to be used to boodle a water works scheme through the council, was re-elected city attorney by the new council last night.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD
SEMI-WEEKLY.

THE OLD STORY.

A Young Girl Takes Carbolic Acid and Dies.

Detroit, Mich., May 7.—Screaming with pain and clutching the pillows in the agony of death, pretty Inez Maltby, aged 21, was found in her room at 119 Park street at 6 o'clock Monday morning by Mrs. H. Carr and Miss Emma Sweetmore. An empty bottle of carbolic acid on the table beside the bed told the story.

Dr. High and Dr. Obetz were hastily summoned to the bedside of the dying girl, and the ambulance soon took her to Grace hospital, where death came at 8 o'clock.

A telegram from Flint says that Miss Maltby was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grove B. Maltby, respectable farmers. Until a year ago she held a position at the School for the Deaf, resigning the place voluntarily. While there she enjoyed an excellent reputation, and Supt. Clark thought she left with the ambition to become more than an ordinary domestic.

POLICEMAN KICKED TO DEATH.

Lansing Officer Killed By a Tough Character.

Lansing, Mich., May 7.—Patrolman George Brown, who has served on the Lansing police force for six or eight years, was kicked to death yesterday afternoon by Charles Tubbs, a prisoner in the city jail.

Tubbs, who bears a hard character, was locked up on Saturday night for being drunk. Yesterday it was determined to remove him from the cell he was occupying to another. Brown was assigned to the task.

Tubbs objected to the moving process, and when Brown attempted to force him he kicked the officer in the abdomen with such force that death resulted within a few minutes.

Both men were about 45 years old. Brown had a family in this city. He was looked on as an efficient and careful officer.

Friends of Tubbs claim that he did not strike or kick Brown, but that the latter's death was caused by heart failure, due to overexertion incidental to the struggle. A postmortem examination shows that he died of heart disease.

Body Found in the Woods.

Cheboygan, Mich., May 7.—John Cummings was found dead in the woods about four miles from Cheboygan on the road to Utes camp by F. Tobias. The body was brought to Undertaker Tuttle's and arrayed for burial. No signs of foul play. He was a member of Company K, M. N. G.

Detroit Men Are In It.

Lansing, Mich., May 7.—The Hecla Portland Cement & Coal Co. of Detroit, capitalized at $5,000,000, filed articles of association yesterday. The incorporators are Ubald R. Doranger of Bay City and Cameron Currie, Julius Stroh, E. H. Parker and H. H. Hatch of Detroit.

Daniels Held for Murder.

Jackson, Mich., May 7.—The examination of Daniels and Filley on a charge of murdering Ira Luker was resumed yesterday morning. The court decided that the evidence was not strong enough to hold Filley, and he was discharged. Daniels was held to the circuit court.

Killed His Companion.

Iron River, Mich., May 7.—Martin Gerlick, a Polish laborer, while under the influence of liquor, fatally stabbed a companion at Atkinson. Gerlick was brought here and is in jail.

Rebuilding of Jacksonville.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 7.—Perfect order prevails. The work of rebuilding has commenced. The owner of the Gardner building writes from Chicago that he has ordered plans for the erection of an eight story building on the old site. This was the costliest business structure burned. Plans are preparing for rebuilding the Windsor hotel. Insurance adjusters continue to arrive, but no concerted plan of loss settlements has been arranged.

The receipts by the relief association and other agencies approximate $50,000. Ten carloads of supplies were received yesterday from Charlestown and one from Atlanta, as well as many other small lots.

Ran Aground Off Buffalo.

Buffalo, May 7.—The big steel propeller Wilkesbarre, which sailed yesterday on her maiden trip to Chicago, ran aground at the outer entrance to the harbor. The cause of the grounding was due to low water. Five tugs put lines on the vessel, but were unable to move her. The owners of the boat decided to wait until the water rises. The boat is not damaged.

Get Into Line for a Snap.

Washington, May 7.—The civil service commission announces that there are not enough qualified candidates for the office of metal inspector of the bureau of animal industry, department of agriculture, to fill the demand. The offices pay on entrance $1,200 and salary of $1,400, with a good chance for promotion. The appointees must be veterinary college graduates.

Creditors Will Get Something.

Washington, May 7.—The comptroller of the currency has declared dividends in favor of the creditors of insolvent national banks as follows: Twenty-five per cent First National bank of Niles, Mich.; 25 per cent the First National bank of White Pigeon, Mich.; 3 4-10 per cent the First National bank of Hillsborough, Ohio.

U. S. Treasury Statement.

Washington, May 7.—Monday's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $157,032,341; gold, $97,613,290.

Kid Carter Beat Jack Bonner.

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—Kid Carter of Brooklyn was last night given the decision over Jack Bonner of Summit Hill, Pa. The fight went the 20-round limit.

The Point of His Warning.

"You ain't acquainted around here much, be you?" asked the mountaineer of the man on horseback.

"No."

"I reckoned not. I don't believe I'd go down the trail that runs past Abe Gore's shack if I wah you. Abe had his hoss stole last week."

"But this isn't his horse."

"You don't seem to understand. I ain't accusin you of stealin his hoss. I'm simply intimatin to you that at present Abe happens to be in need of a hoss purty bad. I wouldn't go down that road if I was you."—Indianapolis Sun.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

RAY'S RECRUIT
BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J.B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

"Course we have," sung out a jovial Pat, "and the credit of a benevolent and paternal government to back it, and there's my last cint to prove what I say," he added, whacking down a silver dollar on the counter.

"That ain't enough by the mate to it," said the proprietor gruffly. "Come, clear out, you boys. Train's going, no time for coffee. This will pay for the things you're eating," said he, and he made a grab for the dollar, but Pat was too quick for him.

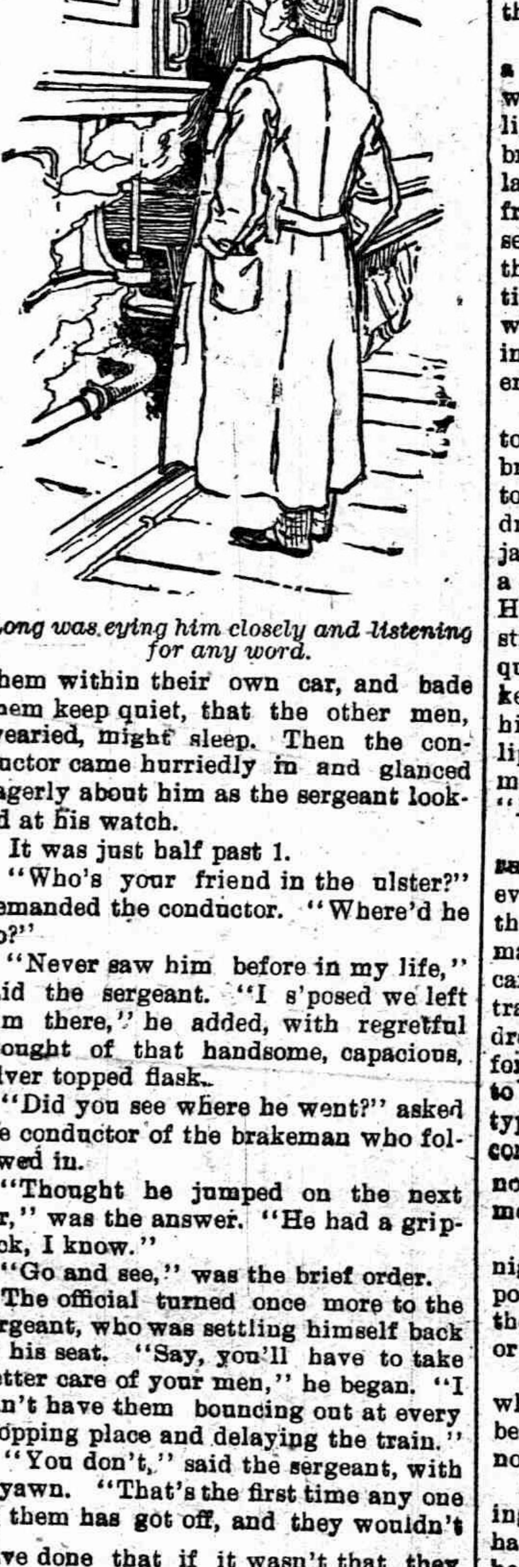
"'Board!" shouted a hoarse voice on the platform without.

"Back to your car, you men," ordered the sergeant.

"Give me that dollar," demanded the boss.

"Give us the coffee," replied the recruits, and for once the populace seemed to side with the soldier. The tall young man in the ulster and traveling cap lounged up to the counter and tossed a $2 bill at the angry manager. "Give them what they want," said he, "and be quick about it. Have some coffee yourself, sergeant. There'll be no other chance till you get to Butte." Then, with swift, significant, downward glance at the flap of a pocket, he lifted into view the silver top of a sizable flask, and the sergeant grinned and nodded appreciatively. The steaming cups were slid along the board, the embryo soldiers laughing and hustling good naturedly, pouring the hot liquid into the thick stone saucers and blowing industriously at the yellow brown flood. The conductor came to the door and stormed; the passengers began to edge away for their cars. No. 783 gave a warning whoop or two, and the fireman pulled at the bellcord, but the bluecoats wouldn't budge.

"Go ahead, Long. D——d if I'll hold this train another second," shouted the conductor, with energetic wave of his lantern. Hiss went the stopcocks. The big engine quivered and trembled in response, and with convulsive cough a volume of inky smoke was belched from the stack. Scut's bell clanged furiously, but only very slowly the long, ponderous train began to move. The crockery rattled and the windows shook as the massive engine came boiling and rumbling and panting by. The conductor heard his name called by the engineer and hurried alongside. "Look out for that kid in the big ulster. Tell you why at Willow Springs," was the hoarse warning, as, with slowly quickening speed, old 783 went ponderously on. The conductor looked dazed. The joyous band of bluecoats came tumbling forth as the foremost car rolled smoothly past, and, agile as monkeys, leaped to the platform of the baggage and "smoker," waving their caps and shouting jovial farewells. The sergeant, once more assuming official relations, sternly ordered them within their own car, and bade them keep quiet, that the other men, wearied, might sleep. Then the conductor came hurriedly in and glanced eagerly about him as the sergeant looked at his watch.



Long was eying him closely and listening for any word.

It was just half past 1.

"Who's your friend in the ulster?" demanded the conductor. "Where'd he go?"

"Never saw him before in my life," said the sergeant. "I s'posed we left him there," he added, with regretful thought of that handsome, capacious, silver topped flask.

"Did you see where he went?" asked the conductor of the brakeman who followed in.

"Thought he jumped on the next car," was the answer. "He had a gripsack, I know."

"Go and see," was the brief order.

The official turned once more to the sergeant, who was settling himself back in his seat. "Say, you'll have to take better care of your men," he began. "I can't have them bouncing out at every stopping place and delaying the train."

"You don't," said the sergeant, with a yawn. "That's the first time any one of them has got off, and they wouldn't have done that if it wasn't that they were hard up for coffee."

"You should have given them coffee last night at the supper station," said the conductor wrathfully.

"I did, and it was so bad they threw it away. This was better, and I'm sorry they weren't all awake to have some. They'll need it before we get to Butte. What time can we make it now, d'you s'pose?"

"Not before 7, if we do then. We have two freights and a cattle train to meet, and everything's running crooked tonight, even if we had no other trouble. Sure you never saw that fellow in the ulster before?"

"Sure. What's the matter with him? He treated like a nabob."

"That's one reason I want to know all about him. What arms have you fellows?"

"None at all," was the answer as the sergeant looked up in surprise. "I've a revolver, of course, but that's all. Why? You never have a 'hold up' along here, do you?"

But the conductor did not answer. The train had "struck its gait," as he expressed it, now, and was swaying as it tore westward along the rattling rails. The brakeman was hastening back to the car. "See him?" queried the conductor impatiently.

"No, sir. He's gone back to the sleeper."

Somewhere among the drowsing carload of recruits a voice was uplifted in not unmelodious song. Most of the men were sleeping soundly, but the lively squad of night owls just bundled aboard, refreshed by their coffee and bite at the station, seemed desirous of further entertainment. "Odd," said the conductor, "I've hauled many a lot of poor devils out to Wyoming and beyond. Most of 'em never came back, but I never yet saw a lot that didn't sing. What on earth have they got to sing for?"

"The Lord knows," answered the sergeant, "and I've been soldiering 20 years."

"Always in the cavalry?"

"Yes, all but one 'listment in a casemate that brought me nearer to desertion than ever I thought to be."

"Never meet my engineer, Jimmy Long? He used to be sergeant in the cavalry out here. Got shot through the legs in an Indian fight seven or eight years ago and had to quit."

"Know of him well, as most of us did, and I'd be glad to see him. He's pulling us tonight, is he?"

"Yes, and I wish you'd come forward with me when we get to Willow Springs, only a few miles ahead now. He thinks there's something wrong with that young fellow in the ulster. I've got to go back and look him up. Meet me on the platform, right hand side, when we stop, will you?"

The sergeant nodded, and the conductor went his way.

In the foremost sleeper he found the object of his search, already comfortably ensconced in the smoking compartment, his ulster thrown aside, his feet on the opposite seat, a fragrant cloud of smoke curling from the tip of his cigar. He had raised the window and was gazing out upon a spangled firmament above, a black void where lay the barren earth below.

Without a word, his cigar still between his teeth, he felt in the waistcoat pocket of a well made traveling suit of tweed, took out a cardcase and extracted therefrom his railway and berth tickets and handed them to the lantern bearing official.

The conductor studied the former closely. It was a "through" from Chicago to Butte, unlimited. He turned it upside down, hind side foremost and still seemed to find nothing amiss.

"Where'd you get this?" he presently asked, glancing keenly at the young man from under his cap visor. The passenger, still without removing his cigar, simply pointed to the head of the ticket, which showed that it was purchased at the office of the C. R. I. and P. in Chicago. "Stopped off at Platte Junction?" asked the conductor.

"Yes. What time will we reach Butte?"

"Not before 7. Plenty of time to go to bed and sleep." And the tone of the railway official plainly indicated that that was what the conductor thought the young man ought to do, instead of mooning to all hours of the night in the smoking room. The passenger gravely nodded acquiescence and said nothing. After an irresolute pause the conductor again spoke. "Did you tell the porter to show you to your berth?"

The traveler in tweeds was evidently a youth of varying moods. Chatting with the engineer he was frank, jovial, light hearted, even confiding. In the brief scene with the troopers he was laughing and friendly, even lavish, from their point of view. Was it some sense of suspicion, some subtle intuition that he was the object of a special scrutiny on the conductor's part, that he was being subjected to a cross questioning never thought of in the case of other patrons of the road?

Something in the conductor's look, tone and manner had given him umbrage. Like some itinerant clam, storm tossed and at odds with the world, he drew within his shell and clamped the jaws of his reserve. Something akin to a frown settled between his eyebrows. He looked coolly, almost defiantly, straight into the half closed eyes of his questioner, with a pair of wide open keen blue orbs of his own, and under his soft brown mustache his curved pink lips set like a trap. For a moment he made no reply, then finally answered, "No."

Mr. Jarvis was an old hand. He had run trains over the Transcontinental ever since it first bored a way through the hunting grounds of the Sioux, and many a tramp had he hustled off the cars in midprairie. But this was no tramp. This was a self possessed, well dressed, fine looking tourist, and, but for the straight, sharp, American clip to his words, rather of the English type. He nettled the conductor, and the conductor had nettled him. Each was now bristling at every point and in no mood to appreciate the other's position.

"Well, do you propose to sit up all night?" was the next question, propounded in a tone common enough on the faraway western railway a decade or so ago.

"What earthly business is it of yours whether I do or not? I've bought a berth and the privilege of using it or not as I see fit."

The train was slowing. It was nearing Willow Springs. The conductor had other duties to attend to and knew he must quit the field.

"I'll see you later, my cocky friend," he muttered to himself as he turned angrily away, with distinct sense of defeat, then let himself out on the platform with a most unprofessional slam of the sleeper door.

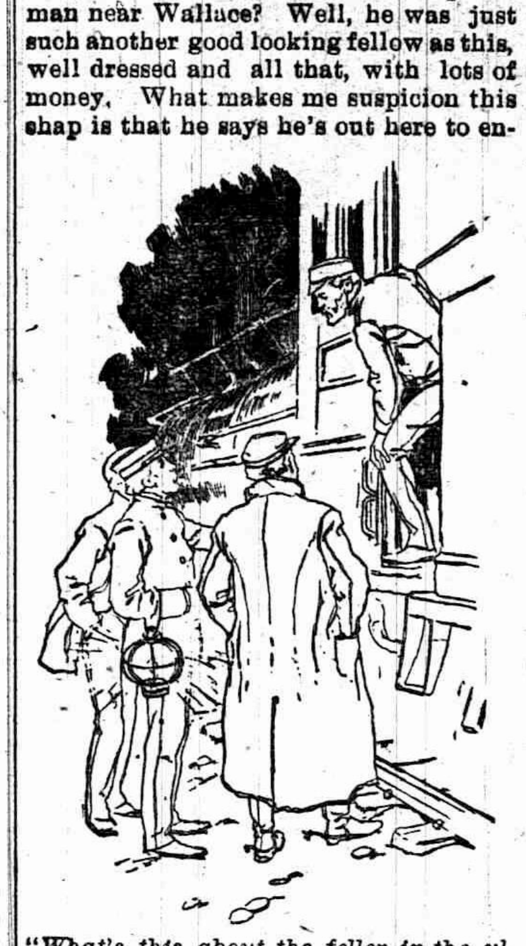
It was a long hundred yards up to the engine, but Jarvis hastened through the day car and smoker until he came to the recruit car platform, by which time the train was at a stand and he could safely spring off and run alongside. Under the dim light of the station the tall figure of the cavalry sergeant loomed before his eyes, his chevrons, stripes and buttons gleaming. The station keeper came sleepily forth as the conductor stepped into the beam of light from the office window. "Come on up to the engine with me," he said, and wondering the drowsy servitor followed. The platform was short, and the trio presently had to spring down and trudge along the prairie sod by the track side. Long was waiting for them, leaning out from his cab. At sight of the once familiar crossed sabers and buttons a gleam of pleasure shot across his grimy face.

"Hello!" he said. "I used to know pretty much every fellow that wore the stripes in that regiment."

"And pretty much every fellow in it knew you or of you. My name's Kearney," said the sergeant, reaching up a hand. But the conductor had no time for ceremonies.

"What's this about the feller in the ulster?" he demanded. "He's ticketed through to Butte from Chicago and is sassy as they make 'em. What d'you know?"

"I don't know anything. But you remember that affair on the K. P. last July—the swell that shot the expressman near Wallace? Well, he was just such another good looking fellow as this, well dressed and all that, with lots of money. What makes me suspicion this chap is that he says he's out here to enlist; wanted to ride in the cab and talk about it to me. Whoever heard of a fellow wanting to enlist until he was dead broke or half starved? This young fellow's pockets are full of cigars."



"What's this about the feller in the ulster?" he demanded.

"He doesn't want to enlist," chimed in Sergeant Kearney derisively. "He has a roll as thick as my hand. Treated all the crowd back there at the Junction."

"You hear that?" said Long. "It's just like as not he's aboard to find out who's in that sleeper and who's armed in the day car, and we'll meet his pals somewhere up in the foothills. Better let some of the soldiers into the express car and one or two here with me after we pass No. 12. Where does she side track for us?"

"We'll get orders at Bowlder Creek," answered the conductor. "I'll watch our cocky friend till then. No. 12 can't pull out of Thunder Gap till we get there. Now let her go for all she's worth, Jimmy."

Then back to the platform he hurried, eagerly explaining to the silent station master the cause of their delay earlier in the night. The sergeant sprang aboard, and Jarvis swung his lantern.

"You haven't heard of 12 at all?" he shouted.

And now as the sergeant re-entered the stuffy coach the songster had ceased. The melodious sounds had given place to many a snore. He glanced again at his watch, and the hands were pointing to five minutes of 2.

CHAPTER III.

Rushing westward through the night, the great train was indeed "going for all she was worth." Twenty-five miles away lay the foothills. There began the tortuous up hill climb to the high plateau at Pawnee, 40 miles of twist, turn, tug and pull, that in the earlier days of the road were never attempted without two engines. Now the mammoths like 783 scorned even a pusher. But tonight she had to haul an extra sleeper and an extra coach, both crowded, the latter packed with recruits, the former with a joyous party of excursionists, bound for the Pacific coast. It was swift, smooth running along the flats of the broad valley, dotted here and there, as it was, with farms and ranches and traversed over the old buffalo ranges by great herds of horned cattle. This crisp, moonless, starlit night all the western world was dark and still but for the clank and rush of the flashing monster with its long, dimly lighted train.

The lonely occupant of the smoking compartment, gazing silently out upon the northward heavens, had forgotten to keep alive the tiny fire of his cigar, and it had died unnoticed between his long, white, slender fingers. A glance at the handsome watch he drew from his waistcoat pocket told him it was almost 2 o'clock as, after a brief stop at some unknown, almost unseen station, the train rolled on again. The porter had come in to ask some question about how he would have his pillow, front or back, and was told it made no difference. Would the gentleman like one here in the smoking room? No, he would turn in presently. Call him in plenty of time for Butte. Then the porter tiptoed off to the rear of the heavily curtained aisle and curled himself up in a vacant section, leaving the stranger to his thoughts.

And that these were sad there could be no doubt whatever. His face as it sank into repose looked white and drawn in the dim light of the overhanging lamp. Once or twice as he gazed out upon the waste of darkness his eyes seemed to fill, his lip to quiver with strange, strong emotion. Once he bent forward, covered his face with both hands and leaned his elbows on his knees, then suddenly started, pulled himself together, "braced up," as he perhaps would have expressed it, thrust the moist end of the cigar between his teeth, found it cold and unresponsive, tossed it away, arose, gave himself a shake, took the flask from his ulster pocket and passed through the doorway to the lavatory where were the ice water tanks and started despite himself.

A haggard face flattened against the glass of the forward doorway was peering in at him—a face that was instantly withdrawn.

This was before the days of vestibuled cars. Seizing the doorknob and laying his flask on one of the basins, the young fellow quickly let himself out upon the platform and glanced about him. There on the lowest step, clinging to the hand rail, cringed and cowered the figure of a man who turned his head and gazed piteously, pleadingly up at the tall stranger. A tramp beyond doubt, and a shivering wretch he was, for the night air was sharply cold. A powerful hand was laid upon the shoulder of the crouching figure and heaved it up, and the poor creature's teeth chattered as he made some inaudible plea.

"I can't hear you," said the man in tweeds. "Come in here. You're half frozen." And he would have led him into the sleeper, but found that the snap latch was set—that he had locked himself out. Still clinging to his prisoner, he led on into the rear door of the day coach ahead. The lights were burning blear and dim. The passengers, curled or sprawled about their seats, were sleeping as best they could. A brakeman's lantern lay on the floor at the head of the aisle, and the brakeman sat in a forward seat, half dozing, wholly unconscious of the addition to the carload.

BOOMVILLE HOMELETS.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

Boomville ought to have a fire department. At the present time the only conveniences for fighting the lurid destroyer are a stepladder and an old bucket without a handle. Let us not wake up when it is too late.

We received a call a day or two since from Mr. Sam Norton, who lost a dollar on Main street a few weeks ago and has not recovered it up to date. He may never recover it, but he has the consolation of knowing that the dishonest finder will not go to heaven along with the rest of us.

It now transpires that Mr. John Griscomb's year-old baby did not swallow a pair of scissors, as stated in our last issue. What it got away with was half a dozen tacks and a brass thimble, but the doctor anticipates no malign results. Boomville cherubs have healthy appetites.

The editor of this paper, while on his way to the postoffice the other day, was picked off his feet and thrust head first into an empty barrel in front of Strong's grocery. The thruster was Abner Green, who had been drinking and was in a jokeful mood. We trust it may not happen again. The position was undignified.

THE POSITION WAS UNDIGNIFIED.

We are sorry to say that we missed the item last week about a cow breaking through the Looking Glass river bridge and breaking her leg, but we are in time to announce that it was her left hind leg and that she is owned by Farmer Savage. He thinks he can amputate the leg and save her life.

Among those who remembered the struggling but undaunted editor last week was Mrs. Jason Williams. She brought us in a pound of butter and a basket of potatoes, and could she have seen the tears in our wife's eyes as we carried the luxuries home she would have felt amply rewarded. We love to be an editor, and we love our subscribers.

M. QUAD.

Cruel Christophe.

There seems to have been nothing to appeal to in the "Emperor" Christophe's nature. Bravery, humility, all alike failed to touch him. He had no bowels of mercy. He was one day on the battlements of Haiti with a youth, who, perhaps presuming on past favors, in some manner displeased him. The drop from these sheer walls is 2,000 feet to the plain below. "You are, of course, about to die," said Christophe, "but I will be kind to you. You shall have a choice of deaths. Either you throw yourself over here or the soldiers shall shoot you."

The young man chose to fling himself into space. But by a miracle he fell among some trees or bushes on the cliff side and so escaped with a broken arm. He gathered himself up somehow and presented himself again before the emperor. "Your bidding has been done, sire," he said. "Yes, it has," remarked Christophe, "and I am very much interested to find that you survive. Oblige me by trying if you can do it again!"—"Where Black Rules White, Haiti," by Prichard.

A Possible Reason.

Freddie's father had just been struggling with an old fashioned bureau, and retiring disheartened from an unsuccessful effort to open one of its compartments he moved to the window and looking out upon the lowering sky exclaimed:

"It's mighty strange that the weather bureau can't give us a change of weather."

"Maybe," shyly interposed Freddie, "they can't open the bureau drawers."—Weekly [illegible]

George III and the Wigmakers.

When George III ascended the throne of England, his wealthy subjects were beginning to leave off wigs and to appear in their own hair, "if they had any." As the sovereign was himself one of the offenders, the peruke makers, who feared a serious loss of trade, prepared a petition, in which they prayed his majesty to be graciously pleased to "shave his head" for the good of distressed workmen and wear a wig, as his father had done before him.

When the petitioners walked to the royal palace, however, it was noticed that they wore no wigs themselves. As this seemed unfair to the onlookers, they seized several of the leading processionists and cut their hair with any implement that came most readily to hand.

From this incident arose a host of curious caricatures. The wooden leg makers were said to have especial claims on the king's consideration, inasmuch as the conclusion of peace had deprived them of a profitable source of employment; hence the suggestion that his majesty should not only wear a wooden leg himself, but enjoin the people to follow his laudable example.

Very Meek.

"Did you trump my ace, dear?" asked Mr. Meekton, who was his wife's partner at whist.

"I did," she rejoined sternly. "What of it?"

"I merely inquired to relieve my mind," he answered, with a gentle smile. "It is a great comfort to know you trumped it. If any one else had trumped it, you know, we should have lost the trick."—Exchange.

Force of Habit.

One of the neatest arrests on record was effected by a policeman near Bourne, England, not long ago. Suspecting two men of being deserters, he stepped up behind them and called out sharply, "Attention!" Taken unawares, the men sprang to position in true military style, only to find themselves the next moment in the arms of the law.

Close Resemblance.

Contractor—You won't sell me a carload of bricks on credit?

Dealer—No. Me and my brick are very much alike. We're hard pressed for cash.—Philadelphia Record.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright. Only 50 cents.

Civility Is Good Capital.

Look at the army of salesmen and saleswomen in our stores. There is not, I believe, as capable or honest a corps of workers in the world. Yet a French or English shopgirl will sell twice as many goods in the same time, and the customer will come again and again to be served by the same woman. Why? Because she is civil and courteous.

There is something pitiful as well as ridiculous in the indifference, the hauteur, the actual rudeness of many of the intelligent young men and women behind our counters. Yet civility is their capital. By selling gloves or tinware they earn their living, and the more civil they are the more they sell.

Most of my readers know a few saleswomen who have remained in some of the old business houses until an honored old age and by their ability and courtesy have made for themselves hosts of friends. It is a pity that these foolish young people could not learn their business from them.—An American Mother in Ladies' Home Journal.

Praise For Clubwomen.

The Ohio State Federation met on Oct. 24, 25 and 26 in the old and historical city, Marietta. The meeting was admirably planned, and a fine and instructive programme was carried out.

"Marietta men attended the opening meetings and enjoyed them," writes a correspondent of the Toledo Blade. Judge Follett, who is known all over the state, was one of these. He said:

"It is wonderful what you clubwomen are doing in the way of child education and development. As a member of the board of charities and correction I am in a position to see this. While abroad this summer I went with Miss Hall of the state board to visit a prison in Brussels. She was denied admittance. The women of Europe are not allowed to do reform work in such places. But let our clubwomen go on with their kindergartens and playgrounds, and after awhile there will be no need to visit prisons."

If you are sick all over and don't know just what ails you, it's ten to one your kidneys are out of order. Foley's Kidney Cure will bring you health and energy. J. J. Orr.

"I had a running sore on my breast for over a year," says Henry R. Richards of Willseyville, N. Y., "and tried a great many remedies, but got no relief until I used Banner Salve. After using one half box. I was perfectly cured. I cannot recommend it too highly." J. J. Orr.

When a physician is on the scent of a disease, he uses his diag-nose.

A lazy liver makes a lazy man. Burdock Blood Bitter is the natural, never failing remedy f or a lazyliver.

Never judge a man by the umbrella he carries until you find out who owns it.

A certain girl in this town claims that her fellow is a mind reader, because he can always tell when she has eaten onions.

AVOID all drying inhalants and use that which cleanses and heals the membrane. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and cures catarrh easily and pleasantly. Cold in the head vanishes quickly. Price 50 cents at druggists or by mail.

Catarrh caused difficulty in speaking and to a great extent loss of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucus has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved.—J. W. Davidson, Att'y at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

Elmer Smith and wife, of Adrian, came over Saturday night and spent the night at J. J. Orr's. Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Orr and Mr. and Mrs. Smith made the trip to Ann Arbor and back, and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Avery. Mr. and Mrs. Smith stayed in Tecumseh over night Sunday, returning to Adrian Monday morning.

Electric Railway.

Wm. B. Hatch, of the firm of Selling & Hatch, of Detroit, presented a franchise to the council last evening asking that this franchise be granted to Wm. B. Hatch and John C. Donnelly, representing the Everett interests, of Detroit for an electric road from Ann Arbor to Adrian through the village of Tecumseh by the way of Maumee, Mill and Evans streets.

The proposed line from here will probably be through Raisin Valley to avoid the railroads. The township granted the franchise by way of Macon, at a meeting held yesterday afternoon An adjournment was made by the council for Tuesday, at which time this ordinance will come up as a special order of business.

The Everetts company owns the Trenton suburban line, the Detroit city lines and at the present time are endeavoring to get control of the Pontiac line, is well backed financially and will no doubt build a good road. It is the purpose to commence work at once and get the road running this fall. There is no doubt the council and company can agree on the route and it would seem that the council would adopt a suitable franchise.

Quite a Sum.

Tecumseh is only a small town, yet quite a volume of business is done here each week in the year. One day last week C. A. Slayton paid out $886.38 freight on hard coal. This would denote quite an amount of money invested in coal during the year by this concern.

The Indian and the Northwest

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Shrewd Peter the Great.

Peter the Great adopted rather a novel means to convince his subjects that they should change their clothes to conform with the modern costumes of western Europe. Believing, as is well known historically, that the future greatness of Russia depended upon the facility with which it was made to assimilate all that was best in other countries, he had succeeded in introducing some important innovations into the half civilized region over which he held sway. At length he had patterns of cloth hung up at the gates of the towns, and those who did not conform to the fashions thus set were docked publicly, albeit this was done in as pleasant a manner as possible, for Peter believed in being good natured with his people. They, on the other hand, loudly demurred and used the argument that what was good enough for their forefathers was good enough for them.

"Very well," said the sagacious Peter. In 1703 he gave a dinner at Moscow to celebrate the marriage of one of his jesters and insisted that it should be conducted in strict conformity with ancient usage. There had formerly been a superstitious custom of not lighting a fire on a wedding. So Peter made them do without a fire, although it was very cold. He wouldn't give them any wine, because their forefathers never drank it. When they remonstrated, he reminded them that it was a poor rule which did not work all around, and thus by his good natured greatness wheedled his people into new coats, about the hardest thing that can be done with humanity.

Junior Reception.

At the home of Miss Floy Freeman last Friday evening a pretty reception was given to the Senior class, who are to be graduated in June, and the teachers of the high school. The parlor and sitting room were beautifully decorated in festoons of black and orange; the junior colors, and the library in the senior colors, red and white. Here two daintily dressed juniors presided over the frappe.

The guests, sixty in number, were welcomed by Louis McClure, Donald Wright, Helen Beebe and Helen Norcross. A program was arranged to be carried throughout the evening, consisting of songs by Misses Stevenson and Floy Freeman, a trio by Madge Hialey, Nina McClure and Miss Stevenson, and whistling by Fred Frost who was encored. Donald Wright and Harry Rosacrans played softly on the mandolin and guitar while the tables were being brought in for refreshments.

Red and white napkins, in the senior colors, with black butterflies, the date and year in orange, were the favors. A three-course supper were served, over which Mrs. Campbell presided, in which the color scheme of orange and black was carried out as far as possible.

Supper completed, the toastmaster, Bert Mills, was introduced by Fred Frost, the president of the class. Mr. Mills made the following remarks:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

From time immemorial it has been been the custom to serve toasts at all fetes, banquets and on such festive occasions as the present. In accordance with this time-honored custom, we are to serve toasts this evening.

In taking my position I feel much like a certain divinity student. An eminent divine being suddenly called away, appointed a young divinity student to fill his pulpit the following morning. The student, having no time for preparation, was naturally at his wit's end; however, he bravely mounted the pulpit. After the preliminary exercises, he announced his text and read the verses concerning Zachias in the sycamore tree. He began his remarks thus: "Zachias was a short man and so am I, Zachias was up a tree and so am I. Zachias came down and so will I," and he left the pulpit. That is exactly my position, I am up a tree, but I shall endeavor to come down without falling if possible.

Nothing seems more appropriate for the first toast of the evening than our guests, "The Seniors," and may some good be found even in the "Naughty Ones."

Miss Mary Perkins then gave the following toast to the seniors:

THE SENIORS.

As is usually the way in this world, the hardest task falls to the most incompetent. If any toast but to the seniors had been given me, I could have responded, but to toast those remarkable seniors, those dignified seniors, those very smart seniors, I can only make a bluff.

I consider it a great honor to be asked to toast those "naughty ones" though that name is all a mistake, also they never retaliate by calling us "naughty too." It is to be hoped that they will hand their good qualities down to us, the future seniors.

Oh, seniors gay and seniors grave,
Oh seniors short and seniors tall,
We pray thy gifts we so much crave
May on the modest juniors fall.

We'd carry them with perfect grace.
So, gifted seniors, have no fear,
As we shall take thy vacant place
And do the honors of next year.

Floyd Slater was then introduced by the toastmaster as follows: "The foregoing remarks have shown how much good may be found even in the poorest material. For our next toast better promising material is offered. Hoping and believing they will be done justice, I give you, 'The Juniors'."

THE JUNIORS.

It is with the greatest pleasure that I comply with the wishes of our toastmaster to do justice to the cause in my toast to the juniors. The juniors—with what reverence the words pass my lips; what memories the utterance recalls, of those model pupils, perfect in deportment and recitations. How vividly the colors appear before my eyes as I recall the morning when I first beheld their banner floating on high in the gentle wind only to find that it had disappeared in a very mysterious manner at noon on the same day. If the juniors should ever contemplate entering into a conspiracy for such a purpose, it would be well for them, as a word of advice gained from actual experience, to take along something to allay the pangs of hunger.

While we may deserve to be called "the Naughty Ones," the juniors, although it may not be a true statement, are naughty two. The Jolly Juniors, no doubt, derive the word, which distinguishes them from the Solemn Seniors, from a characteristic of their vice president, but with the juniors, however, it will not be perpetual, for in the course of a year's time a great change will be seen and they will then realize how great a burden we have to bear.

The toastmaster then called on the youngest, prettiest and best natured of the teachers and Miss Welchli responded to the toast of "Manual Training" with a bright and witty poem.

By manual training we generally mean
The girls are taught to sew and seam,
Also to get good meals by making pies and bread,
Cookies, cakes and all other goodies, it is said.

To saw and hammer the boys are taught.
By planing and carving, things are wrought
That both for us and beauty are good
When made of just the right kind of wood.

This toast must bring before us the question
Whether it is the best for our digestion
That girls all these things should learn
Or grow up all domestic arts to spurn

Is it best our boys, this art
That will of their lives become a part,
Should take with them into life's work
So that never from handicraft they need to shirk.

Let us suppose that before the class of 1901
Grave and dignified seniors had become,
It had pleased the people of this fair place
The effects of manual training here to trace.

What would this bright class have learned
When from our school they had adjourned?
Too much time and space would it take
If the outcome of all I planned to stake.

So with the help of Apollo's hight so sheen,
A few from this number I shall glean
And try what the effects would be
If manual training to all had been free.

The girls of the chemistry class would try
All the eatables, bread, cakes, cookies and pie,
By all the formulas for H2S to make,
And then wonder why all were eager these to forsake.

Mabel and Elona would have the bread all nice and light
And then seat themselves a note to write,
Which finished, when to their bread they pass,
They find it all a flattened mass.

Luella would quietly in the oven put a cake,
And then turn to her neighbor a whispering word to take.
Meanwhile the cake would have turned brown and black,
But Luella's attention still would it lack.

While Floyd, Leon and Earle each racked his head
How to plane a pole for their flag so red,
Willard and Forrest would be carving cut places
In which to hide of peanut shells all traces.

In conclusion, leaving all folly aside,
Manual training is and ought to be of every school its pride,
For there is something in life besides books,
History, conjugations and mathematical crooks.

Any school that trains the boys and girls to know
The arts of handicraft and its results to show,
Has fitted them in life's long struggle and race
To take a far higher and far nobler place.

Mr. Mills called on Mr. Kellogg for the final toast on "Curiosity," introducing him with one of Mr. Kellogg's favorite maxims, "If you don't talk loud enough to be heard, you won't get credit for what you say." Mr. Kellogg spoke well and briefly on the subject and said that curiosity could never be defined, but it nevertheless was a mania in some of the classes.

Toasts and banquet over, the musical program was finished, after which the guests departed. It was throughout a most enjoyable affair and the juniors are to be complimented on their taste in planning a very pleasant little reception.

In Case of Fire.

In case of fire if the burning articles are at once splashed with a solution of salt and nitrate of ammonia an incombustible coating is formed. This is a preparation which can be made at home at a trifling cost and should be kept on hand. Dissolve 20 pounds of common salt and 10 pounds of nitrate of ammonia in 7 gallons of water. Pour this into quart bottles of thin glass, and fire grenades are at hand ready for use. These bottles must be tightly corked and sealed to prevent evaporation, and in case of fire they must be thrown near the flames so as to break and liberate the gas contained. At least two dozen of these bottles should be ready for an emergency.

In this connection it is well to remember that water on burning oil scatters the flame, but that flour will extinguish it. Salt thrown upon a fire if the chimney is burning will help to deaden the blaze.

If a fire once gets under headway, a covering becomes a necessity. A silk handkerchief moistened and wrapped about the mouth and nostrils prevents suffocation from smoke. Failing this, a piece of wet flannel will answer.

Should smoke fill the room, remember that it goes first to the top of the room and then to the floor. Wrap a blanket or woolen garment about you, with the wet cloth over your face, drop on your hands and knees and crawl to the window.

Bear in mind that there is no more danger in getting down from a three story window than from the first floor if you keep a firm hold of the rope or ladder. Do not slide, but go hand over hand.

One of Sothern's Jokes.

That inveterate joker, Sothern the actor, had made an appointment with Toole, the comedian, to dine at a well known London restaurant. The hour of meeting was fixed and Sothern arrived some few minutes before the appointed time. An elderly gentleman was dining at a table at some little distance from that prepared for the two actors. He was reading a newspaper which he had comfortably arranged before him as he was eating his dinner. Sothern walked up to him and striking him a smart blow between the shoulders said:

"Hello, old fellow! Who would have thought of seeing you here? I thought you never"— The assaulted diner turned around angrily, when Sothern exclaimed: "I beg you a thousand pardons, sir. I thought you were an old friend of mine—a family man whom I never expected to see here. I hope you will pardon me."

The old gentleman growled a reply, and Sothern returned to his table, where he was presently joined by Toole, to whom he said:

"See that old boy? I'll bet you half a crown you daren't go and give him a slap on the back and pretend you have mistaken him for a friend."

"Done!" said Toole, and done it was immediately with a result that may be imagined.

How Horses Rest.

"Have you ever noticed," asked a Germantown veterinarian the other day, "that every horse left standing by a curbstone for any length of time invariably turns around so as to place his fore feet on the sidewalk? He always does it if the road on which he is standing slopes the least bit in either direction. This shows that the horse has a great deal of plain, common sense. He will not allow himself to be worn out where it is not necessary. If people only had his wisdom, there would be a great deal less sickness in the world than there is at present. When a thoughtless driver leaves his horse standing on a slope or at an angle of the street, all the animal's weight is thrown upon one side, causing strain, and if left long enough painful exhaustion. Twenty minutes of such an ordeal will fatigue a horse more than a whole day's travel. But when he is able to plant his fore feet on the curbstone it gives him a better plant and adjusts his weight more equably. Many of the muscular ailments from which horses suffer are brought upon them by being continually obliged to stand by the gutter side on streets which slope decidedly. A good driver will always seek to rest his horse on a level when possible."—Philadelphia Record.

Arizona Forests.

Arizona is supposed to be almost an unbroken desert, but in reality it has the largest unbroken pine forest in the United States, covering an area of over 8,000 square miles. This timber is usually found at an altitude of between 5,500 and 7,500 feet. The total quantity of pine timber fit for sawing purposes within the boundaries of the territory amounts to 10,000,000,000 feet, which can supply the needs of a populous state for more than a century.

Highest Cross In the World.

The highest cross in the world is said to be that which caps the loftiest peak of the Harz mountains. The cross is in reality a tower, and it commands a magnificent view of the country around. The height of the tower is 120 feet, and it stands on a mountain 1,731 feet above the sea level. A stair of 200 steps leads to the top of the cross, but there is an elevator of which people may avail themselves who for any reason wish to avoid the long climb.

Buying Molasses.

She was newly arrived from the old country, and she went to the store for sirup.

"Give me a pound of treacle," she said to the grocer.

"Treacle!" repeated the grocer. "You mean molasses."

"Possibly."

"We don't sell it by the pound, but by the measure."

"Oh, then give me a yard!"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

No Snakes In Hawaii.

The centiped is the only poisonous insect on the Hawaiian Islands, and its sting here is no more dangerous than the sting of a wasp or hornet in the United States. On the mainland the tarantula's sting is usually fatal and always brings serious consequences. Hawaii is fortunate, too, in having no snakes or poisonous reptiles.—Honolulu Republican.

PUNY CHILDREN

TOO MANY OF THEM DIE.

Their Little Bodies Unable to Stand the Ordeal of Development.

WE THINK EVERY MOTHER IN THIS TOWN SHOULD KNOW ABOUT VINOL.

It is the Delicious Tonic We Advise for Growing Children.

Is your boy or girl pale and listless? Do they act differently from other children? Do they sleep poorly and eat poorly? Does your boy avoid the sports and games of other boys? Does your girl complain of headache and find her studies a hardship?

If so, you may make up your mind they are growing too fast. They need something to help nature in her great work of furnishing the necessary elements for creating flesh and muscle tissue, bone structure and rich, pure, red blood.

They need a tonic in the full sense of the word and we can tell you what to get.

It is Vinol Wine of Cod-Liver Oil, the great modern reconstructor. Children like it, it is so delicious to the taste, in spite of the fact that it contains a highly concentrated extract of the medicinal principles that are found in cod-liver oil.

But because the vile-smelling and tasting grease has been discarded and all of the other disagreeable features eliminated, the benefits of Vinol are easily understood.

Vinol acts favorably on the stomach, creates an appetite and enables the food that is eaten to do the greatest possible amount of good.

Following is a letter that bears directly on this subject:

"I was all run down and took Vinol. It did me so much good and it was so pleasant to take that I gave it to my children. They were growing fast and needed something in the way of a tonic and I found it to be just the thing for them."—SARAH PICKERING, 1932 Fall River, Mass.

We cordially invite mothers interested in the welfare of their children, as well as any one else needing a sure, safe and delicious tonic, rebuilder and rejuvenator, to call on us. We will gladly tell any one all we know about Vinol and why we so highly endorse it.

Inasmuch as we are always ready and pleased to refund the cost of Vinol to those who don't find it exactly what we claim it to be, it will be seen that we are prepared to substantially endorse our claims for the excellence of this marvelous preparation.

Cases of Queer Revenge.

In England, where men have more time for everything, including revenge, some queer methods of playing even have come into the courts.

Albert Bewdley of Leeds had a dog that howled at night. A naturalist next door did not like it, but had no legal recourse.

One day ants of the minute red variety began to overrun Bewdley's house. Nothing that could be done headed them off. They grew worse and worse. He had made up his mind to break his lease and move when one night he heard a noise in his dining room. Slipping down, he found the naturalist emptying a bag of ants on the floor.

In court the naturalist paid damages, but he did it smilingly.

Rowley, the late English violinist, was hard to beat on his perseverance against one who had incurred his ill will.

Rowley had a quarrel with a horse dealer named Brant. It was a trivial matter, but Rowley took the next house to Brant, set up a piano, bought a cornet and proceeded to make insomnia for Brant.

After one or two assault cases in court Brant moved. Rowley bought out the next door neighbor and followed with piano and cornet. Brant went to law, but found he could do nothing. Failing, he took a detached house. Then Rowley hired brass bands and organs and assailed him. This was actionable, and Rowley paid £1,000 for his revenge. —Chicago Tribune.

The Golfer's Pun.

At a recent auction sale one of the paintings had for a subject a gayly attired golf girl making a long drive. The bidding on this opened very brisk—$60, $65, $70 and finally $72.

"Seventy-two, two, two, two!" cried the auctioneer.

"Fore!" shouted some one in the rear.

With the exception of the golfer in the front row, who immediately "ducked," the joke passed unnoticed.

"Four," repeated the auctioneer. "Do I hear five?"

He did not hear "five," and a cold sweat broke out on the brow of the last bidder as now, for the first time, the possibility of having to buy that picture occurred to him. Seventy-four dollars for making a pun! He made a solemn vow then and there that he would never attempt another as with a sickly grin he thought of unpaid bills. The attendant was standing at his elbow; the auctioneer had raised his hammer. "One—two—th"—

"Five!"

The ordeal was past. The auction proceeded, with the crowd unaware that the punster had received proper punishment.

For the benefit of those who do not play golf a diagram of the pun is furnished. "Fore" is the warning shouted by the player when about to drive.—New York Mail and Express.

TESTS PATIENCE.

The Most Patient People Must Show Annoyance at Times.

Nothing spoils a good disposition quicker,

Nothing taxes a man's patience
Like any itchiness of the skin
Itching piles almost drive you crazy.
All day it makes you miserable.
All night it keeps you awake.
Itch. Itch. Itch. With no relief.
Just the same with eczema.
Can hardly keep from scratching it.
You would do so but you know it makes you worse.
Such miseries are daily decreasing.
People are learning they can be cured
Learning the merits of Doan's Ointment.

Read the testimony of a Battle Creek citizen.

Mr. A. G. Ayers, book binder, of 197 West Main street, Battle Creek, says: "My hands became so sore from eczema that it was with difficulty I could bend my fingers. The skin cracked open, large scabs formed and in addition to the spots being tender they itched intolerably. I tried everything I could hear about or get hold of to stop the trouble but I was unable to do so until I procured Doan's Ointment. I had heard it spoken about by several people but as I thought it would act like all other preparations which I tried I waited some time until I was compelled from the condition of my hands to do something. Doan's Ointment cured me. Up to date, and this is months after I stopped the treatment, I have had no indication of any return."

Doan's Ointment for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

THE RIGHT THING TO PUT ON.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

From the natural impulse to "put something on" a painful spot all applications for the relief of pain have arisen.

The most successful have ever been poultices or plasters, and the best of these is Benson's Porous Plaster.

No other has anything like the same power as a curative agent; it is highly and scientifically medicated, and its standard is advanced year by year.

Use Benson's Plaster for coughs, colds, chest diseases, rheumatism, grip, neuralgia, kidney trouble, lame back, and other ailments that make Winter a season of suffering and danger. It relieves and cures quicker than any other remedy.

Do not accept Capsicum, Strengthening or Belladonna plasters in place of Benson's, as they possess none of its curative power. Insist on having the genuine.

The people of every civilized land have testified for years to the superlative merit of Benson's Plasters; and 5,000 physicians and druggists of this country have declared them worthy of public confidence.

For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on the receipt of 25c. each. Accept no imitation or substitute.

CHOPSTICK DINNERS.

A FAD WITH WOULD BE BOHEMIANS IN NEW YORK.

Chinese Restaurants There Tolerate a Free and Easy Etiquette, and Everybody Does Just About as He or She Pleases.

In the last few years a surprisingly large number of Chinese restaurants have made their appearance in up town districts in New York. The tawdry outward decorations of red and blue lights and huge gilt Chinese characters are in every case the same. The same, too, are the unattractive entrances, the walls decorated with colored pictures of pretty Chinese girls and marvelous specimens of landscapes, the little tables covered with white oilcloth, the general dilapidation of the establishment. Nothing about them seems attractive, and yet these places thrive, and their number increases with astonishing rapidity. The reason is not far to seek if one is at all familiar with the facts. There are several characteristics of the Chinese restaurant which recommend it highly to certain classes and seem to indicate that its popularity is not a mere fad.

In the first place it should be understood that most of these places are really what they are supposed to be, eating houses carried on under Chinese management. The cooks are invariably true Celestials, and in only a few cases are the proprietors Americans. The food is prepared, therefore, according to the most approved methods of the Middle Kingdom, with the result that in cheapness and savoriness (if you like it) it can easily outclass similar places run by American cooks. The Chinese is a master of the art of making palatable dishes out of next to nothing or rather a little of everything. Not even the French cook can rival him. The insipidity of cheap chophouses and the sameness of the dairy lunch counters are thus escaped by frequenters of these restaurants. Moreover, in spite of appearances the food is prepared in an extremely cleanly manner. No one is debarred from entering the kitchen, and a visit thither sends one back with renewed appetite to the untidy eating room. So many who while possessed of a small share of this world's goods still affect "sportiness" frequent the restaurant for its cheapness and grow to enjoy the highly flavored dishes.

There is also a free and easy atmosphere about the Chinese eating house which attracts many would be "Bohemians" as well as a goodly share of a class below the lowest grades of the city's many graded Bohemia. Visitors loll about and talk and laugh loudly. When the waiter is wanted, some one emits a shrill yell which brings an answering whoop from the kitchen, followed sooner or later by a little Chinese at a jog trot. Any one who feels like it may stroll into the kitchen and try a little pigeon English on the cook. The proprietor will teach anybody to use the chopsticks and roar with laughter over the failures of the novice. Everybody does as he or she pleases within certain very elastic bounds. The limit is reached sooner in some places than in others, for while some of the houses are before midnight at least perfectly well conducted others are of more than questionable respectability. It is curious and interesting to note that under American management the tone of these places is lower than when the Chinese are in sole control.

These new up town places are not so good, either in a moral or a culinary way, as those down in Chinatown. It is usual to speak as if Mott and Pell streets were the city's sink of iniquity, and so they are in some respects, but there are no Chinese restaurants in the neighborhood as disreputable as one or two up town. The clientele of the down town places is above suspicion as a rule. Chinese drop in for their meals, and dwellers from up town come either from curiosity or because they have learned to like good Chinese cooking. Up town the bills of fare are more limited. "Yockaman," "chop suey" and "chowman" are the pieces de resistance. They answer the purpose certainly, for 25 cents' worth of some kinds of chop suey served with rice will make a toothsome dish for two people. Tea is served free of charge, and the quantity is not limited. But no one should judge the Celestials' culinary skill by these up town houses.

Many of the guests in these restaurants come regularly. Frequently men and women come with pails to buy the food and take it home. Negroes are in disproportionately large numbers. They seem to like the Chinese, and indeed the noise in the kitchen reminds one of the similar condition of southern kitchens under negro management. However solemn the Chinese may seem to be in public, he is a cheerful creature in his own kitchen. Talk and laughter, even music during "off" hours, float out to the dining room. All the servants seem ready to break into smiles at the smallest provocation. They are always ready to exchange jests with their patrons, but familiarity never becomes impertinence. The Chinese doesn't care what happens so long as he is left unmolested. He likes everything to be slipshod and merry.—New York Tribune.

Why "Wedding Breakfast?"

"In all my experience of wedding breakfasts," said a guest at a wedding, "I have never understood why the feast was called a breakfast and not a luncheon. Now I have learned. It is from the custom in the Church of England, where the bride and bridegroom always receive the holy communion before the ceremony, receive it fasting and remain fasting until after the wedding, when the meal which is served is really a breakfast."—New York Times.

How Accidents Become Habits.

As to our mannerisms, says a writer in the Baltimore Sun, at first they are accidents, and afterward they become habits. It is singular how easy it is to convince a credulous public that a misfortune is a gift, just as an eccentricity is a mark of genius. Your correspondent knows a lady who was asked in marriage by several gentlemen (for where one pastures others will follow), although she was neither beautiful nor clever nor rich, but because she was affected with a trembling of the lids. In her inmost heart she who addresses you believes the trembling began with nervousness, but it was universal, and after a little what was curious began to be regarded as fascinating. At any rate I know a well established, portly lady, married to a man who secured her, not without difficulty, whose only sorrow is the necessity of keeping up the girlish habit which procured her a spouse. He is not a sentimentalist, but he wants what he paid for. He married her because her eyelids trembled, and not unnaturally he wishes to be possessed of the same treasure.

Mrs. Gilbert and Augustin Daly.

"The pleasantest recollections of my stage life are those connected with the governor," said Mrs. John Gilbert. "We never called him Mr. Daly—that is, we older ones, who knew him well.

"He never bothered much with Jim Lewis and myself. He had more trouble with John Drew and Ada Rehan. They were young and needed looking after, you know.

"He was very set in his ways, and if he took a fancy to a piece of stage furniture he invariably introduced it into every play. He had a pair of large, dark blue majolica vases which were the bane of my life. They were always placed near a doorway in such a manner that you had to have the dreadful things always on your mind or you would run into them.

"I had complained several times to the governor and begged him to put them in the storeroom, but he had taken a fancy to them, and they remained.

"Well, one day I did knock one of them down, and it was smashed to bits. The governor never said a word, but he looked volumes. He was arranging the interior for a new play a few days later, and in one scene I had to faint on a lounge.

"'Tom,' he said to the stage hand, 'see that that lounge is good and strong, for Mrs. Gilbert is very gawky, and it would ruin the scene if she smashed it when she fainted.'

"That was all, but I knew that he knew how that vase was broken."—New York Herald.

Confiscation In Morocco.

It is a custom in Morocco that all the property of an official reverts at death to the crown. The logic which leads to such a result is simple, for the government argues that all fortunes thus accumulated consist of moneys illegally retained by the authorities. A governor when appointed is probably possessed of no considerable fortune. When he dies, he may be a millionaire. Whence came his wealth? Squeezed most certainly from the tribes under his authority and therefore amassed only by the prerogatives of the position in which the sultan had placed him. It has never struck the Moorish government that these great fortunes might more honorably be returned to the people from whom they were stolen. The result is entire confiscation to the crown, including often such private property as his governor may have been possessed of before his appointment and not seldom, too, of the property of his relatives.

When the mighty fall in Morocco, the crash brings down with them their families, even uncles and cousins and all connected with them, and it is not seldom that the sons of great governors, who have been brought up in the luxury of slaves and horses and retinues of mounted men, have to go begging in the streets.—Blackwood.

Barbers of Spain.

The barber's business in Spain is peculiar in that he is called upon to ply his shears on donkeys as well as men, for it is an important item in the care of Spanish donkeys that they should be sheared as to the back in order to make a smoother resting place for man or pannier. So, while the master held his animal, one of the barbers plied some enormous clacking shears and littered the ground with mouse colored hair, leaving the beast's belly fur covered below a fixed line and for a small additional price executing a raised pattern of star points around the neck.

The tonsorial profession is an indispensable one in a country where shaving the whole face is generally practiced among all the humbler orders, not to mention toreros and ecclesiastics. But the discomfort to which the barber's customers submit is astonishing. Instead of being pampered, soothed, labored at with confidential respectfulness and lulled into luxurious harmony with himself, as happens in America, a man who courts the razor in Spain has to sit upright in a stiff chair and meekly hold under his chin a brass basin full of suds and fitting his throat by means of a curved nick at one side.

Cause of Talleyrand's Lameness.

The cause of Talleyrand's lameness has long been a matter of dispute. Some stories have it that the defect was congenital; others that it was occasioned by an accident which befell him in his infancy. The most curious explanation of all is that offered by a writer in The Quarterly Review. "To quote the very words of our informant, an eminently distinguished diplomat," says the writer, "Talleyrand's Vienna colleague, Baron Wessenberg, told me years ago that his lameness was owing to carelessness of his nurse, who laid him down in a field while she flirted with her sweetheart and on coming back to her charge found some pigs dining on the infant's legs. I am sure that Wessenberg told me this as an established fact, and I am all but sure that his authority was Talleyrand himself."

Weak.

"Do you know that Nigster is so weak that he can't stand alone?" asked Browne.

"Good gracious, no!" replied Jones. "What is the matter with him?"

"Why, I asked him if he could stand a loan of 10 shillings and he said he couldn't."—London Fun.

What a Curio Is.

"What is a curio, father?"

"A curio is a piece of china that your mother has had spared to her through the devastating dynasties of seven or eight cooks."—London King.

"You can convince a woman that the earth isn't round," said the breakfast cynic, "but you can't convince her that the druggist doesn't make 50 per cent profit on postage stamps."—Philadelphia Record.

Advice.

"Young man," said Senator Sorghum, "if you want to succeed in politics never break your word."

"But are there not times when it is impossible to keep a promise?"

"To be sure. But you must make your arrangements so that you don't break the promise yourself. Put the blame on somebody else."—Washington Star.

No Trouble.

"I suppose," said the visitor, "it's like pulling teeth to get any money out of your husband these days?"

"Oh," chipped in little Tommy, before his mother could speak, "ma don't have any trouble pullin teeth. She just takes 'em out and puts 'em in a glass."—Philadelphia Record.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Fished For Its Dinner.

"Looking over my neighbor's fence one day," says a lover of animals, "I was surprised to see on his doorstep these queer companions: A beautiful white sea gull and my neighbor's pet cat sitting quietly together.

"Becoming interested, I jumped the fence and asked Jones about his feathered pet. He told me that some boys had shot the gull a few days before and broken its wing, and as they were passing his house he noticed the poor, suffering thing and bought it. He bandaged the broken wing, and the gull, seeming to understand his kind intentions, became quite tame and nestled its pretty head against his hand.

"Jones entertained me by showing how the gull usually took his meals. Bringing a plate of oysters and a fork, he called 'Goosey, goosey, goosey!' and the bird came running to him. Then he held out an oyster on the fork and the gull seized it quickly with its yellow bill and ate it as demurely as if oysters had been served to it in this way all of its days.

"The oddest thing occurred one day when my neighbor gave the gull some small pieces of meat for dinner. He placed the meat on the ground near the gull, but the gull, espying a pan of water near by, took the meat piece by piece and, walking over, dropped it into the water. Then, true to its nature, it began fishing for its dinner."—Christian Advocate.

Our Last Cargo of Slaves.

Captain Foster was the commander of the slave ship Clotilda that brought the last cargo of slaves to the United States. The trip was made only after many thrilling scenes requiring weeks of skillful maneuvering and dangerous exploits. Just before the north and south engaged in war Captain Foster built the Clotilda and announced that he would make a trip to the gulf of Guinea despite the fact that United States war vessels had burned and sunk the ships of many who tried the voyage. He was warned repeatedly of the dangers attached to such an undertaking, but he equipped his ship and sailed away.

He reached the African coast after going out of his course many times and remained along the coast for a month. He succeeded in getting 100 negroes on board before he was detected by the watchful vessels of the United States. He was pursued, but easily outdistanced his pursuers, and two months later arrived in Mobile bay with his human cargo. A steamboat met the slaveship during the night, and the negroes were transferred in order to avoid the custom house officials. Captain Foster set his vessel on fire and passed through Mobile without being detected. The government authorities hunted for him for months, but he eluded them until the close of the war, when he retired from the sea.

Tipping the Butcher.

Did you ever buy your own steaks and get the worst in the shop nearly every time? An old friend has had that misfortune, and he is always willing to pay two or three cents more a pound than any other customer. Having listened calmly to his tale of woe, I inquired if he had acquired the practice of tipping the butcher. Tipping the butcher? No! He thought it was a sufficient tip to offer the two or three cents more a pound. "That offer," I tried to explain, "goes to the proprietor direct, or his block man thinks you are trying to make a thief of him by inducing him to hold out for himself the extra price. It will never work.

"Just say to your cutter: 'See here, old chap, I've been dissatisfied with my steaks for some time. Come out and take a drink, and tell me how to select good meat.' He's too busy. Then slip a dime into his hand and say, 'Have a glass of beer when you get out,' or a quarter and say, 'Have a smile with me when you have time.' Repeat this performance and presently your steaks are the delight of home. In the busiest private market in New York it is the rule to tip the butchers. You can get nothing fit to eat without it."—New York Press.

Not an Educated Dog.

In the "Floresta Espanola" of Melchior de Santa Cruz the author has an anecdote of Cardinal Pedro Goncalez. That prelate noticed that one of the priests in his retinue, a Biscayan, carried a short sword under his cloak. The cardinal reproved him and told him that it was wrong for a cleric to carry arms. The Biscayan replied that he carried the weapon to defend himself if he were attacked by a dog. The cardinal said that in case he saw a dog running at him he should begin to recite from the gospel of St. John. The priest acknowledged that this was a good way, but held to the dagger, "because there are some dogs who do not understand Latin."

Her Arrested Development.

Man is a perfected marsupial. He is a creature of pockets. With him the necessity of a pouch simply develops one. This is the law of evolution.

The first we read of him as a pocket bearing animal he was on a level with the kangaroo. He then had one pouch fastened to his belt.

Now look at him and compare him to woman, for whom, in his chivalry, he is truly sorry. She, in her helplessness, is usually behind the kangaroo and at her best only equals him with the one pouch fastened at her waist. She has not evolved through the laws of nature, but under the sterner decrees of the dressmaker.

What a difference between no pockets and a score of pockets! The first is woman, the other man. Woman is literally fettered for want of pockets. She must carry in her hands whatever is not a part of her clothing, while man's arms, palms and fingers are free—free to help his unfortunate sister.

Think of five pockets in trousers, five in vest, five in jacket and five in overcoat—an exact score in all! Some men have more than this.

When man took up the handkerchief habit, he made a pocket for that convenient article. He doesn't have to be picking them up—except for the women.

He made a pocket for his knife and a pocket for his watch, a pocket for his keys and a pocket for his letters, a pocket for his tobacco and a little pocket for his car tickets, and he kept on making pockets as fast as he needed them.

Women in their helplessness envy him. They reach out to him to borrow his knife, to borrow his pencil, to borrow a bit of string and to borrow a dozen articles that he usually has stowed away about his clothing. He is kind and lends, for he is sorry for them in their arrested development.—New York Herald.

HEADED A PARADE

Pres. McKinley's Carriage Drawn by Six Spirited Horses

GALA DAY AT LOS ANGELES

The Old Soldiers at the Home Gave the President a Remarkable Demonstration and He Made a Happy Speech.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 10.—From a broad blue canopied pavillion, surrounded by members of his cabinet, the governor of Ohio and notables from many states, President McKinley yesterday reviewed the floral parade of the Los Angeles carnival. The city was packed. The population of Los Angeles, according to the census, is more than 100,000, but the streets must have held almost twice that number. Pasadena, Santa Monica and other neighboring towns in southern California were literally depopulated. The scene on Broadway, where the reviewing stand was located, resembled Pennsylvania avenue in Washington on the day of an inauguration parade. Every facade flamed with bunting, flags and pampas grass plumes—red, green and orange—the colors of the Fiesta prevailing; terraced stands of people, the windows walled in with them, the sidewalks to the roped street packed with them like sardines in a box. Mrs. McKinley did not witness the show, but she drove along Broadway and received the plaudits of the multitude just before the procession appeared. The president rode at the head of the parade in an open carriage drawn by six spirited horses, with yellow satin harness. At the head of each horse walked a Spanish cabillero in green velvet and much gold braid. The carriage was a mass of white carnations and yellow coreopsis blossoms. A troop of cavalry, with yellow horse hair plumes waving above their helmets and wreaths of flowers across their shoulders and blanket rolls of red carnations behind their saddles, headed by a band playing the Star Spangled Banner, preceded the carriage of the chief magistrate to the reviewing stand.

As each carriage reached the reviewing stand, the ladies in it arose, and smiling, saluted the president with deep courtesies. The president was kept on his feet most of the time returning these greetings. He apparently enjoyed the experience hugely. Each lady carried a bag of rose leaves for use as confetti and, after saluting the president, she threw a handful of the soft petals into his box. Before the parade was over he was ankle deep in rose leaves.

In the morning, previous to the floral parade, the president and his party were driven through the resident section of Los Angeles. In the afternoon the ladies of the president's party went to Pasadena and took a drive there, while the president made a trip to the national soldiers' home near Santa Monica. It is 1[illegible] miles distant, and he made the journey in electric cars. Three thousand of the president's old comrades of the civil war greeted him there. The old soldiers gave the president a remarkable demonstration. He was introduced by the governor at the home and he made a fitting speech.

Some excitement was caused by the discovery, after the speaking, that a pickpocket who had been at work in the crowd had relieved Secretary Wilson and Col. Chas. A. Moore of their pocketbooks. Later the thief was arrested. Several pocketbooks were found on his person, a gold nugget that Mr. Moore's son had obtained at the Congress mine in Arizona, and Secretary Wilson's pocketbook, which contained $175. The thief proved to be a pickpocket well known to the police.

Upon his return to Los Angeles late in the afternoon, the president received Gov. Nash and the Ohio congressional delegation at the hotel. There was no public function in the evening. The president and Mrs. McKinley dined at the residence of Homer Laughlin. The president and members of his party returned to their train last night and left at 5 o'clock this morning for Delmonte, where they will spend Sunday. Stops were made at Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo.

Enthusiastically Greeted.

Berlin, May 10.—Queen Wilhelmina and the prince of the Netherlands arrived yesterday at Schwerin, where they were enthusiastically greeted by the populace. The flag of the Netherlands was profusely displayed. Members of the grand ducal family met the royal visitors at the railway station and all then went in procession through the gaily decorated streets to the town hall, where the burgomaster delivered an address of welcome, to which Prince Henry made a brief response. While in front of the castle the cavalry escort ran over two Dutch journalists, one of whom was seriously injured.

Epidemic Stamped Out.

Washington, May 10.—The marine hospital service has directed a surgeon to proceed immediately to Colgate, I. T., to confer with the Indian inspector and municipal authorities there over the smallpox outbreak. The Indian bureau has shipped 1,000 vaccine points there and will send others when called for. Advices to the Indian bureau show between 50 and 100 cases of malignant smallpox cases at Colgate. There have been 22 cases of smallpox on the Indian reservation at Fond du Lac, but no deaths, and it is announced that the epidemic now has been stamped out.

Will Try and Pacify Them.

Washington, May 10.—Capt. W. A. Mercer, Indian agent at the Leech Lake reservation, Minnesota, and Special Agent Farr have been ordered to the White Earth reservation to pacify the Chippewas, disgruntled over the price of logs.

The man who lives for himself alone is apt to be neglected by the world at large.—Chicago News.

If you are sick all over and don't know just what ails you, it's ten to one your kidneys are out of order. Foley's Kidney Cure will bring you health and energy. J. J. Orr.

"I had a running sore on my breast for over a year," says Henry R. Richards of Willseyville, N. Y., "and tried a great many remedies, but got no relief until I used Banner Salve. After using one-half box, I was perfectly cured. I cannot recommend it too highly." J. J. Orr.

HEAVY LIFE INSURANCE

Carried by Defaulting President of Cleveland Bank.

Cleveland, May 10.—It developed yesterday that R. N. Pollock, the president of the Cuyahoga Savings & Banking Co. of this city, who committed suicide at Seattle Wednesday, carried life insurance to the amount of $65,000 in favor of his family. The policies are in four companies, and each is either without the suicide clause or contains such a clause to be void after two years from issuance of the papers.

It was stated yesterday that the experts at work on the books of the bank will probably have a statement ready by Saturday.

Sent Back to Kansas City.

Iola, Ks., May 10.—The trouble between workmen and the Italians sent here from Kansas City to work in the cement plant seems to be about over, the Italians having left here and the leaders of the mob arrested. Sheriff Hobart appeared at the depot about two hours before train time yesterday and served warrants on two of the leaders of the crowd and ordered the rest, mostly boys and young men, to return home or be arrested. The crowd dispersed without making trouble. The cement company, finding that the Italians were afraid to return to work, purchased tickets for them and they went back to Kansas City on the first passenger train. One or two of them carried bloody heads, but aside from this the reports that several people were wounded cannot be confirmed.

Ask Co-Religionists for Aid.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 10.—Rt. Rev. John Moore, bishop of St. Augustine, and Very Rev. Fm. J. Kenney, vicar general of this diocese, have issued an appeal to the Roman Catholic people of the United States and Canada for aid for the Roman Catholics of this place. The appeal recites the destruction of the church, parochial residence, orphanage and convent, representing a total loss of about $125,000, and states that in view of the utter impoverishment and destitution of the Roman Catholics unless they receive help from the outside Roman Catholic world, it will be impossible to continue the work of Roman Catholic progress in this community.

Meeting of School Superintendents.

Lansing, Mich., May 10.—The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Michigan Association of School Superintendents commenced here yesterday. The attendance is large, and the sessions are presided over by the president, Supt. W. E. Conkling of Dowagiac. Last evening's session was devoted to an able address on "School administration," by Dr. Albert Leonard, president of the Michigan system of normal schools.

Consented to Leave the Jail.

Wichita, Ks., May 10.—Through the persuasion of her brother, John Moore, of Kansas City, Mrs. Carrie Nation consented to leave the county jail last night. Judge Dale reduced her bail bond to $100 and her brother put up cash to that amount.

Retires from the Ring.

London, May 10.—"Jack" Roberts, the pugilist who fatally injured "Billy" Smith of Philadelphia in a contest at the National Sporting club April 22, and who with others was committed for trial May 2, is so affected by the death of Smith that he has announced his retirement from the ring.

Officially Quarantined.

Port Townsend, Wash., May 10.—United States Quarantine Officer Foster yesterday officially declared quarantine against all Alaskan ports, and all vessels arriving from the north must call here for inspection. Official reports from various sections of Alaska are to the effect that smallpox exists and is rapidly spreading.

Oldest Living Graduate is Dead.

Washington, May 10.—Former Judge John James Hayden of Indiana died here yesterday, aged 82 years. He was active in early Indiana republican politics, but had been in the government service at Washington for some years. He was said to be the oldest living graduate of Harvard university.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

Harvard will confer the degree of doctor of laws on President McKinley next month.

Salt Lake's landmark theater, built in Brigham Young's days, fell down Thursday morning.

T. S. McClindy, temporarily crazy, murdered Howard Baker and committed suicide in Boone's Ferry, Ore.

Natural gas companies in Pennsylvania are consolidating preparatory to being swallowed by the Standard Oil octopus.

Chippewa Indians threaten trouble near St. Cloud, Minn., if the government doesn't straighten out the tangle over the logging operations on their reservation.

Little Mabel Christensen has been made a town charge in Chicago to prevent her being turned over by her fanatic father to Dowieite "healers" for cure of dreadful burns sustained in a tenement fire.

Hundreds of professional men, made destitute by the great fire, are tramping the cinder-strewn streets of Jacksonville, Fla., pleading for manual or any kind of work. Insurance companies have yielded up $500,000 and the nation's philanthropists $85,000 in cash toward replacing the $10,000,000 wiped off the slate by the flames.

Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel Corporation, talking to 300 poor boys in a Pittsburg school, told the lads that the road to the dizzy hights of success is to do a little better, and to do a little more than one's bare duty, even when working for a "soulless corporation."

Carnegie told British business men in London yesterday to "seek first the markets of the United Kingdom," and that then all other markets would be added unto them. This evoked applause in the amen corner, but when canny Andy said there was more money in consols at 85 than would ever be gained in war in South Africa, there was one of those silences which can be seen.

Blew Out the Gas.

Flint, Mich., May 10.—John T. Akins of Reese, one of the delegates to the Orangemen's grand lodge meeting, blew out the gas at the Crystal house on retiring Wednesday night. He was found in an unconscious condition at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, but came to after physicians had worked over him for about an hour.

Hot on the Trail.

Standish, Mich., May 10.—A valuable young horse belonging to J. C. Lundy was led out of his barn last night by some miscreant and killed by severing the jugular vein with a sharp knife. Another fine young horse was stolen from Andrew Smith. The sheriff is hot on the trail of the rescals.

WON'T COMPROMISE

Conference Committees on the Ad Valorem Tax Bill

HOUSE BALKS AMENDMENTS

There Will Be No More Meetings of the Conference Committees Until Next Week—Several Important Bills Passed.

Lansing, Mich., May 10.—Although they held two meetings yesterday, the house and senate conference committees failed to agree on an ad valorem tax bill. After the second meeting, which was held early in the afternoon, House Committeeman Alward, who is president of the powerful legislative Farmers' club, began circulating among the house members to ascertain their sentiments as to what classes of corporate property should be included in the bill. He found that over three-fourths of the members do not want any compromise. In other words, they want railroad, telegraph, telephone, sleeping car, express and fast freight lines taxed under the ad valorem system.

At at the morning's meeting of the committees, Senator Atwood stated that "some of the senators" were in favor of eliminating telegraph and telephone companies, and possibly express companies, from the provisions of the bill. Members of the house committee seemed to consider the proposition preposterous, and asked Atwood why these companies should be thus favored.

Chairman Chandler of the house committee bluntly observed that he had noticed that attorneys for the telephone and telegraph companies have been here lately buttonholing legislators, including committeemen.

Atwood is said to have blandly replied that he hadn't noticed them.

Senator Nichols said he believed the senate is opposed to including more than railroad, union depot and union station companies in the bill. He asked for time to make a canvass, and an adjournment was taken till 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Senator Nichols, "the people's friend," reported at the afternoon's meeting, that a majority of the senators—18—were opposed to including more than railroad union depot and union station companies in the bill.

He hurried to the senate chamber.

There will be no more meetings of the ad valorem tax bill conference committees until next week, or until Chairman "Vanderbilt" Holmes calls a meeting. Senators Atwood, Holmes and Nichols and Reps. Chandler, Dingley and Alward, the members of the house and senate conference committees all branded as false the report published in a Detroit morning paper that they had a conference last night.

Senator Kelly's amended senate bill to appropriate $40,000 for the establishment of a new normal school in the western part of the state created considerable discussion in the house committee of the whole. Rep. Colby of Detroit opposed the bill on the ground that this state already has enough normal schools.

Rep. Sharpe had the bill amended so as to permit the location of the school anywhere in the state and not confine the district to the "western part of Michigan." The bill, as amended, was then agreed to.

The house in committee of the whole agreed to Senator Schumaker's bill to license and regulate itinerant venders. This is an important measure and, if it becomes a law, it will operate to almost prohibit the carrying on of "fly-by-night" enterprises. The bill has been carefully drawn.

Rep. Nevins's house garnishee bill was agreed to in the senate committee of the whole, after a debate, without any amendments over the amendments made by the senate committee. Later the senate tabled the bill on third reading.

In the course of the debate, Senator High severely roasted Fred. H. Cozzens of Detroit. He said he was the man that two years ago sent out a circular letter to the retail merchants of the state asking for contributions to "grease the wheels of the legislature." He didn't believe any of the grease had reached the legislature.

The house passed bills amending the charters of the cities of Saginaw and Saulte Ste. Marie. The Saginaw bill abolishes the office of recorder and provides that the police justice and justices of the peace shall do the work formerly done by the recorder. Provision is made for the police justice to hear small cases, such as drunk and disorderlies in the police stations instead of the city hall. The bill also gives the common council greater power relative to the ordering of sidewalks and regulating their construction.

Grand Lodge K. P. Officers.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 10.—The following grand lodge officers have been elected by the Knights of Pythias: Grand chancellor, Leo A. Caro, Grand Rapids; vice chancellor, Benno Rohnert, Sault Ste. Marie; grand prelate, R. G. Steel, St. Johns; grand keeper of records and seals, Miles S. Curtis, Battle Creek; grand master of exchequer, Sylvester Greusel, Hastings; grand master at arms, W. E. Hampton, Charlevoix; grand inner guard, C. A. Palmer, Manistee; grand outer guard, H. H. Curtis, Charlotte.

Loyal Orange Lodge.

Flint, Mich., May 10.—The Michigan grand lodge Loyal Orangemen is in session here with an attendance of nearly 100 delegates. The reports presented showed that there are 55 lodges in the state with a total membership of 1,716. There is a proposition before the grand lodge to make the organization beneficiary as well as fraternal in character, with a maximum benefit of $500, and the prospects are that it will carry.

"Teddy" Can't Come.

Detroit, Mich., May 10.—Mayor Maybury received a letter from Vice President Roosevelt Thursday morning declining the invitation of the mayor to attend the convention of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Still After Callahan.

Omaha, Neb., May 10.—Seven counts charging James Callahan, alleged to be one of the abductors of young Cudahy, with perjury on his late trial were filed yesterday afternoon.

Jacksonville Insurance.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 10.—A statement of fire losses by companies, compiled last night, shows a total insurance of $4,748,000, divided among 61 companies.

CHINESE INDEMNITY CLAIMS

Presented to the Chinese Plenipotentiaries Last Evening.

Pekin, May 10.—An indemnity claim of 450,000,000 taels was presented to the Chinese plenipotentiaries last evening. Official Chinese throughout the empire have been communicating with the court and giving advices. Most of them seem to favor a loan guaranteed by the foreign powers. Others, prominent among whom is Chang Chi Tung, believe in raising the money in every possible way without a loan and in paying off the entire demand within five years. The court has considered methods of raising twenty millions extra annually and provisionally approves the plan; but the Chinese plenipotentiaries have instructions to obtain a reduction of the indemnity demand as far as possible.

Whatever the final demands of the powers may be, it is not believed the opposition will be much more than a matter of form.

The ministers of the powers met yesterday morning and decided the Chinese should be given to understand that the amount did not constitute the claim, but was the total of the expenses, including private claims considered fair and was meant more to obtain an opinion from official sources as to China's ability to pay and also as to what means she would employ.

NO LONGER ANY DOUBT

That Cuban Convention Will Accept the Platt Amendment.

Havana, May 10.—There now seems to be no doubt that the Cuban constitutional convention will accept the Platt amendment, but it is expected there will be some delay before a final vote is reached. Senor Juan Gualberto Gomez is advocating public sessions. It is said that the colored orator wishes to make some interesting statements to the public before the convention dissolves. It was in the plans to hold a meeting yesterday, but owing to the delay in printing the report of special commission which went to Washington the session was postponed till to-day. Gen. Rivera, who is in Honduras on leave of absence, has written to the convention advising the acceptance of the Platt amendment.

The democrats have nominated Senor Carlos Garcia as their candidate for mayor, the republicans have nominated Senor Estrada Mora, and the nationalists will nominate the incumbent, Senor Gener.

Of Interest to Michiganders.

Milwaukee, May 10.—A special from Menominee, Mich., says: A big railroad scheme is likely to develop here within a short time. Representatives of the Pennsylvania railroad are now at Minneapolis figuring on a line to be built between that city and Marinette, by which a connection will be formed with the Grand Trunk road and the Pennsylvania system by a car ferry at either Grand Haven or Muskegon, on the east shore of Lake Michigan.

No Conference Yet.

Cleveland, May 10.—The proposed conference between Chief Engineer Hayes of the United States Steel Corporation vessel fleet and President Uhler of the Marine Engineers' association for the purpose of settling the engineers' strike, was not held yesterday on account of the unavoidable absence of Mr. Hayes from the city. The conference will probably take place to-day.

National Stove Manufacturers.

Boston, May 10.—The National Association of Stove Manufacturers yesterday elected these officers: President, Albert Parlin of this city; first vice-president, F. W. Gardner, Chicago; second vice-president, Fred Will, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, T. J. Hogan, Chicago, and treasurer, Walter A. Stevenson, Philadelphia.

U. S. Treasury Statement.

Washington, May 10.—Thursday's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $161,698,641; gold, $98,575,980.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." The Herald is Presented to its Readers To-Day

IN A COMPLETE NEW SUIT,

And is as Proud as a Young Girl With a New Easter Bonnet.

With this issue the HERALD is presented to its readers with a complete new face of type—body type, advertising type, column rules, new heads, in fact every letter in the paper new. The body letter is a little larger than the old, making it somewhat easier to read and it will be noticed that the advertising type is all the same face.

It is very seldom that newspapers are furnished with all new type at one time and the HERALD fitted out in this manner feels that it looks well whether it does or not. In fact it has been the aim of the HERALD to be the best looking, best printed, most readable paper printed in the county of Lenawee, and for a number of years has furnished to its subscribers more for the price than any other paper in the county.

It has always been a feature of the HERALD that its columns should be kept free from any vile advertising and the reading matter should be of such a character that no man would be ashamed to take the paper into his family to read. Such will continue to be the purpose of the HERALD and above all it will continue to print ALL the local news every issue and continue to be the brightest, best printed and best looking paper in Lenawee county.

MILLIONS AT STAKE

Lively Scramble for Life on the Stock Exchange

NORTHERN PACIFIC THE CAUSE

Many Men Reduced to Absolute Ruin As a Result of Fifteen Minutes' Proceedings on the New York Stock Exchange.

New York, May 10.—Bitter stress developed in Wall street yesterday by the second hour of trading on the stock exchange. The violence of the commotion had spent much of its force at least for the time being when the chairman's gavel fell announcing the close of the day's proceedings. The field of battle was strewn with the wounded, and maybe with the dying. But of actual fatalities none was recorded of importance during the day.

The banks have been so well protected by recent extensions of the margins exacted in the market value of collateral over the amount of loans placed that they had little to fear short of an absolute wiping out of market values. The shrinkage of collateral made it necessary for the banks in many cases to exact additional collateral during the day, and this added much to the distress for a time. But in the late dealings the principal banks in the financial district agreed to form a pool and raise a fund to loan the money rate down to 6 per cent and was threatening to keep alive the panic. The dozen banks quickly came to an agreement to raise $16,000,000, with implied willingness to increase the sum if necessary. There were very heavy loans placed also by individual banks, ranging in some cases to $25,000,000 and $30,000,000.

The outside country could obtain little idea of the actual occurrences on the exchange, as the brokers are remote from the public galleries in their temporary quarters in the produce exchange and are half shut off from view by the 16-foot wall. In the brokers' offices sat many men who were reduced to absolute ruin as a result of 15 minutes' proceedings on the exchange.

The price paid for Northern Pacific stock ran up quickly to $200 per share and then to 300, to 500 and even to $700 per share on regular transactions, and $1,000 per share for cash.

In the outside market the stress of the demand for funds was shown by the perpendicular drop in price of Standard Oil of 171 points over night. The stock sold at 650 compared with 821 Wednesday night. The same urgent need was reflected in the bond market, where all grades of bonds were offered on a declining scale.

It was a very notable fact that through the most acute period of yesterday's disturbance there was nothing heard to indicate doubt of the sound and prosperous conditions of industry and business at large in the country.

The importance attached to Northern Pacific was made clear by the eagerness of all classes to learn all developments concerning it and the immediate effect of any announcement regarding it upon the stock market. The upward shoot to $1,000 a share was the effective cause of the greatest demoralization in the market. The announcement later in the day of the measures for the relief of shortages and the relapse in the price of the stock to 300 allayed the demoralization almost immediately. Announcements by J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., respectively representing the two contesting parties in Northern Pacific, that they would not require deliveries of the stock yesterday meant a respite of one day at least from ruin for the shorts in the stock.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

"Stealing a ride, I suppose?" said our traveler presently. "Where're you trying to get to?" And with a shrug of his shoulders he glanced pityingly at his quaking captive.

"To Pawnee—half way over the range," was the shivering answer. "I've got a sick wife there and was beating my way as well as I could"—But the poor fellow gave it up. Cold and misery and hunger were too much for him. The train was slowing up again—another prairie station. They had them every ten or dozen miles. The brakeman shook himself, picked up his lantern and went out in front. The party in tweeds shoved his new acquaintance into the first vacant seat, swung himself to the ground the moment the train stopped, ran back and tapped under a rear window of the sleeper, and the sash was raised and the porter's head popped out.

"Let me in at the rear door, porter," said Tweeds. "I locked myself out."

The negro recognized the voice of his well dressed passenger, sniffed a double fee and jumped for the door.

"Beg pardon, suh. Sorry, suh, but we has to lock these doors at night out hyuh. Tramps come in most any time if we don't."

But the young man smiled carelessly, hastened through the car, got his flask, set the latch so that he could re-enter, and the next minute was administering a stiff drink to the rag heap on the rear seat. Once more the man essayed to tell his story. He was penniless, he hadn't even anything left to sell, but out from an inner pocket he took an old worn card photograph and showed it to his new found friend. "My wife and baby," said he, with a choke, "but the baby's gone, thank God."

"Here, take another drink," said Tweeds. Then back to the smoker he went and reappeared with some sandwiches. The train again moved on. The brakeman returned, became aware of the newcomers and came down and curiously inspected them. The liquor, the warmth, the food and human sympathy were restoring courage to the abject object of a few minutes before. He looked up without a quaver at the brakeman's hail, but Tweeds spoke for him. "I found this poor fellow back here a few miles half frozen and hauled him in. He only wants to go on to Pawnee. It's all right. He can pay his fare when the conductor comes."

The brakeman went off suspiciously to hunt up his chief and report, and the conductor promptly appeared. His face grew darker at sight of the two. He held irresolutely the $10 bill handed him by Tweeds, and looked from one man to the other in deep distrust. "I don't understand this," he said. "How'd you—where'd you get aboard?"

"At Willow Springs," said the tramp. "I walked there from the Junction. I'd 'a' frozen if it hadn't been for this gentleman."

"I can't change this," said the conductor. "I'll fetch it presently." And nodding to his brakeman to follow him he hurried up the aisle. At the forward end of the car he whispered: "Watch those two like a cat, now. I'm going forward to get the sergeant and some of his men and seat them here where they can keep an eye on that precious pair. There's fun ahead for somebody this night, but, by God, they don't catch old Bill Jarvis napping. You stay here, now, till I come."

But no sooner were they gone than the tramp began brokenly to heap thanks and blessings on his benefactor, and the latter impatiently turned away. "That's all right," said he. "Never mind that. I'm glad to help, for I believe your story. The conductor will give you the change when he comes in. Now, good night; I've got to turn in."

"But, say, mister, stranger, hold on one minute. I—I want to pay this back—some day. How'll I know you? Where'll I send it?"

But Tweeds shook his head, waved him off, strode back to the sleeper, sprung the latch against pursuit, then half filled a glass from his flask, gulped the contents down and reseated himself in the smoking compartment. "That's the first man I've found in a fortnight," said he, "more miserable than I am."

With that he took some letters from his pocket, glanced them over and tore the envelopes to shreds, sending the fragments sailing on the night. At a small card photograph in a flat Russia leather case—a portrait of a laughing, girlish face—he gazed lingeringly, then returned it to an inner pocket. "No one would know it now," he muttered. Next he lifted from his cardcase a dozen or more pasteboards that bore in plain, heavy script the words "Mr. Darcy Hunter Gray," ripped them into shreds and sent them flying. As calmly and methodically he searched through every pocket for every scrap of paper, bills or billet doux, anything that could tend to establish his identity; glanced dubiously at the monogram on the back of his watch; scraped the lettering out of the crown of his hat; took a fountain pen from his pocket and some paper and envelopes from his satchel; wrote with infinite difficulty, owing to the swaying of the car, two brief notes which he inclosed and stowed under the flap of his bag, then once more glanced at his watch. It was 2:45, and No. 788 was whistling for Bowlder Creek. At last they were out of the valley. Now for the climb up the divide.

"One cigar," he muttered. "I let the other go out." His matchbox had disappeared. He tried one pocket after another, without result. Neither was there one to be had in the compartment. The train had stopped, and he could hear footsteps on a wooden platform and the muffled voices of men. Tiptoeing through the long, dim, curtain bordered aisle, he was suddenly checked. Out from a narrow opening between the curtains of the second section came a slender little white hand, holding a silver traveling cup, and a soft voice, silvery as the cup, murmured, "Oh, porter, would you kindly get me some water?"

Mr. Gray took the cup, filled it, restored it with a bow to the unseen occupant, watched the lily white hand, with its few treasures of rings, slip back between the folds, then aroused the porter, proffered his request for matches and asked if there was any possibility of the ladies being incommoded by his smoking.

"No, suh; not a bit, suh. They can't smell it when you stay in the smoking room. There's only two ladies in the car, suh. Both going up to Butte—Mrs. Mainwaring and a young lady with her."

"Know her name?"

"No, suh, I don't, suh. The lady with her calls her Pet most the time."

Mr. Gray once more returned to his compartment, lighted his cigar and seated himself in the corner by the open window. The train still lay at the station. Voices still echoed among the dingy wooden buildings, and a light or two flickered about the platform. The conductor's voice was presently heard. He was interrogating the station agent, and Gray, seated close to the open casement, couldn't help hearing.

"Both took tickets to Pawnee?"

"Yes, both. Left their horses here in Hank's stable and took supper. No, they haven't been drinking at all."

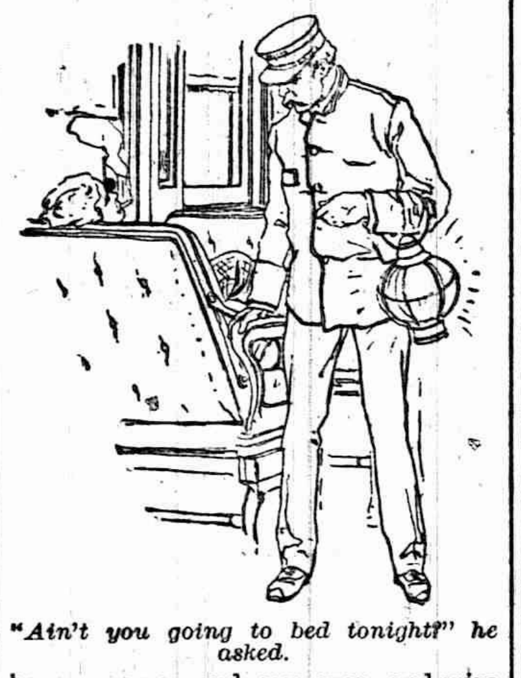
Mr. Jarvis lowered his voice. He was talking eagerly, but only the answer was audible.

"Oh, of course; cowboys always are. Each has his revolver and knife. But you'll see 'em for yourself. They're in the smoking car."

"Sure nobody knew 'em around here?"

"Certain. They said they'd never been here before."

Mr. Jarvis waved his lantern. "Well, we've got to go," said he, "but you keep your eyes and ears open, and wire after us. I suppose it's all right about No. 12," he shouted, as he swung on the platform.



"Ain't you going to bed tonight?" he asked.

"Due there in five minutes," thought Mr. Gray to himself, as he meditatively puffed at his fine Havana, "and by good rights I should have been sleeping the sleep of the just and innocent hours ago." The train soon seemed laboring in a heavy sea. The hoarse panting of the engine came throbbing back on the night. The huge Pullman rolled deep, first to one side awhile, then to the other, as it trailed on around the sharp reverse curves of some unseen grade. Out of the darkness to the right and against the northern stars loomed up dim, bulky shapes, and Gray realized that the foothills were reached, that the long tortuous climb was beginning. Up, up, higher and higher steamed the straining giant in the lead, the dense smoke clouds rolling rearward lighted brilliantly every few seconds by the glare from the roaring furnace into which Scut's shovel was heaping coal by the bushel. No. 788 was doing her best, as Long predicted, but even her superb lungs and tempered muscles could barely drag so heavy a burden. Only nine or ten miles an hour was she making now, thought Gray, as once more the sleeper door was opened and the conductor, followed by a brakeman, bustled in. He glared suspiciously into the dim recess of the smoking compartment, the brakeman peering over his shoulder.

"Ain't you going to bed tonight?" he asked.

"Presently," yawned Gray, "if I get sleepy."

"Your friend there in the other car hasn't lost much time. He's snoring like he hadn't slept for six weeks. Where'd he say he lived?"

"Pawnee."

"Know him there?"

"No, nor anybody else."

"Never been out here before?"

Gray was in no mood for talk, much less for cross examination. He shrugged his broad shoulders impatiently and said, "Never."

The conductor hesitated, looked long and fixedly at his passenger, studying what he could see of his face, figure and clothes in that dim light. He turned half reluctantly away, then turned back.

"Well, if you want any sleep before we get to Butte you'd better be getting it," said he, with that broad freedom of manner and absence of conventional restraint begotten of years in the boundless west, and then stood awaiting the result.

It came, not too soothingly or satisfactorily.

"When I want it, I'll take it."

The conductor drew away with distinct sense of another defeat. He stirred up the porter with no gentle touch. "How many of your passengers have got guns?" he asked.

The negro started from his seat, dazed and frightened. "Only two or three of 'em, that I see," was the answer. "That officer in lower 8 and two gentlemen in 8 and 9. What's the matter?"

"Nothing as yet, but I've a good mind to wake the lieutenant," said Jarvis, his fingers working nervously as he glanced about the car. The porter's eyes were big, his eyeballs staring.

"Wait till I come back," said Mr. Jarvis presently, and let himself out at the rear door. The last sleeper was dark and silent. Every curtain seemed drawn. Jarvis found his bunch of keys and after a few seconds' fumble opened the door. The air within was close, almost stifling, for every section was occupied. He found the porter snoring in the smoking room, stirred him vigorously and propounded rapid questions. The bewildered darky answered to the point. Some of the young men among his excursionists might have pistols in their grips, but he'd only seen one in a hip pocket. There were 10 ladies and 12 men, he said, all unconscious of danger of any kind, and, as it was a chartered car and they were out for a long pleasure trip, no doubt there was plenty of money, to say nothing of watches and jewelry in the party. It was the first of the kind that had come up the road for a month. Jarvis knew it had been well advertised. What more likely than that the daring fellows who had made things lively on the other road should have planned to hold up this particular train? What better place could they select than the lonely, rugged, almost mountainous tract between Thunder Gap and Bowlder Creek? And if they weren't already boarding his train, one or two at a time, just as they did on the K. P., then call him a Chinaman. That swagger and stylish young man at the Junction, "salooning the soldiers and making himself solid with them," the shivering tramp at Willow Springs who was so promptly found and so lavishly paid for and provided for by the same suspicious party ("Fancy his enlisting!" thought the conductor; "that cock and bull story that he told Long was enough to damn him from the start"), and now these two cowboys in the smoker—fellows that took supper and left their plugs at Hank's and said they were going up to Pawnee for a flier, but allowed they knew nobody there or in that part of the valley. Jarvis felt more uneasy with every minute.

"I'm blessed if I don't think I ought to wake some of the likeliest of these young fellows," said he to the porter, "but I'll go and have out the lieutenant anyhow."

Suiting action to the word, back he went to the forward sleeper. "Wake the gentleman in No. 3," said he to the porter as he re-entered and found that dusky guardian eagerly, anxiously awaiting him.

"He's gittin up, suh. I done called him." And at the moment, rubbing a pair of bleary, sleepy, red rimmed eyes with one hand and buttoning a cavalry sack coat with the other, a stocky, heavily built man of about 35 came lurching down the aisle. Briefly the conductor told his suspicions and asked what help he could have in case of trouble. The cavalryman was evidently a trifle hard to rouse. He seemed slow of comprehension. He pondered a bit, looking dumbly from the conductor to the porter, with eyes that did not clear as rapidly as they should have done. At last he said:

"One of them in this car?"

"Yes, smoking in the compartment yonder."

Following the conductor, the officer meandered up the aisle. The Pullman was swaying violently now. The train had reached the summit of the divide and was rushing down the westward slope at a speed that became swifter every moment. The lieutenant stopped at his berth and rummaged under a pillow.

"You're not getting a gun now?" whispered the conductor warningly.

"No, only a pocket pistol," was the answer as the blue blouse straightened up and produced a half filled flask.

"I wish your men, those recruits, had arms," muttered the conductor as they went on again. Then he held up a warning hand. They were just squeezing through the narrow passage between the smoking compartment and the side of the car. "Wait till I see what he's doing," said Jarvis and disappeared around the corner. Presently he beckoned, and, flask in hand, the lieutenant followed on, glancing casually at the dim form near the window, stepped to the washstand and found a tumbler, half filled it with liquor and proffered it to the conductor, who shook his head. The soldier poured in a little water and swallowed it all at a gulp.

"Now," said he, "let's have a look at your man."

The conductor stepped inside the smoker, feigning to try to decipher the writing on a card he held in his hand, but, as though the light were too dim, reached up and turned higher the flame, brightly illuminating the little compartment in a moment. Gray may have been dozing. He glanced quickly up, as though startled, and his eyes met those of the stout man in cavalry uniform. For a moment they looked at each other searchingly and without a word. A flush as of surprise and annoyance began to mount to the civilian's face; a flush that was not of surprise was already manifest on that of the soldier. The conductor glanced from one to the other as though about to speak.

Suddenly the night was rent by one sharp, quick, almost agonized shriek from the engine far ahead. Suddenly, so suddenly that it almost hurled Jarvis and the lieutenant off their feet, the airbrakes gripped like a vise, the whizzing wheels instantly checking their way, the smooth, swift motion changed to a jerky, grinding, straining series of bumps. Jarvis, turning white as a sheet, sprang to the door the instant he could recover balance. For six or eight seconds the Pullman went thumping ahead, slower and slower every second, yet still at dangerous speed. Then came a thunderous shock and crash. Gray, whose feet were on the opposite seat, doubled up like a jackknife, his nose and knees jammed together, the back seat clamped tight against that in front. The lieutenant shot forward out of sight and was overheard fetching up with a resounding thump against the front door. There was a crackling of window glass, a sound of stifled shrieks and groans. The big car recoiled some 30 or 40 yards, then came to a standstill, and Mr. Gray, scrambling out from the smoking compartment, nearly stumbled over the prostrate officer, who was slowly finding his feet. But, following some half articulate cry for help, Gray darted through the narrow passageway into the curtained aisle, now rapidly filling with men, much more dazed than dressed, some of them bleeding from contusions, all of them shaken and scared, and slowly sliding out of the nearest berth came a blue robed, slender, senseless form—that of the soft voiced occupant who an hour earlier had importuned him for water. In an instant Gray stooped, raised her in his arms, bore her through the passage, nearly capsizing the lieutenant the second time, laid her flat upon the long seat in the smoker and applied his fine cambric handkerchief to a gash in the left temple, from which the blood was oozing.

Will cure you. Many people become all but totally blind and at an early age, simply because they pay no attention to their eyes. They notice a dimness and a soreness after reading awhile and when a misrable headache comes to them they ascribe it to any causebut the right one and take a pill. The real cause, but the misery, is that thei eyes are weak and every time they read or write means an added strain and the eyes made still weaker. Consultation with a specialist means the ending of all misery and the saving to you of your eye-sight Dr. Stein is reliable. You do not see him once and then look for him again invain. He makes regular visits to your city. Come and seen him and have your eyes scientifically tested free of charge, that you may have comfort when you read and write

About 30 telephone linemen of the United States Independent Co., which came in here through Tecumseh, have been loafing around the Gibson house since last Thursday waiting for material. They were informed yesterday that they would not be paid for the time lost, and would have to pay their own board. To-day the boss of the gang, who went to Tecumseh yesterday, appeared and paid up arrearages to May 2, but refused to pay anything more. He also stated that he would hire any of the men who wanted to go to work again. Many of them have taken what is coming to them and quit work. They will mostly go back to Saginaw and Bay City, where they came from. Only a few accepted the offer to go to work for the firm.—Adrian Telegram, May 8.

Ed. Holdway has been ten years in continuous tonsorial service at Macham's barber shop in Tecumseh, and is one of the most dextrous manipulators of razor steel, who ever "flipperty flip-flapped" it upon one of the celebrated Gibford stops. He has never talked a man to death, never eats onions when on duty, never asks "does the razor pull?" never has held a man's nose until the man gets black in the face; never leaves short stubbles in the corners of the mouth, nor a half shaved upper lip; never fills up on poor whiskey, and gives the shavee his breath, and never empties an old clay pipe into the hollow of his hand, and without washing it, keep it over his customer's proboscis for a "smellage." He always dips his razor in hot water after shaving a patron, and throws that water out. Of course such a barber as that is popular. Holdway can therefore hold on.—Adrian Press.

THE PLANING MILL.

Citizens of Eaton Rapids Desire to Buy out the Business of TEMPLE, McCLURE & CO.

Although Nothing Definite was Settled, there is a Strong Pros-pect that there will be.

H. P. Webster and H. H. Hamilton, two of Eaton Rapids' most solid and popular business men, were here Wednesday and Thursday, looking over Temple, McClure & Co's lumber plant with a view of purchasing it. While the deal was not definitely settled, there is a strong prospect that it will be.

Mr. Webster has spent his life, nearly, in the lumber business and is an up-to-date man and a hustler in business. Mr. Hamilton is cashier of the Michigan State bank and has been mayor of that prosperous city. Mr. Hamilton is a cousin of our townsman, C. D. Keyes. Should the deal be consummated, Tecumseh will extend them a cordial welcome.

Mrs. Caroline A. Hyde.

Mrs. Caroline A. Hyde was born in the state of New York March 10, 1814, and died May 7, 1901. She was the daughter of Joseph Tilton and came to Michigan with her parents in 1832. In 1844 she was married to Albert Hyde and this union was blessed with two children, Elbridge and Frances, both of whom are living at home.

Mrs. Hyde has been in poor health for some time, being troubled with heart disease. A week ago she fell, injuring her hip, from which she never recovered. She lingered until Monday night, during which time her sufferings were intense.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held from the house yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. S. Louisa Haight officiating. Interment at Brookside.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Teachout, Adrian; Miss Belle Hyde, Canandaigua, N. Y.; Mrs. Burns, Franklin; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Shannon, of Marcellus.

TROUBLE IN SCHOOL.

Supt. Kellogg Annoyed, Lady Teachers Ashamed,

PUPILS ALL SCRATCHING,

And General Discomfort to All Concerned in Tecumseh's Usually Model School.

Supt. L. M. Kellogg is usually the calmest, most even tempered man in Lenawee county, but if he is cross and ill-natured for the last few days he cannot be blammed. For if all reports are true, our beautiful schools of Tecumseh are full of bugs—bed bugs. From whence these bugs came or where they are headed no one knows, but that the school is full of them, all are well aware and the cry of the pupil from early till late is "Please, Mr. Kellogg, may I get up and scratch."

Six Frightened Lions.

An incident at the Porte St. Martin theater in Paris has become part of the annals of the show business. The chief feature of the exhibition was a "turn" consisting of the casting of a young woman securely bound into a cage of lions heralded as being the fiercest and most bloodthirsty of man eaters.

The woman who had the part of the victim was taken ill, and a substitute was found in the wife of one of the trainers, herself a trainer of some experience, but without any acquaintance with these particular six lions. As she was somewhat nervous she carried a small club ready for use should occasion arise.

Amid the breathless silence of the spectators the ringmaster explained the ferocious nature of the lions and the terrible risk of the woman, and she was thrust in at the cage door. In the excitement of the occasion the door was not securely shut after her.

No sooner was she fairly inside than the six monarchs of the jungle, seeing that a strange person had been forced upon them, raised a chorus of shuddering terror, bolted for the cage door, clawed it open and with dragging tails and cringing flanks fled out through a rear entrance and found refuge in a cellar, whence they were dislodged only after great difficulty.

It was a week before the "ferocious man eaters" were sufficiently recovered from their terrors to reappear in public.—McClure's Magazine.

A Splendid Bluff.

Sir Walter Besant is said to have once settled a disputed cab fare in a novel manner. He drove from Piccadilly to some place in the suburbs outside the radius. On getting down he tendered to the driver three shillings and sixpence, which was a little over the proper fare. The man, however, wanted five shillings. Besant refused.

"I'd like to fight you for it," said the driver.

"The very thing," said Besant, who had never in his life put on a boxing glove and was almost as ignorant as Pickwick even of the fighting attitude. "The very thing! Capital! We'll have the fight in the back garden. My brother will look on, hold the stakes and see fair!"

The cabman got down slowly, as if he did not quite care about it after all. He followed into the garden, where there was a lovely bit of green turf. Besant placed the five shillings in his friend's hands, took off his coat and waistcoat and rolled up his sleeves—all with an air of cheerful alacrity.

"Now, my friend," said he, "I am ready as soon as you are." His anxiety was great, but it decreased as he watched the cabman's face express successively all the emotions of bounce, surprise, doubt, hesitation and abject cowardice.

"No, no," he said at last. "Gimme the three and six. I know your tricks, both of you. I've been done this way before."

In the diary of that remarkable man, General Patrick Gordon, who left Scotland in 1651 a poor, unfriended wanderer and when he died in 1699 had his eyes closed by the affectionate hands of his sorrowing master, the czar Peter the Great, the following entry is to be found, under date of Hamburg, March 22, 1686:

"This day, a man and a woman, a burger of the towne being the womans master, for murthering, were carted from the prisone to the house where the murder was committed; and there before this house, with hotte pinsers, the flesh was torren out of their armes, and from thence were carted to the place of justice without the towne, and there broken and layed on wheels."

An instance 50 years later than those quoted at the last reference is recorded in the "Correspondence of Mr. Joseph Jekyll" (Murray, 1894). In April, 1775, from the balcony of his lodgings at Orleans, Jekyll saw a criminal broken on the wheel. In a letter to his father (p. 13) he enters minutely into the sickening details, adding that "the crime of the unfortunate creature was burglary, as we learnt from his sentence, which is posted up at every corner of the streets."—Notes and Queries.

A GOOD LETTER.

Mrs. Stella Nesmith, nee Burger, Writes from

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

Los Angeles, Cal., Apr. 2, 1901.
Mr. and Mrs. Anthony.
DEAR FRIENDS:—

I have just received a letter from mother enclosing your last to her. I know I have owed you a letter for some time but have been waiting for something to write. Mr. Nesmith came down here about a month ago and I joined him two weeks later. I really feel now that I have reached the end of my touring. This is the most ideal spot I have ever been in and where I have always wanted to be—and where I hope to remain. It is beautiful beyond description.

Los Angeles has a population of 100,000 with a floating tourist population of 25,000 or more. It covers a large territory, house lots are large and the majority of the houses are on the cottage plan and spread out over the ground rather than up in the air. Adams street is the residence street and in ten years from now will give Euclid avenue of Cleveland a close race for second place. The grounds are large and the houses palaces, the street now is about two miles long and rapidly growing into the country. There is the greatest variety of architecture here but as it is a comparatively new place the houses are all modern. The newest to me is the Mexican or Mission style of house. There are also some Colonial houses but they do not seem to harmonize very well with the semi-tropical surroundings of palms and flowers.

There isn't much use trying to describe the flowers and shrubs that grow here. They are all very beautiful and many that are entirely new to me. What I notice most is that the flower we have for house plants in the east grow into shrubs reaching the second story windows, say geraniums, fuchias, lantanas and heliotrope. It seems about June now. Many of the fruit trees are still in bloom. I have at last seen a real orange grove, in fact lots of them, also groves of lemons, figs and olives. We get fine oranges for 10 and 15 cents a dozen, the same that in the east would be 50 or 60 cents. We eat about a dozen a day. I have a lemon squeezer and we drink the juice. It is surprising how many one can drink.

We have been to Pasadena twice, it is about eleven miles on the electric cars towards the mountains and is more of a tourist town than this and a trifle warmer. They tell a good story about the town illustrating how beautiful it is. One day the policeman found a man wandering up and down the streets crying, asking what was the trouble the man explained that a year or two ago his wife died and when dying said that she would meet him on the streets of Paradise. He said that he had been walking up and down the streets for hours and hadn't found her yet. He thought he was surely in Paradise. Los Angeles is the "city of the Angeles" and I think it is nearer Paradise than Pasadena. The public buildings here are all very good, especially the court house, the city hall and school buildings, 55 in number. The state Normal school is here also. The business blocks are fine and the street car system can't be beat, large, long cars quite unlike eastern cars, equipped with air brakes and siren whistles and capable of thirty miles an hour for speed so you may know the condition of track and road bed.

There is a road running out to Santa Monica, the Pacific ocean beach. It is about 18 miles out through groves of orange, lemon and olives, round trip 50c, and they make fast time through the country. We went out a week ago Sunday and walked up the beach about three miles, hundreds of little two or four roomed cottages on one side of the walk and the ocean on the other. Port Los Angeles is on this beach, where the steamers leave for San Francisco.

The Chamber of Commerce has a fine exhibit of everything that is grown and manufactured in this part of the state, oranges, lemons, figs, dates, prunes, pears, several kinds of fruit not familiar to me, including pomelas, guavas and loquats, innumerable vegetables and nuts, wool, silk, oil, wines and minerals. There is also a large collection of Indian and Spanish curios. I spent one afternoon there and shall go again soon. I think it a fine way of advertising the various interests of the state.

There are plenty of strawberries in the market at 8 to 12c per box, in fact this is the cheapest place to eat in that I have ever visited. Good dinners for 25c that in the east would easily cost 75c. We live at this hotel but I am looking for a furnished cottage or flat. The tourists are thinning out some and lots of the people here have cottages at the beach so the chances of getting a cottage furnished will be better in May. There is street after street of rooming and boarding houses on account of the tourists and more hotels being built.

There is a great oil boom on here just now, oil having been discovered in the city limits. It isn't anything strange to see an oil derrick in the back yard with a very nice residence in front. There is a space about two miles long and one hundred feet wide just about covered with derricks. Oil is going to help develope this place wonderfully as coal is so very high. The Southern Pacific railroad use it in all their engines and for sprinkling the tracks out through the desert to keep down the dust and they are beginning to use it on the unpaved streets of the city, water is so scarce. The irrigating ditches were great curiosities to me. There has just been opened a new railroad line between here and San Francisco running along the coast for quite a long way, which will be much pleasanter than the San Joaquin valley.

I see by the morning papers that John Whelan has been re-elected police judge in Detroit and that Tom Johnson is mayor of Cleveland. (Dem.) I take it from newspaper reports that Michigan has had quite a severe winter. I hope I shall never see snow any nearer than I now see it, on the tops of the distant mountains I could send you some very interesting literature about this part of the country if you would like it. You might take it into your head to come out here some time and take my word for it you would never want to leave once you got here. You may wonder at the length of this letter but I never tire of singing the praises of California. Write when you can and give my regards to your family. Yours very sincerely,
STELLA M. NESMITH.

The Parson and the Skipper.

An old globe circler says that in going around the world there is scarcely one traveler in a hundred who remembers that in going from east to west a day is gained and that in going from west to east a day is lost. Many of those who come into contact with this truth knew all about it when they were at school, but never think of it on the high seas. In illustration of the point he tells this story:

"My first trip around the world was from England to Australia. Out in the middle of the Pacific a sign was put announcing that the date was Thursday, July 17. This was all right, but the next day the same sign was put up again. This was an opportunity for those of us who thought we were real wise to show the ship's officers that they were not infallible. After we had expended our choicest sarcasm and had been rebuffed by various officers the captain set us straight.

"On my way back one day the card went up announcing that it was Saturday, Aug. 13. The next day the sign said Monday, Aug. 15. Two ministers on board thought the captain a somewhat profane old salt, who had skipped a day to avoid the religious services which they had prepared. He convinced them that it was a mere coincidence that on that particular date the lost day was Sunday. Since then I have never attempted to teach the ship's navigator his business, and he can skip a century if he wishes without my saying a word."—Baltimore Sun.

Surprised by Dickens.

"I vividly recall hearing Charles Dickens read selections from his own writings in Steinway hall, New York city, shortly after the close of our civil war," said a well known judge. "The hall was densely packed with an audience of cultured people, by far the major part of whom were intense admirers of the man who was to entertain them that evening. I was a youngster then, but was glad to part with $2 to hear the author of 'Nicholas Nickleby' read his own lines. But his appearance on the stage, though greeted by applause, was a distinct shock, so thoroughly out of keeping was his costume with the conventional evening attire of a gentleman. He was clad in a short velvet coat that looked exactly like a smoking jacket, velvet vest to match and a flaming red necktie. Such a garb was in reality an affront and an impertinence to that fashionably clad assemblage. But it was overlooked as an eccentricity of genius, and much applause attended the rendition.

"Nowadays the newspapers would roast any man, however famous, for daring to come before the public in such grotesque attire, but I do not recall that any of the New York papers criticised the distinguished visitor for his sartorial laxity." — Washington Post.

The Antithetical Chinaman.

To attempt to get a Chinaman to assign a reason for anything is futile. One day while riding a donkey through the country west of Peking I noticed that the women of the country villages, mostly farmers' wives and daughters, did not bind their feet. I said to the donkey driver who was running along beside me, "The country women do not bind their feet, do they?"

"No."

"Why?"

"They do not bind their feet."

"Why is it that the Chinese women bind their feet?"

"They bind their feet."

"But why do they do it?"

"That is their custom."

"But why is it their custom?"

"There is no why—no reason whatever."

Ask a child, "Why did your brother not come to school today?"

"My brother did not come to school today."

Or inquire of a man, "Why is it that the Chinese build a pagoda 13 stories high?" and he will most probably answer, "That is the way to build a pagoda."—Isaac Taylor Headland of University of Peking in Washington Star.

GAIN FLESH

An Absolute Necessity in Many Cases.

A DECREASE IN WEIGHT FREQUENTLY INDICATES A DECLINE.

Our Modern Rebuilder, Vinol, Will Help You Do It.

THE WAY IT ACTS ON A DEPLETED CONSTITUTION IS SIMPLY MARVELOUS.

Are you getting thin? If you are you had better watch yourself. Take Vinol. It will build you up quickly and surely.

A healthy man does not vary much from year to year in his weight. This is as it should be. Vinol enables the organs of the body to renew flesh, muscle tissue, bone structure, and attends to purifying the great vital current of the human system, the blood.

Vinol contains the active curative properties of Cod-Liver Oil in a highly concentrated state, and is the most wonderful tonic that we have ever had anything to do with.

Vinol acts upon the stomach in a beneficial way, enabling it to obtain for itself the necessary ingredients from the food that is taken into it to build up the pure healthy body and increase the weight.

Mr. H. M. Stufell, who is a well-known passenger trainman on the Boston and Maine Railroad, suffered, as many railroad men do, with kidney and other troubles. He writes as follows:

"My kidneys troubled me a great deal, my bowels were very irregular, I had great distress in my stomach, suffered with bilious headaches, had no appetite, could not sleep nights, and was losing flesh rapidly. I began to take Vinol, I am now on my third bottle, and it is doing wonders for me. My kidneys are better, my bowels are again regular, my stomach no longer troubles me, and no more headaches, and as for appetite, don't speak of it; I sleep like a top and have gained thirteen pounds. You can count on me always to recommend Vinol as the king of medicines."

With many such testimonials as the above coming before us, it is not strange that we endorse Vinol as strongly as we do. We unhesitatingly agree to return to any one who has taken Vinol and is not satisfied that it has accomplished all that we claim for it every cent that they have paid us for this remedy.

A Wife Says:

"We have four children. With the first three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours of birth, and suffered but a few hard pains. This liniment is the grandest remedy ever made."

Mother's Friend

will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above letter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering. Mother's Friend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness. It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of a few days.

Druggists sell Mother's Friend for $1 a bottle.

NAPOLEON'S EYE.

One Look From It Explained His Power Over Men.

In 1887, while working in London as a curate to the Rev. Canon Fleming, I was called in my vicar's absence to administer a religious service to an old admiral in Eaton square. The admiral's name was Eden. After the service was over he took my hand and said: "Shake hands with me, young man. There are not many alive who can say what I can say. You are talking with a man who has talked to Napoleon the Great." "Sir," I said, "that is history. May I hear more?" The old admiral then told me that he was once returning with the fleet—I think from the West Indies, but of that I am not sure—and touched at St. Helena. The admiral said, "I am going up to Longwood to pay my respects to Napoleon, and the senior midshipman comes with me."

"I was the senior midshipman," said the old gentleman, "and so I went. We waited for Napoleon in an outer room, and you must imagine how eagerly I expected his entrance. The door was thrown open at last, and in he came. He was short and fat and nothing very attractive but for his eye. My word, sir, I have never seen anything like it. After speaking to the admiral he turned to me, and then I understood for the first time in my life what was the meaning of the phrase, 'A born ruler of men.' I had been taught to hate the French as I hated the devil, but when Napoleon looked at me there was such power and majesty in his look that if he had bade me lie down that he might walk over me I would have done it at once, English middy though I was. The look on Napoleon's face was the revelation of the man and the explanation of his power. He was born to command."

Such was Admiral Eden's version to me of an incident which at 90 years old or thereabout seemed to him as fresh as if it had happened only the day before.—Rev. John Rooker in London Spectator.

WHEN TWO MAKE ONE.

The Twins, the Confident Mother and the Astute Conductor.

"Fares," demanded the Jefferson avenue car conductor.

The tall, thin woman handed out 8 cents for herself and two youngsters.

"Three cents more, please," reminded the conductor.

"They are twins," she explained, "and only equal to one child."

The conductor scratched his head and tried to remember his instructions. Evidently he recollected nothing governing twins; but, being something of a philosopher, he pondered and said: "Twins are out of the ordinary, therefore singular. Perhaps you're right, and yet you spoke of the twins as 'they.' That's plural," and he gazed around triumphantly.

The fat man nodded. He was a bachelor and detested children.

"No," spoke up the comical man; "she is right. They have only one birthday between them. If they equaled two children, they would have two birthdays."

"I guess that's so," acquiesced the conductor. "Anyway I'll look it up."

"They take up two seats," growled the fat man.

The conductor paused and forgot to hand back 5 cents change. "Say," at last he broke out, "what's their names?"

"Wilbur and Marie," replied the mother pertly, failing to see the Delvet trap she was walking into.

"Huh! Boy and girl, eh? Well, I'll have to have another fare. You can figure on boy twins equaling one boy, but half a boy and half a girl don't add up."

She paid.

"He's a diplomat," whispered the fat man in admiration. "He ought to be down in the legislature."—Rochester Post-Express.

Something In a Name.

The advantages that fall to the lot of a man whose surname occurs early in an alphabetical list are well known. As a candidate for office upon an Australian ballot, for example, a man named Abbott has a far better chance than the most eminent Zweigler. But the benefit that comes from the possession of a short name has not heretofore been generally recognized. Not long ago the promotion of one of the auditors of the treasury department at Washington created a vacancy to which, upon a formal recommendation to that effect, the candidate having the shortest name, being also a competent man, was appointed. His chief duty is to affix his signature to accounts, and as he needs to make but six letters in signing he can do twice as much in a day as a man whose name contains 12 letters.—Youth's Companion.

Had a Good Start.

Two colored men on a late Long street car were congratulating one another. The last to talk was newly wedded.

"Sam, I understand youse tookin unto youseself a new woman?" said Mr. Johnston.

"I'll kunfess I'ze guilty," meekly responded Sam, his countenance covered with a broad grin.

"Did you all get a good start?"

Sam was apparently very anxious to answer this question and in a much louder tone said:

"Well, I should say I did get a good start. I got an old woman wid eleben little pickaninnies."

Everybody who heard the remark was satisfied Sam had really a good start.—Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

TESTS PATIENCE.

The Most Patient People Must Show Annoyance at Times.

Nothing spoils a good disposition quicker.

Nothing taxes a man's patience
Like any itchiness of the skin.
Itching piles almost drive you crazy.
All day it makes you miserable.
All night it keeps you awake.
Itch. Itch. Itch. With no relief.
Just the same with eczema.
Can hardly keep from scratching it.

You would do so but you know it makes you worse.

Such miseries are daily decreasing.

People are learning they can be cured.

Learning the merits of Doan's Ointment.

Read the testimony of a Battle Creek citizen.

Mr. A. G. Ayers, book binder, of 197 West Main street, Battle Creek, says: "My hands became so sore from eczema that it was with difficulty I could bend my fingers. The skin cracked open, large scabs formed and in addition to the spots being tender they itched intolerably. I tried everything I could hear about or get hold of to stop the trouble but I was unable to do so until I procured Doan's Ointment. I had heard it spoken about by several people but as I thought it would act like all other preparation, which I had tried I waited some time until I was compelled from the condition of my hands to do something. Doan's Ointment cured me. Up to date, and this is months after I stopped the treatment, I have had no indication of any return."

Doan's Ointment for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

C. K. EDDY DEAD.

Prominent Lumberman and Capitalist of Saginaw.

Saginaw, Mich., May 10.—Charles K. Eddy, a pioneer of the Saginaw valley, and widely known in this and other states, died Wednesday in Los Angeles, Cal., where he had recently made his home, at the age of 80 years. He was the head of the firm of C. K. Eddy & Sons, whose lumber and salt plant in this city was one of the most extensive of its kind in the country. He had not been in active business for several years. He had amassed considerable wealth. Although a social man, public spirited and interested in the welfare of his city, it was not in an official way. He came to Saginaw in '65, and helped develop the city. Four years ago he sought a more congenial climate in southern California.

Big Land Deal.

Menominee, Mich., May 10.—The Abstract and Land association has sold to Herbert O. Alger of Hillsdale, Mich., a tract of 5,000 acres land in this city. The consideration was $20,000. The land will be subdivided into 40 and 80-acre tracts and sold to colonists from southern Michigan, Indiana and Illinois on easy payments. It is valuable farming and hard wood timber land, well provided with roads and lies only a short distance from the shore tract, which is practically all bargained for and will be settled on before fall.

Millionaires Visit the Mines.

Houghton, Mich., May 10.—A party of 11 St. Paul, Stillwater and Duluth pine and iron ore millionaires, headed by Frederick Weyerhauser, pine king of the northwest, is spending two days visiting the mines of the copper country. They visited the Mohawk yesterday, and will spend to-day at Champion, Tri-Mountain and Baltic. The members of the party are largely interested in recent copper boom, involving lands near the head of the lake.

Old Soldier Dropped Dead.

Grand Haven, Mich., May 10.—Geo. Sole, a well-known old soldier resident of this city and veteran local fisherman, was stricken with heart disease while walking on the pier late yesterday afternoon and dropped dead, falling into the river. His body was taken out by the crew of the schooner Kate Howard, and the life-savers did all they could to resuscitate him, but to no avail.

Charged With Manslaughter.

Jackson, Mich., May 10.—Archie Whitehouse, who was shot Monday night at Minard's Mills by Frank Biery during a charavari row, died Wednesday night. Biery is in jail on a charge of attempted murder, but the charge will now be changed to manslaughter.

For Half a Century.

Niles, Mich., May 10.—Mrs. E. E. Cunningham, the oldest resident of Niles, died yesterday, aged 84 years. Deceased had resided here for half a century and was extensively known and highly respected. She leaves two sons and one daughter.

Contract Given to Detroiters.

Saginaw, Mich., May 10.—The Banner Brewing Co. has signed contracts with Mildner & [illegible]eller, architects, and Huetteman & [illegible]amer, contractors, both of Detroit, for the construction of a new brewery.

A Practical Demonstration.

Washington, May 10.—At Thursday's session of the American Therapeutic society a practical demonstration of the therapeutic value of hypnotism was given by Dr. F. H. Miner of this city, who claimed that such treatment was valuable in the case of drinking, smoking and functional disorders.

Served President Harrison.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 10.—E. F. Tibbott, who served President Harrison for many years as private secretary, has been made the confidential secretary of John Wanamaker of Philadelphia.

Defect in the Budget.

Berlin, May 10.—Baron von Thielmann, imperial secretary of the treasury, admitted to the budget committee of the reichstag Wednesday that there would be a deficit for the next fiscal year of an amount between 70,000,000 and 80,000,000 marks.

Lodging House for Women.

Chicago, May 10.—The Social Economics club yesterday voted to ask J. D. Rockefeller to furnish funds with which to start a model lodging house for women in the business district of Chicago.

An Embarrassing Laugh.

During a funny turn on the stage at the Walnut Street theater, Cincinnati, one night a man in the balcony leaned over the railing convulsed with laughter. During an extraordinary burst of hilarity his false teeth flew from his mouth and fell in the lap of a lady who was sitting in the parquet. Those near looked up and saw the toothless man waving frantically to the lady to pick up his teeth. This caused a general laugh at his expense. The teeth were returned by an usher.—Exchange.

Where the Guilt Lay.

BILL IS PROGRESSING.

Legislature Coming Together on the Question of Corporation Taxation.

MEASURE WILL PROBABLY PASS

Legislation for the National Guard—Defeat of the Good Roads Joint Resolution.

Lansing, Mich., May 13.—Some little progress has been made toward a settlement of the differences between the two houses over the railroad or equal taxation bill, and there are good reasons for believing that still greater progress will be made this week. In fact, it need surprise no one if the conference committees get together on a mutually satisfactory bill before adjournment Friday. The senate committee has yielded to the extent of consenting to have the work of assessing the property of the corporations done by the state tax commission, the membership of which shall be increased from three to five, thus abandoning their stand for an entirely new and separate assessing board. This is agreeable to the house committee, but the two committees are still far apart as to what corporations shall be covered by the bill. The house end insists on having all the corporations stricken out by the senate reincorporated. These are telegraph, telephone, express, sleeping car and fast freight companies. A portion of the senate conferrees insist that a canvass of the senate shows that eighteen senators are vigorously opposed to including in the bill any corporations besides railroad and union depot and station companies, while as careful a canvass of the house makes it very clear that a very large majority of that body will stand out a long time before consenting to the final elimination of any of the corporations named in the Chandler bill as passed by that body. There is some intimation from the senate end that rather than spoil the chances of passing any ad valorem tax bill this session, that body might consent to a bill which cuts out telephone and express companies and includes all the other classes named. There are not wanting those who are firmly of the belief that nothing in this direction will be accomplished, but I do not share this opinion. I have never doubted that an ad valorem tax bill of at least a fairly satisfactory character would be passed, and I am still of this opinion.

SENATOR J. HELME.
[The only Democrat in the Michigan Upper House.]

Detroit Ripper Legislation.

I was more than half right about that Detroit ripper legislation after all. The rippers passed more bills than I thought they would, but far less than they intended. They had a programme that included every Detroit board in sight, but for some reason best known to themselves paused in their mad career just as they were in the midst of the slaughter. To a layman this is a most positive evidence of weakness, for they admit that the people would not "stand for" any further changes of this kind. What is difficult to understand about this whole affair is that if the portion of the programme carried out was so unqualifiedly in the interests of the people that the latter were unanimously in favor of it, as is claimed, why these same people suddenly rebelled against having more of the good thing thrust upon them. This feature certainly gives the entire transaction a queer look, for, as a general thing, it is quite impossible for the people to get too much of a really good thing.

National Guard Reorganization.

The Pierson bill which provides for the reorganization of the military forces of the state has passed the senate and is now in the house. The principal changes from the present system are that it extends from five to ten days the length of the annual encampment of the National Guard, and adds $50 per year to the compensation of commissioned officers. The military board is empowered to either pay the men, for services at encampments, either the full $2 per day provided by law or $1.25 per day and furnish rations to cost the balance. The bill abolishes promotion by seniority, and provides for the election of officers by the various commands. The term of office of the brigadier is extended from two to three years, and he is to be appointed by the commander-in-chief from above the rank of major in the National Guard or from the G. A. R., and he is to be a member of the state military board. No person is eligible to the rank of colonel who is under the rank of major, and no one can be elected major who is below the rank of captain. All the enlisted men must pass a rigid physical examination. In order to avoid deadlocks in the election of company or regimental officers, the bill provides that the commander-in-chief shall make appointments on the recommendation of the adjutant general where a deadlock has continued for twenty-four hours.

Additional Normal School Uncertain.

Just what will become of the Kelly-Lugers' bill providing for the establishment of an additional normal school is rather problematical. As passed by the senate, the bill provided that the school should be established in western Michigan, but the house, in committee of the whole, has made the contest open to the entire state by striking out the word "western" wherever it occurs in the measure. This will release some legislators who promised to vote for the bill providing the school was located in the western part of the state, but the indications are that the bill will pass. It will still have to run the gauntlet of the executive office, however, and there are reasons for believing that the governor will hesitate about approving it. The fact of the matter is that it is asserted by authorities on the subject that there is no need for the school, except as it is a good thing to have such schools scattered over the state where they will be handy to pupils. The claim is made that each of the three normal schools already in operation can accommodate from one-third to two-thirds as many pupils as they now have.

New Medical Institution.

Another new institution provided for by the legislature during the past week is a psycopathic ward in connection with the university hospital. The amount appropriated for this purpose is $50,000, and the design is to provide for the clinical treatment of mental diseases. It is intimated that the regents of the university were not at all unanimous in their opinion as to the necessity for this ward, and for this reason the fate of the bill at the hands of the governor will be anxiously watched by its friends.

War Against Fly-by-Night Merchants.

The war of extermination against fly-by-night merchants who drop into cities and villages and scoop up large sums of money from unsuspecting purchasers on whom they palm off worthless goods, but pay nothing in the way of taxes, is well advanced, the Schumaker bill having passed the senate and been agreed to by the house in committee of the whole. This bill is most drastic in its provisions. It provides that before doing business in the state a peddler must make a deposit to be subject to attachment by creditors. It is furthermore provided that before business can be transacted in any city or village another license must be purchased from the local authorities. This license fee is to be computed by the local assessor or supervisor who shall appraise the stock of goods to be placed on sale and compute the fee on the basis of the last tax rate in that jurisdiction. The bill is aimed principally at "fire sale" and "bankrupt stock" itinerants, who travel from place to place with stocks of worthless shoddy.

Slaughter of Good Roads Resolution.

Senator Earle's good roads joint resolution, which provided for submitting to the people a proposed constitutional amendment empowering the legislature to make appropriations for repairing roads, was slaughtered in the house, to the great sorrow of its author, who is one of the most ardent good roads advocates in the state. It is proposed by the Palmer bill, which has already passed the senate, however, to amend the general highway law so as to make the building of better roads possible. This bill provides for dividing townships into four highway districts, which shall be under the supervision of the township highway commissioner, instead of district overseers. At each annual township meeting the electors, by a majority vote, shall determine the amount of general highway tax to be raised for the ensuing year, but this amount is not to exceed one-half per cent. upon the aggregate assessed valuation of the property of the township. A special highway tax of the same amount may also be raised. This money is to be expended by the highway commissioner in improving the highways of the township. The commissioner is to have charge of employing the labor and making the contracts, subject, of course, to the approval of the township board. It is made the duty of the four district overseers to report to the township commissioner defects in the highways in their respective districts, and when required by the commissioner they are to supervise the work of repairing roads and constructing bridges in their respective districts. Upon request of a majority of the overseers in any township, and with the consent of the township board, the commissioners may purchase necessary road machines, tools, crushers, rollers, etc., for the use of the township, and pay for them out of the highway fund. The bill provides that work hereafter done on roads that have been opened and worked for ten years or more, except such as may be required for necesasry repairs, shall have in view the permanent improvement of such roads by graveling and turnpiking. Elevations upon the line of such roads shall be cut down, and depressions raised in order to form a grade as level as the nature of the ground will permit. A poll tax of $1 on each male inhabitant not under 21 nor over 50 years of age is provided, and it is to be paid in the same manner as other highway taxes, and not worked out.

Nothing for the Bicentenary.

For some reason or other, the average legislator does not take very kindly to the concurrent resolution making an appropriation of $25,000 toward defraying the expenses of the bicentenary celebration Detroit proposes to indulge in July 4, and the chances are that the appropriation may not be made. The sentiment seems to be that if Detroit wants to celebrate its birthday it should pay the shot itself

Telephone Rate Bill Sleeps.

The independent telephone companies have succeeded in putting to sleep the Weter bill, which sought to fix a scale of telephone rentals based on the population of the towns in which the business is carried on. The claim was that the bill was in the interest of the Bell octopus.

Preservatives in Milk.

A bill passed by the house permits milk dealers to use preservatives in their wares, provided they label the package with the proper name of the preservative used and do not try to deceive their customers. The penalty for failure to use such labels is a fine of $50 or imprisonment in the county jail for ninety days.

JAMES V. BARRY.

If you are sick all over and don't know just what ails you, it's ten to one your kidneys are out of order. Foley's Kidney Cure will bring you health and energy. J. J. Orr.

"I had a running sore on my breast for over a year," says Henry R. Richards of Willseyville, N. Y., "and tried a great many remedies, but got no relief until I used Banner Salve. After using one-half box, I was perfectly cured. I cannot recommend it too highly." J. J. Orr.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.

Battle Creek School Girl Killed by a Train.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 14.—Leona Butler, aged 13 years, while returning from the Green Street school yesterday afternoon, was killed at the East Main street crossing by a Lehigh Valley express west-bound train on the Grand Trunk Western tracks. A freight was going east on one track, and when it passed the girl she walked out on the other track and was struck by the passenger train coming from the other direction. She did not hear its approach. Her right foot and left leg were cut off, and her skull was crushed. She was taken to the Nichols hospital, and died in 30 minutes after her arrival. The track for a considerable distance is streaked with blood and presented a gruesome sight.

SIGNED SOME BILLS

Governor Also Vetoes Some and Tells Why He Did So.

THANKS FROM GRAND RAPIDS

Bills Signed Include Appropriations for Michigan College of Mines and State Fish Commission and Amendments to Detroit J. of P. Act.

Lansing, Mich., May 14.—Gov. Bliss filed two vetoes before leaving for Saginaw. One of the bills disapproved provides an annual salary of $1,500 for the chief clerk of the house, and secretary of the senate, this salary to be in lieu of all other compensation.

"It is in the power of each house," says the veto message, "to fully reimburse those on its pay roll for such services as they may render, and this being true, it does not seem to me that a salary should be paid for time when the legislature is not in session, and when necessarily there can be but little work to do."

The other bill vetoed appropriates $17,500 for the purchase of additional land at the Eastern asylum for the insane. The governor's reasons for side tracking this bill are as follows:

"The appropriation seems unnecessary at this time. The interests of the state in general, and of this institution in particular, will not suffer if the matter of buying additional land is deferred."

Among the bills approved by the governor yesterday are the regular appropriation bills for the state fish commission and Michigan college of mines, and the bill amending the Detroit justice of the peace act.

Gov. Bliss is receiving a great many letters from citizens of Grand Rapids commending him for his stand against the prize fight that was billed for that city to-night. The managers of the battle have declared it off. All arrangements had been made for furnishing the Kent county sheriff with troops to aid him in suppressing the fight if necessary.

In committee of the whole the senate agreed to the senate substitute for Rep. Holmes's bill defining the qualifications of kindergarten, music and drawing teachers; Senator Moore's bill providing for the incorporation of monument insurance companies; Senator Palmer's bill providing for the election of a secretary by the Agricultural College faculty, who shall be a member of the faculty, instead of having the secretary of the state board of agriculture act as secretary of the faculty, as at present, and Rep. Dupont's bill for the protection of passengers on suburban railroads.

Subsequently, Senator Kelly had the Moore monument insurance bill made a special order for Thursday. Both he and Senator Murfin were unable to reconcile the bill with any phase of legitimate insurance, and they wanted time to see if some sort of a diamond contract deal was not concealed about the measure. The bill is quite devoid of restrictions, leaving everything in the hands of the trustees.

Rep. Dingley tried to have his bill requiring sureties on liquor bonds to schedule their property, made a special order for Thursday, but the majority would not permit it to be taken from the general order.

In committee of the whole the house agreed to Rep. Heman's joint resolution authorizing the state auditors to allow F. L. Wait of Mason not to exceed $2,000 for injuries received at Camp Eaton in 1898, while a member of Company F, First infantry; also Senator Westover's bill amending the law relative to the acceptance and collection of bequests to the state; also Rep. Moore's bill exempting from inspection salt manufactured by the Williams and Alsberger process.

Fruit Crop Nipped.

Three Rivers, Mich., May 14.—Heavy frost, accompanied with ice Sunday night, with fruit buds where they are the most susceptible to the effects of cold weather, must have damaged them considerably. Cherries, plums and strawberries are in full bloom and look as though they were badly scorched. Many people will lose their garden truck.

Carleton, Mich., May 14.—This section was visited by a severe hailstorm Sunday, doing much damage to fruit trees.

Northville, Mich., May 14.—A heavy frost Sunday night did a great deal of damage to all kinds of fruit, which is just in heavy blossom.

Losses Greater Than Supposed.

Detroit, Mich., May 14.—The losses by the fire in the River Rouge district Sunday are greater than at first reported, and the whole district along the Rouge, from the River road to the marshes, is a blackened waste. Five mills, a salt block, a tug, a dredge and eight acres of piles of cedar poles were destroyed, the total loss being about $725,000. The burned district is 3,000 feet long from east to west, and 750 from north to south. Good authority states that 100,000 cedar poles belonging to the Western Union Telegraph Co. were destroyed and that they were worth $6 each.

Good Thing for Point Edward.

Port Huron, Mich., May 14.—J. L. Board of Chicago and his associate, Wm. Cummings, have organized a company capitalized at $600,000 and will locate a plant at Point Edward for the manufacture of machinery for making tin goods. They recently conducted a similar business in Chicago, but sold out to the American Tin company the rights for the United States. The Grand Trunk company have given them the lease of the old roundhouse at the Point, and a new building will be put up at once.

Died From a Fall.

Coldwater, Mich., May 14.—George Potter, an old Branch county settler, fell from a load of hay, dying shortly afterward at his home.

Eulogistic of A. L. Avery.

Port Huron, Mich., May 14.—The members of the St. Clair County Bar association yesterday morning adopted resolutions on the death of the late A. R. Avery, and they were ordered spread on the records of the court and an engrossed copy presented to the family. Eulogistic remarks were made by a number of the attorneys.

Death of Two Saginawians.

Saginaw, Mich., May 14.—A message was received here announcing the death at Chicago of John H. Pierson, a widely known lumberman, formerly connected with prominent lumbermen here.

Mrs. Mary Magdalene Baumgarten, aged 72, an old resident, is dead.

MURDERS IN MAINE.

A Family of Three Murdered and House Burned.

Shirley, Me., May 14.—The murders which have startled the rural districts of Maine the past few months are almost overshadowed by a tragedy in this town yesterday, in which a fimily of three was put out of existence and fire used to hide the crime. The victims are: J. Wesley Allen, a selectman, his wife and 14-year-old daughter. The charred bodies were found in the embers of their house, which stood on the stage road leading from Monson to Moorhead lake. On every hand were evidences that murder and even worse had been done.

The only clue to the identity of the murderers is furnished by a man named Johnson, who reported that he was held up on the road by four men, all being intoxicated, one of whom answers the description of the highwaymen who held up the Wilimantic stage last week.

The greatest excitement prevails in the community and arms and ammunition have been obtained by farmers, who fear a visit from the murderers.

Charles Tibbetts, while driving down the stage road with his children to the village school yesterday afternoon, saw the ruins of the Allen farm house and searched the embers, finding the bones of a body. He gathered the nearest neighbors and the ruins were searched and bones of three persons were found. At one place near the barn cellar there was blood and locks of Mr. Allen's gray hair.

STEAMBOAT DISASTER.

Two Drowned and Twenty-Two of the Crew Missing.

St. Louis, Mo., May 14.—A special to the Post-Dispatch from Grand Tower, Ill., says: The steamer City of Paducah sank in 25 feet of water, five minutes before 10 o'clock Sunday night, in less than five minutes after striking a snag, and while backing out from Brunkhorst landing.

The bodies of the two passengers who were drowned have been recovered, and 22 members of the crew, most of them negroes, are missing. All of the officers were saved. First Mate Tobias Royal of St. Louis says only about 12 passengers were on board, and all were saved except two. The body of Dr. J. W. Bell of Bell's Landing, Tenn., was taken out of his stateroom. The remains of a young woman, on which was a visiting card reading, "Mrs. Harry L. Allen, 343 Eads avenue, St. Louis, Mo.," was recovered from her stateroom. Two friends traveling with the drowned woman, who started back to St. Louis on the steamer City of Clifton, said the young lady was engaged to marry Dr. C. A. Meredith, 3903 Lee avenue, St. Louis. Several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry was found on her body.

Indicted for Manslaughter.

London, May 14.—The grand jury found a true bill of manslaughter against Jack Roberts, the pugilist who on April 22 fatally injured "Billy" Smith in a boxing contest at the National Sporting club; the referee, Douglass; Manager Batson of the National Sporting club and others concerned in the fight. The recorder recommended this course so that the courts might finally decide whether such competitions are genuine contests for points or prize fights.

Porto Ricans Learning Fast.

Ponce, P. R., May 14.—Carlos and Ramon Julia, respectively postmaster and assistant postmaster at Juana Diaz, have been arrested on the charge of embezzlement. The amount involved is not mentioned. Inspector Smith on April 27 found that the postoffice at Juana Diaz had a balance of $952. No cash was on hand. The bondsmen of the prisoners will reimburse the government in full.

Denounced for Drinking Champagne.

Worcester, Mass., May 14.—At the monthly meeting of Methodist ministers in Trinity church yesterday a clergyman said that an eye-witness had told him that President McKinley drank a glass of champagne on board a battleship. Several of the clergymen present vigorously denounced the president for the reputed act.

Still Knocking the United States.

Berlin, May 14.—The Cologne Gazette, which often voices the views of the German foreign office, in the course of a leading article today, advocated a tariff understanding with Russia in order that the two powers might act jointly against the United States, says: "As matters stand for Europe today, the struggle for existence demands that the exceptional position of the United States be abolished. The United States are a most dangerous competitor for Germany, especially in iron manufactures and hardware. Germany's tariff policy must be arranged accordingly. An understanding with Russia offers ways and means to compel the United States to adapt themselves to Europe's tariff system by which German agriculture would by no means suffer disadvantage."

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE

On Concerted Action of Metal Trades for a Nine-Hour Day.

Washington, May 14.—In view of the movement initiated by the International Association of Machinists for the establishment of a nine-hour work day May 20, President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor called a conference of the officers of the organizations particularly interested in the machinery trades of the country, the conference occurring at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor in this city yesterday.

James O'Connell of the International Association of Machinists, John Mulholland of the International Association of Allied Metal Mechanics, L. R. Thomas of the Patternmakers' League of North America, and E. J. Lynch of the Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Brassworkers' Union of North America, met and discussed the various phases of the matter, and plans have been determined upon so that a concert of action will be taken on or before May 20. The purpose of the general movement is to establish the nine-hour work day for all engaged in the machinery industry. The conference will be continued today at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor, when a general policy will be decided upon.

Cashier Westervelt Sentenced.

New York, May 14.—Chas. R. Westervelt, the defaulting cashier of the Dime Savings bank of Newark, N. J., was arraigned yesterday before Judge Skinner in that city. He retracted a plea of not guilty to the charge of embezzlement and entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment by the court. He had several days ago pleaded guilty to two indictments for forgeries. On these indictments he was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. The two terms of imprisonment are not concurrent and he will have to serve both showing the ease with which the com-

"Viva La Bandera Americano!"

Santiago de Cuba, May 14.—There was an exciting ball game between the Americans and Cubans here Sunday. The Cubans won by the score of 11 to 10. During the demonstration which followed hundreds crowded on the field and a jubilant Cuban attempted to pull down the American flag at half mast. The American players interfered and a lively scrimmage followed. A squad of mounted rural guards drew their machetes and charged the crowd, crying "Viva la Bandera Americano." (Long live the American flag.) The whole thing is looked upon as a thoughtless joke.

Twelve Gamblers Indicted.

New York, May 14.—Twelve men were indicted by the grand jury yesterday for keeping gambling houses. The grand jury took up for the first time the evidence presented by the committee of 15 against the men arrested and bound over through Justice Jerome's personally conducted raids on houses. In every case considered an indictment was quickly rendered, showing the case with which the committee had gathered its evidence. The grand jury has still before it evidence against gamblers arrested in raids on 20 other places.

RAY'S RECRUIT

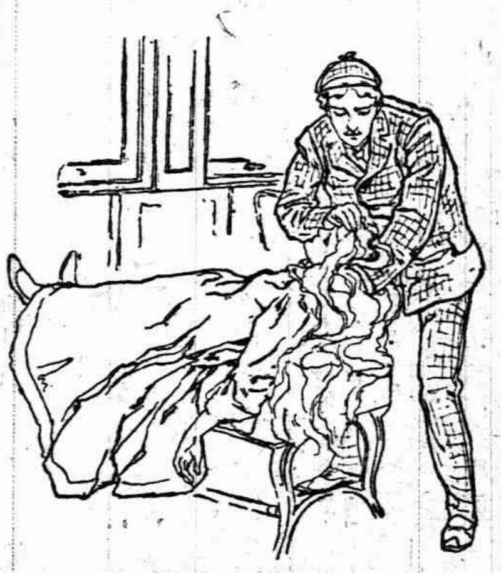
CHAPTER IV.

A melancholy scene of wreck and disaster was that which greeted the eyes of Mr. Gray when perhaps half an hour later he stepped from the platform and made his way forward. Through some strange neglect of telegraphic orders from Butte the conductor and engineer of No. 12 had not been bidden to side track at Thunder Gap, but had been sent spinning on their way down grade five miles to Alkali Flats, where the road crossed to the northeast, and began to climb over the divide to Bowlder Creek, and right here, at the end of a straightaway mile of track, the headlight of the Pacific express flashed into view. Each engineer sighted the glaring eye of the other's steed at the same instant. Each sounded his warning cry. Each instantly reversed his lever, reckless of cylinder heads. Long had vainly sprung the airbrake, and No. 12's brakemen had spun their iron wheels for all they were worth, but still, with the fearful momentum of their down grade rush, the two trains dashed at each other like maddened bulls, and engineer and firemen, having done all that mortal men could do, jumped for their lives a second or two before the crash. The lighter train of the two, the express, had so far slackened speed that Long and his fireman, landing and rolling in the soft sand, were but slightly hurt. The engineer of the freight, however, was tumbled heels over head and then knocked senseless by a flying splinter. The fireman had only just been found as Gray reached the point where the two engines, locked deep in each other's embrace, stood welded together, a tangled mass of metal. The whistle of one of them, dislocated by the shock, was emitting a low, moaning sound, as of some huge beast in agony. The tender of the express had telescoped half its length through the mail car and the postal clerk had been hauled from under a confused heap of coal and mail sacks. The mail car in turn had smashed in the front of the express, and this, forced flat against the front of the baggage car, left the messenger a helpless prisoner within his own premises, unable to open even a side door. How the baggage man escaped death he never could tell. He and his trunks were hurled to the front end of the car, all in a heap, yet, barring damages to clothing and cuticle, he was little the worse for the adventure. Then came the carload of recruits. Hardly a man of their number had a whole skin left. The seats were wrenched loose, the windows were shattered. The smoker, too, was a sight. Its few occupants had been hurled about promiscuously and were still swearing when Gray got to the front.

People in the day coach were less damaged, but equally dazed, and in the two Pullmans consternation reigned supreme. The excursionists were all sound asleep up to the instant of impact, and those in the upper berths had been tumbled into the aisle and all the carload violently shaken. But in the forward Pullman the actual damage was greater. The porter was groaning with a twisted back. Two of the men were badly wrenched. Lieutenant Rawson had a bump as big as a grapeshot on the side of his head. Mrs. Mainwaring, though uninjured, was so terrified as to be worse than helpless, and as for the fair girl with her, she had happened to be awake, had lifted herself on her elbow at the shriek of the whistle, fearful of ill, and almost instantly had been dashed against the edge of the seat and cruelly stunned. Of the freight train, the six cars immediately behind the engine were crushed to fragments, and the fragments hurled far and wide. It was from under a heap of these they lugged the fireman as Gray appeared. This summed up the damage to person and material, but not to nerves, tempers or records for piety. The language of Mr. Jarvis and his friend of the freight train beggared description. The cavalry sergeant felt an access of envious respect as he listened. Lieutenant Rawson invited both to have a drink, and this time it was accepted.



"Don't worry. You have quite a bruise here on the side of your head."

It was a five mile stretch up to the Gap, and much more than that back to Bowlder, but news of the mishap had to be sent and help summoned. It was then that Gray's shabby tramp had come to the fore. He had been warmed, fed and rested as he had not been for a week. He was used to walking, he said, and offered to carry the conductor's penciled dispatch. It should have been sent by a brakeman of the freight, but both were lamed and badly bruised. Jarvis looked more than uncertain at first, but finally gave the man the important paper. Twenty minutes later the two cowboys, despite bangs and bruises, declared that they, too, would "hoof it," and pushed ahead through the pallid dawn. Gray, silent and observant, appeared just as they departed and found the lieutenant, the two conductors and the cavalry sergeant in a quadrangular council. At sight of the newcomer Jarvis cautioned silence and dissolved the meeting.

The girl whom Gray had so promptly and tenderly cared for had recovered consciousness within five minutes. She looked up, dazed and startled, into the strange face bending over her, and then almost instantly asked for Mrs. Mainwaring.

"She is unhurt," said Gray quietly. "Don't worry. You have quite a bruise here on the side of your head. Please lie still until I check the bleeding. Mrs. Mainwaring will be back in a moment."

Mrs. Mainwaring had been there, half distracted, wringing her hands and laughing and crying by turns, and was now lying in her berth, being ministered to by some sympathetic woman from the other car. Another had come to aid Gray, but, seeing how deftly he bathed and stanched the wound, she confined her attentions to wetting towels and passing them to the strange gentleman. So skillful were his ministrations that the young lady presently declared herself able to sit up and walk and insisted on seeing Mrs. Mainwaring. She was assisted to her feet, and, leaning on his arm, was taken to her friend. Gray left her there, slipped quietly away and came forth, his heart beating with odd emotion.

The next thing he found to do was to help straighten out the fireman of the freight, who was shaking like an aspen, completely demoralized and almost crying. He, too, had struck soft sand when he leaped from the train, but after a somersault or two had been buried under an avalanche of splintered board, distributed from the roofs, sides and flooring of the shattered cars. The heavy trucks, wheels and beams fortunately had not been hurled more than a dozen yards from the track, but kindling wood in distracting quantities had been showered far and near. The handsome silver topped flask, so admired by the sergeant at the Junction, was promptly produced, and the fireman took a long, long pull. Then Gray bethought him of his tramp. The recruits and passengers, mingling in a confused knot with the damaged men, were still grouped about the wreck, some detailing personal impressions and experiences, some noisy and nervous, others silent and doubtless thankful for their escape, others still thinking only of the injured. Of these latter was Gray, at whom the conductor was scowling suspiciously the while and saying something in a low tone to the lieutenant.

"Do you know what became of that poor fellow we picked up at Willow Springs?" asked Gray of the brakeman, who was ruefully contemplating a ruined lantern. The man looked up instantly, but instead of answering turned and glanced significantly at the conductor.

"If you want him," said the latter coolly, "you'll have to follow the track five miles or more. Perhaps you knew the two that went after him. Birds of a feather, I take it—bound for the Gap and a spree on what's left of that $10 bill."

"I'm very glad to hear he isn't hurt," said Gray. "You've sent for help, I presume?"

"I've sent a message by that tramp friend of yours, if that's what you mean. None of my crew or the freight could walk a mile."

All this time Lieutenant Rawson stood aloof, his forage cap pulled down over his brows, intently eying the stylishly dressed man in tweeds. Gray became conscious of the scrutiny, and it annoyed him. Of the passengers in the day coach none were men whom he would have been at all likely to meet on equal terms in his past. Among those of the forward sleeper only two or three appeared to be men of education or social standing, and they were nursing their bruises back in the lavatory. The young fellows of the rear Pullman were laughing and chatting noisily together as they rummaged about the wreck. The officer was the one man aboard the train whom ordinarily Gray would have felt inclined to address. But while the uniform and the assurance of at least a certain social standing on the part of its wearer attracted him there was that in Rawson's face which repelled. Nor was this wholly due to the fact that it lacked refinement and was a trifle bloated, that the eyes were somewhat dull and clouded, but in them Gray read unerringly an expression of distrust, even of hostility, and the pugnacious in him was aroused at once.

All of a sudden he recalled that the porter had told him Mrs. Mainwaring was an army lady; so, doubtless, was the young lady with her. Very possibly the lieutenant was their escort, and the escort was wrathful over his usurpation of an escort's functions, so far as the damsel was concerned. Gray could not remember the officer's busying himself in any way to aid Mrs. Mainwaring. True, he was still half stunned and was bathing his bruises, while Gray was caring for the very attractive if somewhat disheveled girl in the pale blue wrapper. Something in the contemplation of his loneliness and isolation during the earlier night—a man without a home, the would be sharer of the fireman's seat, the companion of the rude soldiery, the aider and abettor of tramps—and the exaltation of his present tickled his sense of the humorous. Had he not won the gratitude, the almost effusive thanks, of Mrs. Mainwaring, the eloquent, if silent, recognition of a very pretty girl and now the undoubted jealousy and dislike of an army officer? "There's some fun left in life, even now," was his grim comment, as he calmly studied Rawson's reddening face, gazing speculatively into the latter's shifting eyes until uneasily they turned away.

The gray dawn was sheeting the slopes about them, and farther to the west the mountain tops loomed, dim, pallid and white with snow. Fine, soft flakes were sifting down even here, and Long's prediction was being verified. That faithful soldier of his country and "the road" was now stretched on the flat of his back on the floor of the baggage car, with some car seats for mattress, pluckily stifling the moan of pain that would have forced itself through his set teeth. To him came the younger soldier, the sergeant, full of sympathy.

"You're badly shaken, Mr. Long. Wouldn't a little whisky help you?" said he, the cavalry cure all of the old days most naturally suggesting itself.

"I don't know but what it would," groaned the engineer. "The lieutenant has some, hasn't he?"

"Yes, he has," was the half hesitant reply. Then the freemasonry of the craft seemed to show in the look that followed, half comical, half confiding, but all significant. "But—he ain't the sort of man I'd ask for anything. 'Tain't like as if it was Captain Ray or Blake or Truscott or any of them was here, you know. But—I can find you some all right."

And, jumping from the car, Sergeant Kearney went straight to Mr. Gray. "Our engineer, sir," said he, "is badly stove up. Could you oblige me with a little whisky?"

"Certainly," said Gray, going down into his pocket and fishing up the silver topped flask. "Give him a good swig, and, sergeant, help yourself."

The sergeant grinned, thanked him, hurried back to his new friend and gave him what he called an honest cavalry four fingers.

"God!" said Long, smacking his lips, his eyes snapping. "That was an old timer." Then as the potent liquor, long a stranger to his once case hardened system, began glowingly to assert itself he blinked his gratitude and looked admiringly at the handsome flask. "That's a swell stopper you've got to that canteen, sergeant. Where'd you capture it?"

"Tall young fellow in the first sleeper. Seems to have money and whisky, cigars and good nature, till you can't rest," said Kearney in the vernacular of the day, surprised at Long's sudden interest. The engineer braced himself up on an elbow, all eagerness.

"Smooth face, with light mustache, regular six footer, slim, broad shouldered, traveling cap and big ulster?"

"That's the feller. Treated half my squad to pie and coffee back there at the Junction. No end of a swell, I— Why, what's amiss? Say, I wouldn't take another drink just now, would you?" he broke off anxiously, for Long was reaching for the flask.

"I want to see the monogram, or whatever you call it, on that silver stopper. D'ye know what I think of that feller? He's first cousin or twin brother to the foxiest gang of bank and train robbers in the whole country, and if we hadn't run over or run our nose slap into No. 12 right here at Alkali Flats I'm betting my bottom dollar we'd have found his gang waiting for us back of Thunder Gap."

Kearney drew back, startled. Long had seized the flask and was studying the stopper with keen interest. No wonder he couldn't decipher it. There was no monogram. Instead there was a queer shaped shield with diagonal lines and odd little figures, like tiny leaves, cut on the surface, and above it was the paw of an animal grasping a dagger, and there was a scroll with some words in a foreign tongue, Long knew not what. He searched the cup of silver that fitted on the base, but that was smooth and polished. The red Russia leather covering also bore no mark.

"That don't look like a train robber," said Kearney, pointing to the device on the top of the stopper. "Ain't that what you call a coat of arms, or something?"

"Exactly, and what's an American doing with a coat of arms? He's lifted it from some dook or other, touring through the west for buffalo and Indians. He's a slick one, sergeant, but he can't fool me. Why, he just gave himself dead away when he told me he wanted to ride up with me and Scut in the cab, pretending he was ont here to enlist in the cavalry and wanted to talk with me about the officers that were coming there to Ransom. Yes, sir." And Long grinned sardonically, despite his pain.

Kearney's answer was a long whistle of amazement.

"You'd never have got me to believe it if he hadn't made that break. Fancy a swell like him a-grooming horses and cleaning out stalls. Hush," suddenly lowering his voice, for at the instant Mr. Gray came briskly into the car.

The dawn was so far advanced that the night lights were no longer needed and were burning blear and dim. The battered baggage man, in no pleasant humor, because an excursionist from the rear Pullman with ill timed jocularity had asked him how he liked the taste of his own medicine, was muttering profane comment on excursionists in general and this one in particular, as he took down the nearest lamp and extinguished it. Gray's tall figure, bereft now of the ulster, was outlined against the brighter light at the rear door as he entered, and Long turned his head and stared at him curiously. For a moment, coming as he did from the outer air where it was now almost broad daylight, though the sun was not yet peeping over the eastern horizon, the newcomer was not quite sure whether the dark object on the floor was or was not the engineer, but he spoke cheerily.

"I'm looking for Mr. Long," he said. "I hear he's badly wrenched. Ah, there you are. How are you feeling?"

"As well as a man can who's turned half a dozen somersaults in the mud. You can thank God you didn't get aboard the cab."

"I can indeed," laughed Gray. "I've never practiced mounting and dismounting at a gallop from a locomotive, though I've tried it often enough from my horse."

Mr. Long winked expressively at Kearney, as though he would say, "Now watch out for a lie," and promptly popped the question.

"So you thought you'd join the cavalry on that account, did you?"

And to the amazement of Sergeant Kearney and the incredulous disdain of Mr. Long the calm reply was: "That's what I'm going to Butte for. I expect to be at squad drill in a day or two. Possibly the sergeant here will be giving me my setting up," said he, turning frankly and smilingly to Kearney.

"You talk as though you knew the drill already, sir," said the sergeant, still unable to credit the statement, yet powerless against the gay, frank good humor of the civilian, "and it isn't the likes of you that generally take a blanket."

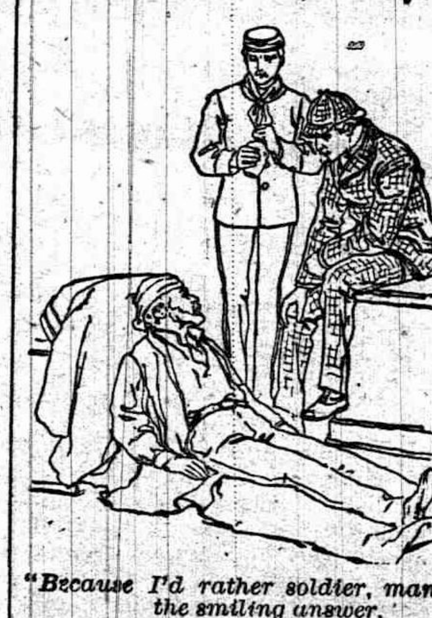
"Oh, I used to shoulder arms in the militia," laughed Gray, "and do the four exercises, but I'm green as any recruit in your party, as you'll probably find out, if you're going to Ransom."

Kearney looked at Long, and Long glared at Kearney. This was simply too brazen a fraud for the engineer's patience.

"Do you mean to tell me a man who wears clothes like them and carries a flask like this can't find any easier way of making a living?" said he.

"Positive fact," laughed Gray, debonair as before. "I'm at the end of my tether or soon will be, and I've come all the way out here for no other purpose."

"Why didn't you save your money and 'list in the east, where you came from?" asked Long, prodding Kearney with his toe to call attention to his astuteness.



"Because I'd rather soldier, man," was the smiling answer.

"For the simplest of reasons. Had I enlisted there they might have sent me to any regiment, whereas I wanted a particular one—the —th, in fact."

Carleton is figuring on a baseball aggregation this season. The team did great work last year, but their Dutch pitcher has been disabled, having received a solar-plexus shot from cupid's bow, that will probably prevent him from participating hereafter in the games.—Adrian Press.

An exchange says: Paris telephone girls are ordered to discontinue the customary "Hello!" They are to say instead, "I hear you," the new term being more polite A few salutary remarks such as "How are you?" "Is your wife well?" It looks like rain," would certainly add to the impressiveness of the conversation.

A lady hypnotist put a young man to sleep in Hillsdale, and he awoke twenty-four hours later, just because she wanted him to. She did better than a certain young lady resident of the same city, who was entertaining a popular Hudson beau, when both fell asleep and were found in their chairs by a brother, who arrived home about midnight.—Hudson Post.

Thos. Smith, of Hillsdale, stood on a wooden horse in the Stock mill, and with a bar tried to pry up some flooring. He did not possess the expertness of some of the other gentlemen at the bar in that city, and manage to win out when they have scarce a leg to stand on, consequently he toppled over, and was so badly injured that it was found necessary to take him home.—Hudson Post.

There is or was one dog in Hillsdale that had ideas of the eternal fitness of things. He was fat and belonged to Mrs. G. A. Codling. With Mrs. Codling he was in C. E. Singer's furniture and undertaking establishment Monday afternoon and in some way, jumping a bale of carpeting, fell and died—perhaps from over exertion. Mr. Singer suggests that even the dogs know where to get buried.—Hillsdale Democrat.

If your yard is strewn with tin cans and old discarded shoes, just throw them over into your neighbor's lot. Your neighbor, following your example, will throw them back, and throughout the summer your yard will be just as dirty and belittered with rusty tin cans and other eyesores as it was before you commenced to clean up. If you would have a steady summer's occupation just try this mode of tidying up your premises.—Trenton Times.

The editor of a paper having been blessed with a baby boy, the little 4-year old sister of the new arrival asked: "Did you get him on advertising, papa?" And this prompted the editor of the Benton Standard to say: "You can get a bottle for his milk. You can dress his little form in silk. You can get a pillow for his head. You can get for his stomach a little bread. You can get a wagon for him to ride. You can get the soap to wash his hide. You can get his pills for early rising. But you can't get a baby on advertising."—Clinton Local.

Five years ago Brayton Wright lost a padlock, key and small ring from his pocket. Search was made but to no avail and the lock has since hung useless on a nail in the barn. One day last week Mrs. Wright was slicing up beets to feed to the cow and as she whittled a large mangel-wurzel the knife rasped against some hard substance. She examined closer and finally dug out the long lost key and ring. The tap root of the beet had grown through the ring and as it enlarged had completely enveloped it and the key as well.—Brooklyn Exponent.

A word to the young man from the country when he comes to town—don't make a guy of yourself by cocking your hat on one side, wearing the highest collar or the loudest necktie you can find, by talking loud and puffing cigar smoke into the faces of the passersby, by swearing and bragging and asserting an offensive rural individuality. The town breeds guys enough of this type and the attempt to ape them is to belittle you, your calling and your community. The Broncho Bill buster style will make you no friends nor command for you any respect. Be a gentleman.—Ex.

With a Winchester.

Iron Mountain, Mich., May 14.—James Dickey, who owns a farm on the outskirts of the city, prevented the St. Paul crew from laying rails through his property. He allowed the grading. When the work of laying steel was commenced, Dickey met them with a Winchester. He held 120 men at bay until the afternoon. The work is on the extension of the St. Paul road from here to Quinnesec.

The Will Was Valid.

Lansing, Mich., May 14.—Circuit Judge Wiest filed an opinion Monday sustaining the validity of the will of the late Lucien D. Wilson, who left an estate worth about $40,000. Wilson's son, who was practically cut off by the will, made a contest on the ground that his father was mentally incompetent.

Mysterious Death.

Ishpeming, Mich., May 14.—John Koski, a miner at the Cleveland Cliffs Lake mine, was found dead yesterday afternoon in a drift of the second level. The cause of death is a mystery. It is thought to have been caused from electric wires. This is the second mysterious death at this mine within a year.

Miss Mamie Smith, of Middlesboro, Ky., writes: "My little sister had the croup very bad. I gave her several doses of Foley's Honey and Tar, and she was instantly relieved. It saved her life." J. J. Orr.

Geo. C. Hickock, Curtis, Wis., says: "Foley's Kidney Cure has been tested and found to be all you claim for it. I have given it to my father and it is the only thing that ever helped him." J. J. Orr.

The camels have been duly watered, the tiger stroked the wrong way of the fur, Mokanna and his band have been notified and all the Arabs assembled and a caravan will start for the Tecumseh reservation on the 26th day of Moharrum A. H. 1319 (which to the uninitiated represents May 16th, 1901,) and there proceed to do a light foot cake walk for the edification of a certain tribe of bad medicine men who are headed by their chief Tecumseh and who have sworn to Allah that their hearts are strong, their blades sharp and the soles of their feet hard and horny enough to withstand the heat of the desert sands.

As the journey is long and the conquest hard, we have herewith submitted to our faithful subjects a photograph of two of our most familiar postures as a memento in case of accident. We shall without regard to sand storms strike the enemy in the solar plexus at the hour of the curfew bell, or about 8:15 p. m. eating time, and thereupon proceed through the camp of the unruly and at once sandpaper the anatomies of any Tyros who may chance to be running loose at that unseemly hour, after which we will proceed to the most favorable location, count scalps and fine any member of the order who is not in possession of at least one.

CHARGED WITH ADULTERY.

Rev. Sam Wilson Wanted by the Sheriff of Muskegon County.

Muskegon, Mich., May 14.—Alfred R. Hemstreet, a Grand Rapids business man, late yesterday afternoon swore out a warrant charging the Rev. Samuel S. Wilson with adultery in connection with his wife Matilda. Wilson has been holding revival services from the railroad gospel car Herald of Hope at Muskegon Heights for the past six weeks. He met the Hemstreet woman and the pair is alleged to have eloped last Friday to Grand Rapids, where she stayed at her father's house until the same afternoon, when the pair left the city on the afternoon train. Wilson went to Bay City, where he has a wife and five children living, but left shortly and was located in Mears, Mich., by the sheriff of Muskegon county, who has left to make the arrest. The woman has disappeared and no trace of her has as yet been found.

Mrs. Butler Holloway.

The passing away of this esteemed lady, known to most of the citizens of Raisin as "Aunt Ann Holloway, was an event to which more than ordinary interest is attached in the neighborhood where she has lived so long.

She was a daughter of one of the earliest pioneers, Archibald Richard. Her birth occurred on May 13th, 1815, in County Antrim, Ulster, Ireland, where her Scotch ancestry had found a place of refuge in troublous times. When she was thirteen years of age, her father emigrated to the United States, having been persuaded by his son, John Richard, who had spent nearly three years in Maryland and New Jersey. The family landed in New York in June, 1828. They lived in Geneseo, N. Y., until September, 1833, when they removed to the township of Raisin, Mich. Incidents of pioneer life in the woods were cherished by them till the last. Ann, who was destined to be for many years the sole survivor of the family, was married to Butler Holloway April 2, 1846. Of her three children, George R., the only son, survives her. Her husband preceded her to the Better Land on Feb. 15, 1882.

The saying that "the memory of the just is blessed" will find in her an illustration and a proof. Her remembrance will be cherished. April 17, 1901, proved to be her time to "depart and be with Christ." On April 19 the funeral services were held at the homestead and at the Presbyterian church, with whose history her own had been connected since the organization in 1834. The sermon, appreciative of her place and of her works in the church was preached by the pastor, Rev. J. A. DeSpelder. Her body "rests in hope," near the dust of her kindred, in the cemetery of the Presbyterian church of Raisin.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by C. A. Wright.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battle ground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.

CHRONIC COUGHS

OFTEN ARE THE BEGINNING OF CONSUMPTION.

Stop Your Cough and Avoid Future Trouble.

We Will Guarantee That We Can Do It For You.

Our Vinol is the Remedy for all Pulmonary Affections

Vinol is a preparation that is delicious to take.

It consists of a delicate table wine in which has been dissolved the active curative principles that are found in the liver of the live cod, and to which cod-liver oil owes its reputation as a remedy for coughs, colds and all wasting diseases.

If there is any one who has a cough, a tendency to take cold easily, or a dread of consumption, we would like to have them call and permit us to explain what we know about Vinol and why we believe it will cure all such troubles more surely and quickly than any other remedy ever given to the public.

Following is a letter which has just come to hand and which shows how beneficially Vinol acted in one instance:

"I had a severe cough of long standing. I was advised by friends to give your Vinol a trial, which I did. Before taking it I had tried many other remedies for coughs without obtaining any relief. With Vinol it was different. I have now used four bottles of it, and am pleased to say my cough has almost entirely left me. I have been decidedly benefited by its use in every way. Very truly yours."—H. E. SMALL, Boston, Mass.

Vinol acts beneficially upon the digestive organs, enabling them to obtain for themselves the elements from which are made firm healthy flesh tissue, sound muscle, strong bone structure and pure blood.

We recommend Vinol unreservedly.

If you will call on us at our store, we will tell you why we have such faith in this new wine of cod-liver oil.

We guarantee that if you suffer from any symptoms that indicate troubles for which we know Vinol is intended, we will refund to you your money if you don't find Vinol helps you.

PURINA MILLS, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE PEOPLE KNEW HIM.

(Benson's Plaster Is Pain's Master.)

George Washington made and sold flour, and every barrel of flour in the market branded "G. Washington, Mount Vernon," sold without delay. No question was ever raised as to quality or weight.

Benson's Porous Plaster sells on its reputation everywhere. All the buyer wants to be certain of is that the plaster offered him really is Benson's, and not a worthless imitation of it or substitute for it.

A plaster is the best form of external remedy, and Benson's is the best plaster; 5,000 physicians and druggists, and a multitude of people no man can number, have settled that. "You can trust it," they say.

Coughs, colds, lame back, lumbago, muscular stiffness and rheumatism, troubles of the liver and kidneys, influenza or grip, pneumonia, and all other diseases open to external treatment, are at once relieved and cured by Benson's Plaster.

Do not assume that Belladonna, Capsicum or Strengthening plasters are "just as good as" Benson's. They are vastly inferior.—No other plaster is as good as Benson's.

In competition with the best-known plasters of Europe and America, Benson's have received fifty-five highest awards.

For sale by all druggists or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States, on receipt of 25c. each.

To the resigning organist of St. John's Episcopal church, Mrs. Chas. Judge, was tendered a surprise by the members of the church at her home Monday evening making her the recipient of a handsome cut glass water jug as a memento of appreciation for her faithful services to them for so many years. Rev. C. C. Kemp managed the presentation in his happy manner and while Mrs. Judge was deeply touched by the honor bestowed upon her, she spoke her thanks to her friends in her usual graceful and winning way.

"THE FRENCH SHORE."

Where Misery, Squalor, Hunger and Cold Rule In Newfoundland.

Misery, squalor and wretchedness, accentuated by an almost ceaseless struggle with hunger and cold, are the portion of the inhabitants of the "North Shore," in Newfoundland. Their little hamlets are perched in the rifts in the almost unbroken hills, and the fierce storms sweep the surface almost to their doorsteps, while for seven months of the year their coast is blockaded with ice and they are cut off from all communication with the outside world.

The only industry is codfishing, and cod is the sole medium of exchange. The people rarely see money, and barter is the system of trading, a quintal of cod being the unit of value. The needs of the fisher folk are only supplied by the itinerant trader, his schooner being laden with provisions, clothing and fishing appliances. Thus have these people lived for generations. They are ignorant, for the means of education are nonexistent, the children being content with what satisfied their fathers. The common objects of everyday life are unknown to them. They have neither horses nor cattle. Only a few of the older folk who have ventured south have any knowledge of these things.

There are no roads and therefore no vehicles. Travel is by boat during the summer and over the ice floes during the rest of the year. The few letters for the clergy and others who can read are conveyed to the settlements by dog teams during the winter, and save for the fortnightly visit of the mailboat during the period of open navigation, a steamer is never seen by the residents.

With such marvels as electric telegraphs, telephones and electric light they are of course unfamiliar, and their standard of intelligence is best indicated by stating that it is not unusual to find a justice of the peace who cannot write his own name.—Chambers' Journal.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good they can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonial free.

He Stunned the Porter.

On one occasion Sims Reeves, the famous tenor, was stranded at a country junction waiting for a train. It was cold and miserable, and the singer was naturally not in the best of tempers. While chewing the cud of disappointment an old railway porter who recognized him from the published portraits entered the waiting room.

"Good evening, Mr. Sims Reeves," he said.

"Good evening, my man," replied the vocalist, getting ready the necessary tip. But the man sought for information rather than tips.

"They tell me you earn a heap of money," he remarked.

"Oh!" murmured Mr. Reeves.

"And yet," pursued the porter, "you don't work hard. Not so hard as I do, for instance. But I dessay you earn—p'raps ten times what I do—eh?"

"What do you earn?" asked the singer.

"Eighteen shillings a week all the year round," said the porter.

Sims Reeves opened his chest. "Do, re, mi—do," he sang, the last note being a ringing top one. "There, my man; there's your year's salary gone."

The amazed railway man gazed wonderingly at the singer for a full minute. Then as though his thoughts were "far too deep for words," he silently resumed his prosaic occupation.—Golden Penny.

Not Strong Enough.

At one of the clubs the other day two members were arguing about will power.

The conceited man, who was in the habit of boring all present with his pointless tales, said that his will was stronger than his friend's.

"You are wrong there," said the quiet man, "and I will prove it in this way: You go and stand in that corner, and I will will you to come out of it. You will against me, and I bet you that I will have you from that corner before I have commanded you a second time."

The smart one took the bet and put himself in the corner. The quiet man said in a commanding voice:

"Come out of that corner!"

The other grinned and shook his head. The quiet man sat down and looked at him steadily. Five minutes passed, and the man of will said, with a sneer: "Hadn't you better give it up? I don't feel any influence at all, and I can't stand here all the evening."

"There is no hurry," said the quiet man, "and I have a very comfortable seat. There is no time limit except that you are to come out before I ask you twice, and as I don't intend to ask you again until this day week I think you will feel the influence before then."

The smart one came out looking very foolish.—London King.

Mr. F. D. Arnold, Arnold, Ia., writes. He was troubled with kidney disease about three years. Had to get up several times during the night but three bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure effected a complete cure, he feels better than he ever did and recommends it to his friends. J. J. Orr.

The greatest skin specialist in America originated the formula for Banner Salve. For all skin diseases, all cuts or sores, and for piles, it's the most healing medicine. Beware of substitutes. J. J. Orr.

Her Grievance.

Distressed by her cook's frequent complaints of toothache, a mistress of the upper west side decided a few days ago that it was time to recommend heroic remedies.

"Hannah, there is no use putting it off any longer. There is Dr. Jones over there. He promises to extract teeth without pain. Why don't you see him and have it over with?"

Hannah scarcely relished the suggestion, but after another night's suffering sorrowfully announced, "'Deed, I kin jess stand dis no longah," and asked permission to go to Dr. Jones. Her mistress rejoiced in the thought that the agony was at last to be ended. When an hour later, however, she beheld Hannah march down the areaway steps, the whites of her eyes flashing and her head bobbing with a vehemence born of righteous fury, visions not only of lost molars, but of a departing cook came before her. She entered with the dignity of an insulted African queen.

"Got de right teef all right and a dollah an a half besides. Yas'm, he did so."

"Well, did he hurt you?"

"No'm, can't say he did."

"Then what's the matter?"

"Well, Miss 'Liza, didn't you tell me dat man ober dere 'stracted teet widout payin?"—New York Sun.

Fun Has a Valuable Side.

"Show me a man who does not appreciate humor," said John Kendrick Bangs to me, "and I will show you a man who is morbid, cynical, unresponsive to every call of nature. Such a man is worse than a pessimist and more to be pitied. Take some of the greatest and most successful men in the world. Humor has always played an important part in their lives. Often a funny incident has marked the turning point of a great man's career. Often some ridiculous condition has been the impetus of a new start in life."

Mr. Bangs is right. Did not Columbus' apparently hopeless task of standing an egg on end make thinkers of the wise men who sat around him? Was not George Washington credited with being a master of the truth because he once saw a boy punished for trying to jest with his father and finally became, as Mr. Bangs facetiously remarks, so "he couldn't tell a lie even if he saw one?" And didn't Johann Gutenberg invent the printing press by working out a theory which found its origin while he was playing leapfrog with some boys on damp ground? The impression made in the soil by the boys' feet is said to have given Gutenberg his first idea of the impression that could be made by types.—Robert Mackay in Success.

The Travels of an Eyelid.

The many thousands of miles which a man unconsciously travels in his lifetime, taking into consideration the paces his footsteps measure as he walks about each day, are enough to make him sit down to rest for the remainder of his life.

But now a German scientist has come forward with some still more startling facts concerning the journeys which our eyelid undertakes every time it winks, and it is not possible for us to see, he says, unless we wink. Unconsciously we wink once a second, so that for the time we are awake during the day we voluntarily wink from 48,600 to 50,000 times and in a year have moved our eyelids down and up again no less than 18,250,000 times. The distance that the eyelid travels in its great speed is measured from a single involuntary wink.

This, the scientist says, is a quarter of an inch both ways, the eyelid moving equally up and down, so that, taking the movement of both eyelids into consideration, they cover some 50,000 inches in a day. The eyelids of a man who has lived for 50 years will have unconsciously traveled a third of the way around the earth, or about 7,200 miles, a calculation sufficient in itself to cause the victim of insomnia to fall into a dreamless sleep as he reads it.—London Mail.

A Dead Face In the Window.

Crockford, the proprietor of a well known London gambling house, was made to play a queer role after he was dead. When one of Crockford's horses was poisoned just before the Derby, the misfortune brought on an attack of apoplexy, which proved fatal within 48 hours. Now, many of Crockford's friends had staked large sums on another of the gambler's horses, which was a favorite for the Oaks and which was disqualified by the death of the owner. Only the people in the gambling house knew of Crockford's death, and it was resolved to keep it a secret until after the race.

The servants were bribed and sworn to secrecy, and the conspirators on the day after the night upon which Crockford died had the body placed in a chair at a window, so that people returning from the track could see the gambler sitting there. He was fixed up to look as lifelike as possible and through the window and partially concealed from view by the curtains looked so natural that no one of the great crowd which came cheering by the house when on their return from seeing Crockford's horse win the Oaks suspected the trick.

The next day it was announced that Crockford was dead, but it was years before the true story leaked out.

Faithful Shepherd Dogs.

A cold spell in Montana killed a sheep herder in the Great Falls district. Two feet of snow covered the range in places, and the thermometer indicated 40 degrees below zero.

The herder was frozen to death on the prairies while caring for the sheep, and it was three days before his fate was known to his employers. Two shepherd dogs were with him when he died, and one of these staid with his body while the other attended to the sheep, just as though the herder had been with him. The dog drove them out on the range in the morning and back again at night, guarding them from wolves and preventing them from straying off. Neither dog had anything to eat during the three days' vigil, so far as could be ascertained, but the 2,500 sheep thrived as well apparently as though directed by human agency. The singular fact about the matter is that these faithful creatures would have starved to death rather than harm one of the sheep left in their charge.—Portland Oregonian.

He Forgave Twain.

Many years ago the Montana club in Helena entertained Mark Twain after a lecture. He met many old friends there and one old enemy. The latter had come all the way from Virginia City, Nev., on purpose to settle an old score. When the glasses were filled and Mark's health proposed, this man interrupted the proceedings by saying: "Hold on a minute. Before we go further I want to say to you, Sam Clemens, that you did me a dirty trick over there in Silver City, and I've come here to have a settlement with you."

There was a deathly silence for a moment, when Mark said in his deliberate drawl: "Let's see. That—was—before—I—reformed, wasn't—it?"

Senator Sanders suggested that inasmuch as the other fellow had never reformed Clemens and all the others present forgive him and drink together, which all did.

One of Her Ways.

"The ways of the female shopper are beyond the ordinary salesman's ken," said a disgusted optician who is in business in the shopping section of the city. "A woman came in here the other day and asked the prices of all kinds and styles of spectacles and eyeglasses known to those in the trade. Finally, after a half hour's quizzing, she rustled out with the remark: 'Thank you. I expect to get a pair of glasses for a birthday present, and I just wanted to know about the prices of them.'"—Philadelphia Record.

A Fated Spot.

About a mile south of the Michigan state line and near Cedar lake, Indiana, is a small spot of land upon which vegetation absolutely refuses to grow. The surrounding soil, though apparently the same, is very productive. The spot is less than 20 feet in diameter and is located in a grove which tradition declares to have been the torture ground of the Bawbeese Indians.

Lucidity of Slang.

"So you floored your opponent?"

"Yes, indeed; I knocked him sky-high."—Chicago Record.

Englishmen In America.

Among Englishmen who come to America a British author, Mr. Vachell, enumerates "the parson's son, the fortune hunter, the moral idiot, the remittance man and the sportsman."

It is a clever and comprehensive catalogue, but it omits one of the types most interesting to Americans—the irresponsible "younger son" sent to "the States" to seek a fortune he has never been able to find at home or to avoid a maturing crop of wild oats.—New York Herald.

Cards.

Harry—Uncle George, at the end of this marriage notice of Cousin Tom's it says, "No cards." What does that mean?

Uncle George—It doesn't mean anything, Harry. That is to say, it is only a blind. It is a promise that Tom will give up cards, but, bless you, he won't be a month married before he'll be back to the poker table again.—Exchange.

CONVENT LANTERNS.

An Old Fad With Modern Improvements—An Electrical Display.

In the old days a favorite fad for travelers in ancient lands was the collection of lanterns. Those from ruined convents, decayed mosques and poverty stricken shrines were prime favorites. The fad is not entirely dead, but the supply has run so short that now enterprising firms in Birmingham, England, and in New York turn out large numbers of excellent imitations. The new ones are machine made and so far as strength and durability are concerned are superior to the ancient designs, which were hand made, but the latter in many instances were ornamented with inlaid work as well as with carving and twisting of the most artistic type. The machine made goods can never reproduce these latter characteristics so well as to deceive an expert.

The material of the lanterns varies from fine woods and glass to iron, steel, brass, bronze, copper, pewter and even silver. The simplest forms are cylinders which are perforated with numeous holes so as to resemble the clumsy sieve. Then come globes, cubes, octahedra, hexagonal prisms, ovoids and more complex solid forms. The prettiest of all are the mosque lanterns. Many of them are of bronze inlaid with silver, pierced with little windows and these closed in turn with white or colored glass. With a lighted candle inside they look like a mass of jewels in a dark room.

A wealthy man on Brooklyn heights who has traveled a great deal has one of his rooms illuminated by lanterns of this type. They range in size from small affairs four inches in diameter to stately lamps a foot in diameter and two feet high. In place of candles inside he employs electric lights, one bulb to the smaller lanterns and three, four and a dozen to the larger ones. When the current is turned on, the splendor of the effect is almost startling. The colors of the glass have been deepened and made richer by the years, and the radiance they give may be compared to that from a great oriel in a Gothic cathedral.—New York Post.

COMEDY IN THE AMBULANCE

A Doctor's Story of a Man and a Woman, Each With a Broken Leg.

"When I was an ambulance surgeon," said the young family physician, "I used to start like a fire horse at the sound of the call. I was just as much interested in the work at the end of two years as I was the day I began. It was the excitement of the life that made me so fond of it. I had all sorts of experiences at all sorts of hours. There was an element of danger in it, too, but that only added to the charm.

"One night I had a call from the west side in the neighborhood of Chelsea square. It was for a drunken man who fell down and broke his leg. On the way back to the hospital with him I picked up a drunken woman to whom a similar accident had happened. There was nothing to do but put her in the ambulance along with the man.

"After that the ride across town was exciting enough for a cowboy. At first the patients sympathized with each other. Then they began to cry in chorus. At Broadway they fell to kissing each other. At Third avenue they were fighting like a pair of Kilkenny cats, and I had my hands full in keeping them apart. The woman had scratched the man's face dreadfully, and he had nearly closed her eye with a punch. When we struck the asphalt in Twenty-sixth street, they were singing 'We Have All Been There Before Many a Time,' and such singing! The uproar attracted a crowd who evidently thought I had an ambulance full of lunatics. When we reached the gate, they swore eternal friendship, and at the office they parted in tears."—New York Sun.

She Knew All About It.

"I was dining out one evening among a notable company of people, most of whom I knew only by reputation," says George Inness, Jr., in The Home Journal. "I was assigned a seat next to a very charming and intellectual woman and did my best to entertain her. Said I: 'What can I talk about that will interest you? I have had some little experience as a cavalryman. Possibly you may care to hear something about horses in the field.'

"'Why, yes; certainly,' answered my fair companion. 'I know a little concerning army life, and I once wrote a book called "Boots and Saddles."' And then it dawned upon my poor, dull brain that I was talking to the widow of the great cavalry leader, General Custer, so I said no more about horses or army life."

Things Washington Never Saw.

It is hard to make it seem true that Washington, Jefferson, Franklin and the fathers of the republic never saw a railroad or a telegraph line or a sewing machine or a photograph or a typewriter or a rubber band or shoe or a piano or a stem winding watch or a cyclopedia or a dictionary or a chromo or a steel engraving or a friction match or a heating stove or a furnace or a gas or or an electric light or a fire engine or a thousand and one other things common to every one today.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Not Disposed to Dispute.

Aunt Hannah—Oh, you fool of a girl! Just because a man tells you you are the prettiest woman in the world and the wisest and sweetest you believe him.

Useful to a Statesman.

"Then you are not ashamed of your humble origin?"

"Oh, no; it's part of my political capital."—Chicago Record.

"Those Loving Girls."

"Oh, yes," said the brunette, "it was very sweet of Marie to give me that blue gauze scarf. She knows I look a fright in blue, but the scarf is lovely and just the thing she wants to wear over her yellow hair. I'm not going to leave it around where she can borrow it, though. I'll keep it safely until her birthday next month, when I will have it dyed scarlet for her."—New York Mail and Express.

If a man says something affectionate to his wife in public, she forgives him for all the mean things he has said in private in ten years.—Atchison Globe.

An Irish lecturer, upon being introduced to his audience, said, "Ladies and gentlemen, before I begin to speak I wish to say a few words."

Trying to Make Forty Dollars.

Here is a hard luck story apropos of efforts to make a little sum in Wall street: A young man started with $100 and ran it up to $9,960, or $40 less than an even $10,000. The desire to round out the $10,000 goaded him on. He said to his broker, "If I can make that additional $40 on a quick turn I will draw out my $10,000 and invest it in real estate." It was a strong bull market, but things appeared sky high, and he picked out an active stock to sell short. I think he landed on T. C. and I., which had a phenomenal rise and was due to drop anywhere from 10 to 50 points. He sold 100 shares at par, intending to close it out at 99. But instead of going down the blamed thing soared to 126. At every three points' gain he sold another 100 until he was carrying all he could tote. In 24 hours he lost nearly every cent it had taken him three months to make. With what little he had left he bought T. I. on the recession to 116, friends of the Hanover National bank assuring him that it was going to 150. Then came the fireworks and the funeral. The bottom fell out of the specialty and young Dr. Knowall found himself $15,000 in debt. He hasn't been in Wall street since.—New York Press.

A Rhapsody of Love.

Only we two alone, engaged in bringing about for ourselves the still greater solitude of two into one. Oh, beloved, what a company that will be! Take me in your arms, fasten me to your heart, breathe on me. Deny me either breath or the light of day. I am yours equally, to live or die at your word. I shut my eyes to feel your kisses falling on me like rain, or still more like sunshine—yet most of all like kisses, my own dearest and best beloved! — From an "English Woman's Love Letters."

A Quaint Introduction.

On one occasion the dean of Wells in introducing E. A. Freeman, whom he could abide neither as man nor historian, said: "I rise with great pleasure to propose the health of our eminent neighbor, Mr. Freeman, the historian, a man who, in his own personal characteristics, has so often depicted for us the savage character of our first forefathers."

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of This Old, Old Anecdote Will Save a Heap of Trouble And a Pile of Money.

Something has gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and some suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up a rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows:

Fixing engine........$ .50
Knowing how.........10.00
10.50

This anecdote clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works, at Marshall, Mich., residing in that city at No. 141 S. Marshall street tells in the following of his experience with the little conqueror; it will pay you to know how he got rid of a troublesome companion, he says:

"My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of the jarring of the train, and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacks of kidney complaint occurred I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by acquaintances, numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night, I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third, as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy."

FIRED ON BY TROOPS

Innocent Citizens Killed and Injured at Albany

THE SOLDIERS OBEYED ORDERS

Stirred Anew the Feeling of Hatred as the Exciting Tidings Swept Through the City—Guards Bitterly Denounced.

Albany, N. Y., May 17.—Three men fatally wounded, hundreds of others with broken heads and cut faces, cars running merely as arsenals with no patrons, the city under martial rule, with its citizens in a frenzy of excitement and the city authorities and leaders of the strikers trying to get the railway company to come to an amicable settlement, was the situation when darkness put an end to the strife growing out of the street car strike last night.

Those fatally wounded are William Walsh, a merchant, and Leroy Smith, a merchant, both shot by national guardsmen, and William Marshall, a non-union motorman, skull fractured. Others most seriously injured are: George Booze, citizen, cheek ripped open by bayonet; Wm. Rooney, citizen, shot by national guard, and Gilbert Hall, non-union motorman, shot by mob.

The bloodshed came after a day of peace. From early morning the crowds had melted away before bayonets and shotguns, cars had been operated under heavy guards and there was an impression that the spirit of turbulence was waning. There had been some minor demonstrations, particularly in North Albany, but not a shot had been fired, and as the day passed the running of cars attracted but little attention. The volley fired on Broadway by a squad of Twenty-third infantrymen, in which Leroy Smith and Wm. Walsh, citizens, fell mortally wounded, changed all that. It stirred anew the feeling of hatred as the exciting tidings swept through the city, and the guardsmen were bitterly denounced. Neither of the men had been guilty of any offense, but were in the crowd some member of which had stoned the guardsmen, and by mischance were hit. The disturbance was not a serious one and "murder" is the title applied by inflamed public sentiment to the shooting. The guardsmen seem but to have followed their duty as soldiers, for they were under orders to shoot if assaulted. The bright prospect of a settlement of the strike has not served to allay the growth of vindictive feeling, and if the present situation continues acts of bitter revenge and violence may be expected. It was on the last run of the soldiers on the cars that the tragedy of the day occurred. The cars were on Broadway moving northward, and a constantly swelling crowd was gathering about the Union depot. The first of the workday folk had been released by whistles that sounded through the manufacturing district, and they were pouring into the crowd. Near Columbia street a truck blocked the way of a car and, urged on by the crowd, the driver refused to move on as speedily as desired. Some one in the crowd threw a stone, but it went wide of its mark. The crowd was very noisy and there was much confusion. The car finally moved forward into the next block, and another stone was hurled at it. There was a sharp command and as the car slowed down four shots were fired from it. Leroy Smith lounged on the steps of his store; Wm. Walsh, his business neighbor from across the street, was his immediate companion, and a small crowd hung about near them. It was into this crowd that the guards fired at a range of less than 20 feet. Smith and Walsh were both shot in the abdomen and fell where they stood. A third man, Wm. Rooney, was slightly hurt by a glancing bullet. Some of the guards stepped from the car and reloaded their pieces. The startled crowd fell back at the first shot, and a moment later the guards sprang aboard the car and were rapidly wheeled from the scene.

Smith and Walsh were hurried away to hospitals for surgical care, and an angry mob swarmed into the street to curse and denounce the guardsmen. Smith is a member of the shoe manufacturing firm of Smith & Herrick, and a citizen of wealth, respectability and prominence. He is a member of the Albany club and a whist expert of national reputation. He is 50 years of age and has a family. Walsh is the head of a plumbing house and well known in business circles. Neither man had any part other than as spectators in the demonstration that provoked the shooting.

The remainder of the cars made the run to North Albany and back without trouble and when they reached Quail street barn were housed for the night.

When the cars were all in the guards in the street were recalled.

Declared the Fight Off.

Oshkosh, Wis., May 17.—In deference to the mandate of Gov. La Follette, the boxing contest scheduled to take place last night between Jack Root of Chicago and "Kid" Carter of Brooklyn was declared off by Manager Moore of the Oshkosh Athletic club. The governor late yesterday, in emphatic terms, notified the local authorities that the fight should not take place and that he had sent Adjt.-Gen A. R. Boardman and Atty.-Gen. E. H. Hicks to Oshkosh to see that his orders were carried out. When the two state officers arrived a consultation was held with Carl D. Jackson, district attorney, and Sheriff Eugene A. Potter. The officers of the Oshkosh Athletic club then declared the fight off.

Consul Arrived Home.

New York, May 17.—The Hon. Jas M. Ayers of Ohio, the United States consul at Rosario, Argentine Republic, arrived here last night on the steamer Etona from Buenos Ayres and Montevideo.

GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED.

The British Army Bill Passed by the House of Commons.

London, May 17.—In winding up the debate on the army bill in the house of commons yesterday, Mr. A. J. Balfour, the government leader, denied that there was any large body of opinion hostile to the scheme of Mr. Broderick the secretary of state for war. Mr. Balfour contended that it would be impossible to get unanimity among the soldiers on any scheme of reform and said that the objections to the proposed scheme were fantastic and groundless. He said the attacks made upon the scheme were from several sides and inconsistent with each other, and that it would be a crime against the future to allow this opportunity to pass and the popular enthusiasm to die out after the experience of the last two years.

The amendment of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the liberal leader, in which he said the proposals largely increased the existing burdens without adding substantially to the military strength of Great Britain, and asked for figures and definite statements which was rejected by a vote of 227 to 211. Mr. Broderick's scheme was then adopted by a vote of 303 to 163.

A FRANK ADMISSION.

Cannot Blame Englishmen for Accepting American Dollars.

Liverpool, May 17.—At the meeting of the Liverpool chamber of commerce yesterday, Mr. Alfred Jones, president of the chamber, who is also the head of the firm of Elder, Dempster & Co., said:

"It is much better for the Americans to buy ships here than to build them for themselves, and nobody can blame Englishmen for accepting American dollars; but there is an element of great danger in this transfer because it means a combination between the American railways and sea carrying.

"We must realize that the United States intend, so far as possible, to make themselves the manufacturers for the world. The only way in which the British shipowner may be hit will be by bounties or other proferential treatment such as we in England cannot hope for. Nevertheless, despite the advantages enjoyed by some of our foreign rivals I am confident the British shipowner will be able to hold his own."

Sir Courtenay Boyle, permanent secretary to the board of trade, who also spoke, referred to the necessity of alertness in meeting the "competition of energetic, friendly but powerful rivals."

The Platt Amendment.

Havana, May 17.—At Thursday's meeting of the committee on relations of the Cuban constitutional convention a majority voted to submit to the convention next Saturday a report advising acceptance of the Platt amendment. The minority faction asked for further time to draw up a minority report and were granted until to-day, when another meeting of the committee will be held.

Made an Assignment.

New York, May 17.—Gustav Edward Graff and Thomas F. Nevins, composing the firm of G. Edward Graff & Co. stock and bond brokers, made an assignment yesterday for the benefit of their creditors. The firm was a member of the Consolidated Exchange and was caught in the recent squeeze. Liabilities are said to be about $300,000, with assets of $150,000.

SHADOW OF DEATH

Hovers Over the Head of Mrs. McKinley

HER LIFE HANGS BY A THREAD

The President Distinctly Requested That Signed Statements by the Physicians Be Prepared and Given to the Press.

San Francisco, May 17.—Mrs. McKinley is in the shadow of the valley of death and may pass away at any moment. Yesterday morning, shortly before dawn, she sank rapidly and it was feared she would die before restoratives could be administered, but she responded to the powerful heart stimulants that were given to her and during the day improved to such an extent that hope of her recovery, slight though it was, revived.

But her life hangs by a thread. She has taken no solid food since she reached here on Sunday, and the physicians do not believe she could survive another sinking spell such as she experienced Thursday morning. She suffers little and bears up bravely. During her periods of consciousness her mind has been clear. The president is constantly at her bedside, and although worn by his long vigil, is standing the awful strain with remarkable fortitude.

Every banquet and public function planned in his honor here has been abandoned, and the city with heavy heart is watching Mrs. McKinley's battle for life.

If the end should come, the president and his party will be ready to start back with the remains within 24 hours. The train which brought them here will be used on the return trip, and all arrangements have been made to go back by the shortest route, the Central and Union Pacific to Chicago, and thence via the Pennsylvania to Washington. If Mrs. McKinley shall improve it is not believed she will be able to travel before a week from the coming Monday. All the members, with the possible exception of Secretary Long, will remain here to the end. His daughter is very ill at Colorado Springs, and he is very apprehensive that he may be called there at any moment.

At about 2:30 o'clock the president decided to go for a walk, and, accompanied by the postmaster-general and the secretary of the interior, he strolled through the neighboring streets, returning the respectful salutations, which were met with from all who recognized him, and once or twice he stopped to shake hands with those who stepped up and requested the privilege.

Upon his return to the house, he cheerily told a group of newspaper men assembled there, that Mrs. McKinley was holding her own. During the afternoon the president expressed the opinion that the public was entitled to specific information regarding the nature of Mrs. McKinley's illness and the treatment she was receiving. Up to that time the bulletins issued at intervals since Wednesday had been of the briefest and most vague character of the trouble which had brought

It was at the president's distinct request that the signed statement issued by the physicians was prepared and given to the press.

The ladies of the cabinet also took advantage of the slight improvement in Mrs. McKinley's condition to go for a short drive during the afternoon. All day long Lafayette park, opposite the Scott residence, was filled with crowds of people drawn thither not so much by curiosity as by an eager desire for direct news from the sick room. Their sirrow was apparent from the silent, respectful way in which they obeyed the injunctions of the police to keep beyond the coping of the road, which runs through the center of the park. Although fully 150 yards from the house, many of them spoke in whispers.

Late in the afternoon a little girl with an armful of flowers braved the blue coats and ascended the steps. The butler opened the door.

"I brought these for Mrs. McKinley," she lisped; "we are so sorry. I hope she will be better soon."

Then she handed over the flowers and slipped away.

Secretary Hay is utterly worn out by the strain of the last few days and the fatigue of the long journey. He rested in his room at the hotel all day. Mrs. Hay, who was at the Scott residence, kept him frequently advised of the developments there.

Dr. Hirschfelder and H. T. Scott left the Scott residence at 10 o'clock last night. Dr. Hirschfelder went home for the night. He said that he felt much pleased over her condition.

The Guest of Honor.

New York, May 17.—Edwin H. Conger, minister to China, was the guest of honor last night at the third annual banquet of the American Asiatic association at Delmonicos. There were 125 present. Acting President S. D. Brewster was chairman and toastmaster. Others at the guest table besides Mr. Conger were Wm. E. Dodge, the Rev. Dr. Wm. Ament of Pekin, Chas R. Flint, George H. Daniels, deputy United States Attorney-General Jas. W. Beck, Kogoro Takahira, minister from Japan; Dr. W. P. Wilson of Philadelphia and Thos. S. Hopkins of Washington.

INSTILLING PATRIOTISM.

Gen. MacArthur Educating Filipinos in American Ways.

Washington, May 17.—Tangible evidence that Gen. MacArthur is prosecuting an active campaign of education in the Philippines comes to the war department in the shape of a number of copies of a condensed "history of the United States of America," which has been published under military governors' direction and is being scattered broadcast for the enlightenment of the Filipino race.

It is printed in both English and Spanish, in alternate pages. The frontpiece is a map of the United States. Then follows a presentation of facts concerning the physical features of this nation, and the nation's growth after independence, both as to territorial and industrial development. The government itself is then taken up and set forth in detail. The volume concludes with the full texts of the constitution, its amendments and the declaration of independence.

TERRORS OF THE SEA.

Two Vessels Lost and Thirty-Two Persons Perished.

Victoria, B. C., May 17.—News has been received by the steamer Moana of the loss of the steamer Federal off the Australian coast during the heavy gale at the end of March. Thirty-two persons perished with her. Six bodies were recovered with a boat, but no other wreckage was found, and it was believed that the vessel foundered near the coast.

When the bodies were found wild dogs were eating them and were driven away with difficulty. The bodies were badly mangled by the dogs, and only a few were identified, including those of Capt. Coult and Engineer Hills. Fifteen of the lost sailors were married. The ship Louise Lamont was lost during the same storm with 16 souls and nothing has been heard of any of them.

The Irish People Gets Back.

Dublin, May 17.—The Irish People, Mr. Wm. O'Brien's paper, contains a nine-column attack on Mr. Wyndham, the Irish secretary, for the recent seizure of the paper because of its insulting references to King Edward. The general policy of Mr. Wyndham is also assailed. Some of the subheads are the following:

"Fools or Assassins, or Both," "Better Castle Lawlessness than Castle Cant," and "The Meanness of the Rascals;" "Villainy," "Treachery," "Hypocrisy and Mendacity" are frequently used with reference to Mr. Wyndham who in conclusion is called "a liar sneak and backbiter." Nothing is said against the king.

A Torpedo Flyer.

Bath, Me., May 17.—The torpedo boat Bagley was given an official trial run of two hours at sea yesterday and her performance was even better than that of the Barney on Wednesday, her average time over the course was 29.2 knots. In the last hour she made 30 knots and for a period of five minutes she attained a speed of 30.2. The contract speed is 28 knots.

Warning From P. O. Department

Washington, May 17.—First Assistant Postmaster Johnson has issued a general order announcing that superintendents and clerks of branch stations must understand that their revenues cannot be increased through their personal acts at the expense of other branch stations or postoffices. A disregard of these instructions will be regarded as sufficient cause for removal.

Explosion Dispatch Confirmed.

Berlin, May 17.—The war office has received a dispatch from Pekin concerning the explosion at the arsenal in Kalgan and names Lieut. Kummer as the officer wounded. The dispatch characterizes the explosion as very serious, saying seven cavalrymen are reported missing or found dead, and that three men beside Lieut. Kummer were seriously wounded.

U. S. Treasury Statement.

Washington, May 17.—Thursday's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $158,292,525; gold, $96,729,285.

OLD LADY WANDERED

And Was Fatally Injured Near Dearborn.

Detroit, Mich., May 17.—Mrs. Hafeman, the old lady who lies in a critical condition at the Wagner house in Dearborn, resides at 888 Mt. Elliott avenue, in Detroit, with a daughter, and she left home ostensibly for the purpose of going to Elmwood cemetery to attend to the improvement of a grave.

Whether she visited the cemetery or not is unknown, but the old lady probably remained only a short time and then set out on a long walk, taking the road for Dearborn.

Mrs. Hafeman evidently followed the track of the Ypsilanti-Ann Arbor electric railway after leaving the city, and when within three miles of Dearborn, about 10 o'clock last evening, she was struck by a west-bound car. She was thrown from the track and received injuries from which she is likely to die. She is 65 years old.

TRIO OF DETROIT ACCIDENTS.

One May Die and the Other Two Badly Injured.

Detroit, Mich., May 17.—Alexander Kilpatrick of 641 Merrick avenue was caught under a falling boiler at the Boyer machine factory, on Second avenue, yesterday afternoon. The boiler was being raised and it slipped. Kilpatrick's injuries are a compound fracture of the right leg, fractures of the right arm and shoulder, his left foot smashed to pulp and severe injuries. He is in an almost hopeless condition at Harper hospital.

In attempting to board a car in front of the Griswold house early yesterday morning, Thomas J. Dunn, aged 47 slipped and fell and was badly bruised about the head and face.

Willie Brandenburg, aged 13, who was playing on the track at Antoine street and Warren avenue, yesterday afternoon, was struck by a car and badly bruised.

Death of a Noted Citizen.

Wayne, Mich., May 17.—George Philips, an old historic character and for 30 years a citizen of Detroit, was found dead in a room over Johnson's restaurant, between 5 and 6 o'clock last night. He had been reading and was sitting in a chair. Mr. Philips was a signal quartermaster in the United States navy and served during the civil war on the monitor Agimenticus. After the war he accompanied Farragut on his famous three years' cruise around the world in the gun boat Canandaigua. Mr. Philips was for many years a foreman in the Detroit stove works and resided on Beaufait avenue.

Compelled to Make Good.

St. Johns, Mich., May 17.—The supreme court has affirmed a judgment against George A. Steel, ex-state treasurer, for $1,000, in favor of John C. Hicks of St. Johns. Steel had sold to the Ithaca Savings bank while he was director a note of the Mt. Pleasant Lumber & Manufacturing Co., in amount $1,000, when the Mt. Pleasant Lumber & Manufacturing Co. was insolvent, and failed to make known, as was his duty to the bank as director, the fact that the paper was worthless, and the supreme court now has compelled him to do so.

On Trial for Swindling.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 17.—Second only to the water board scandal is the trial of Mildred Preston, the fortune teller charged with having swindled Miss Ethlyn Quimby, a prominent society woman, out of money, silks and jewels, now on trial before Judge Newnham. At the time of the affair efforts were made to suppress it, but Miss Quimby was finally induced to relate the details and was the first and chief witness for the prosecution.

Destroyed One Block.

Remus, Mich., May 17.—Fire which broke out in the Burdick block in Weidman destroyed one entire block. The total losses foot up over $12,000 The origin of the fire is unknown.

Blacklist Sustained.

Chicago, May 17.—In the superior court yesterday Judge Baker directed that it is legal for employers to maintain a blacklist. The ruling was in the case of Annie Condon against several stock yards packing firms. The plaintiff was a labeller and can painter and joined a strike last year against a reduction in wages. Since that time she claims she has been unable to secure work. The court ruled that the various firms had a right to take protective measures against persons who had quit the employment of other firms without valid reasons.

Honors to Jules Cambon.

Chicago, May 17.—M. Jules Cambon, the French ambassador to the United States, was the guest of Chicago yesterday, and from the time of his arrival over the Pennsylvania road at 9 a. m. until late in the evening, when a banquet was given in his honor at the Union League club, was concluded, he was the central figure in a series of receptions and feasts.

Report Is a Falsehood.

Washington, May 17.—The minister from China, Mr. Vicuna, called at the state department yesterday and stated in regard to reports that Chile had erected fortifications along the Straits of Magellan, that Chile had not erected such fortifications and had no intention of so doing.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY

CAPTAIN CHARLES KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

Long had lost another point, but rallied. His tone was gruff as Mainwaring's as he returned to the attack: "One would suppose a feller—a man like you could command influence enough to get assigned to any regiment he wanted. That ain't much of a trick."

"No," answered Gray as he seated himself on the conductor's big wooden chest and carelessly swung his slender foot; "no, I don't believe I've got either friends or influence or anything in the wide world but what I've got on and what's in an old trunk somewhere along the road here."

"Didn't you say something about quitting railroading to take up soldiering?" queried Long, so astonished that he was forgetting his pain.

"I did. Two years ago I did some railroading at the general manager's end of the line, so you see how little I must have known about it. Yes," he went on with twinkling eyes, "I used to ride my own horse, but I've lost him, so it's got to be one of Uncle Sam's."

For a moment nothing further was said. A pair of frank blue eyes were gazing smilingly down into the engineer's face, and that ex-trooper could find no excuse for another expression of doubt. Slowly he held forth the half emptied flask.

"Here," said he, "take this. I'm d——d if you're not too many for me! But," a sudden thought striking him, "why don't you sell this and your watch and them clothes and go to the mines and make a stake there?"

"Because I'd rather soldier, man," was the smiling answer—Gray's good humor was indomitable—"and down in the bottom of your heart you know perfectly well you never see the uniform" —and here he laid a hand on Kearney's shoulder—"that you don't more than half wish you were in it again and riding the trail or the prairie rather than the iron track. I don't have to sell anything yet," he added, with almost a laugh. "Keep the whisky, Mr. Long. You've more need of it than I have. I'll see you again after awhile." And with that he rose and, nodding smilingly to Kearney, sauntered from the car.

"Well, if that's a train robber," said the latter as he reached and took the flask from Long's unresisting hand, "here's"—the top came off, and the flask was lifted to his lips—"here's long life to him!"

Late that morning the relief train came down from Pawnee, the east bound express at its heels. Passengers and baggage were laboriously transferred from one train to the other around the scene of the wreck. Mr. Long, bidding mournful adieu to No. 783, asked Sergeant Kearney to see that the now empty flask was returned to the tall feller that talked of enlisting. "He may talk till hell freezes over," said Long, "but not till I see him in uniform will I believe he isn't lying, and even then I'll misdoubt him for a reformed train robber or an escaped lunatic."

But of this and other unflattering comments Mr. Gray was unconscious. By 8 o'clock some railway men arrived from the Gap on a hand car, proving that the suspected tramp had at least delivered his dispatches. People were getting hungry by that time, and it presently transpired that "the tall gent" in the first sleeper was going back with the hand car to see what he could buy and send to them, as it would be noon perhaps before the wrecking train, etc., could come. Then the porter addressed Mr. Gray with a message. Mrs. Mainwaring begged to see the gentleman before he started.

She was calm and collected now, and evidently ashamed of the trouble she had given. The young lady was seated by an open window, languidly drinking in the fresh air, a silken handkerchief bound about her head.

"We are so very much indebted to you," said the matron, rising at the entrance of the young man, "and both my niece, Miss Leroy, and I wished to thank you before we parted. I am Mrs. Mainwaring, and my husband, Major Mainwaring, whom I expect to meet today, will be glad to add his thanks to mine if you will kindly give me your address."

"I assure you the thanks are unnecessary. I am only too happy to have been of the faintest service. I am awfully clumsy, I fear," said Gray, smiling, as his eyes wandered to Miss Leroy's face. She was leaning forward now and extending the pretty white hand he had so admired much earlier that morning.

"And I want to say, yet I don't know how to say, how very much I thank you," she murmured, her words falling hesitatingly, "and—pray, do not think me impertinent, but did I not see you—were you not on the Rhine last May?"

His whole manner seemed to change instantly. Quiet good humor and courtesy gave place to embarrassment, even awkwardness.

"It was—possibly a brother of mine," he faltered. "I—I hope you'll have a very pleasant journey. Such ill luck thus far, you know"— He barely touched the extended hand. "Goodby. Goodby, Mrs. Mainwaring. They—they're waiting for me with that hand car." And in an instant he was hastening away.

"But you haven't told us your name or your address," persisted the elder lady.

"Oh, it's of no consequence. You remember Mr. Toots, don't you?" he called back over his shoulder as he made his escape from the car. But on the platform without the flitting smile vanished and his face grew gray and sad as he stopped and took a long, long breath.

"Lesson number one, and a tough one, Darcy, my boy," he panted. "My God, what is my name to be now?"

CHAPTER V.

The —th had been having what Captain Ray called a "poky" time most of that year, and when Ray's usually sunny nature clouded over something was sure to be amiss with the professional side of the man. His domestic side was perennial joy. The regiment had known many a hard winter, many a fierce summer, many a sharp campaign and savage battle. Its long exile in Arizona in the old days was full of peril and suffering. Its sometimes desperate encounters with the red warriors of the northern plains and mountains had made sad inroads on its membership. Its records of casualties embraced every conceivable catastrophe—death by sunstroke, starvation, freezing, lightning, flood, fire, rattlesnakes, explosions, thirst, arrow and tomahawk, shot, saber and shell. A peaceful year it never knew from the day of its first muster on the plains of Texas until a quarter century after, when, mirabile dictu, there hadn't even been a horse thief to follow or an Indian to chase until late in the summer it occurred to a band of Cheyennes to ride northward and call on some kindred up in the Powder river country, and these children of nature never thought of asking anybody's leave. The —th had been having, as Ray said, so poky a time at Russell—just drilling, drilling, drilling on that wide sweep of upland prairie, instead of scouting and fighting through the mountains, their normal summer recreation—that the regiment shouted for very joy when it heard that Sharp Knife, the young Hotspur that headed the raid, had soundly thrashed the first detachment sent to head him off, and, indignant at the discourtesy of the Great Father in essaying to curb his inclination to roam, was helping himself to all the horned cattle, horses and household goods that lay in his way, not to mention a few of the households, and was careering onward bound for a big time in the Big Horn mountains, bragging to the northern Cheyennes of the fun he had had.

Then away went Colonel Atherton, with Stannard and Mainwaring, the old and the new majors, and eight "husky" troops, full tilt for the hills, only to find when they reached the broad valley of the Ska that Sharp Knife and his shifty followers had crossed 48 hours ahead and were circling westward across the Little Missouri by that time. Never is a stern chase so long a chase as when the Indian has the lead. The department commander followed by rail, stagecoach and buckboard, and half the troops in the territories of Dakota, Montana and Wyoming were centering on the Cheyennes when Sharp Knife cut loose from all semblance of a base and took to the woods in earnest. His people scattered to the four winds. Some hid among the northern bands of the same tribe, some slipped in among the Sioux at the great reservations in Dakota, others scattered far and wide, broke up into little squads of three or four and even less and jogged back by circuitous routes to the southern plains and swore they'd only been hunting along the Arkansas. There's only one creature that can beat an Indian—murder one minute and look the image of piety the next—and that's a cat. It was "a poky summer," said Ray at Russell. It was poor kind of campaigning, said that same authority, but better than none. It was the move that followed that stirred the social fabric of the —th to its foundations. The regiment had been stationed for some years at Russell, a big post on the Union Pacific, but the department commander decided that he wanted Atherton and his seasoned campaigners closer to the malcontents, and, to the unspeakable—not speechless—indignation of nine-tenths of the ladies in the —th and the financial though unconfessed comfort of many of their lords, the order was issued that it should not return to Russell, but direct its retrograde march on the older, smaller, but just now rather more important post of Fort Ransom.

"Squeeze into quarters as best you can," said the general cheerfully, "and you won't mind crowding this winter. We'll fit you out better in the spring."

Now, the winter was the time they most objected to being crowded, for then they had their friends from the east and their social pleasures, did these dames and damsels of the army, while in summer the troops were almost always afield, and the women, those who could afford it, went east. Few had done so this year, because the regiment was not sent out for summer camp, and when the Sharp Knife chase was ordered it was too late in the season.

So the two battalions, then so called, marched in to Ransom. Then, so many at a time, the officers were allowed to go to Russell to supervise the packing and shipment of their household goods, while the quartermaster and other sergeants did as much for the companies Mrs. Atherton, with her lares and penates, was there at Butte to welcome the regiment when it arrived. Mrs. Mainwaring, with her fair niece, Miss Leroy, was to have been there, but, as we have seen, became involved in a collision in the mountain division. The major hurried eastward to meet his helpmate at Pawnee, and there got full details of the crash and sought among the passengers for the young man in the ulster and traveling cap who had been so helpful in time of need, but he had disappeared, said the conductor who took Mr. Jarvis' load. The last seen of him he was taking dinner at Ford's restaurant with a couple of cowboys and a dilapidated party who had been fellow passengers with him on No. 3 at the time of the wreck. Then the cowboys had gone one way and the young man another. Sergeant Kearney, who under Lieutenant Rawson was in charge of the recruits, said, begging the new major's pardon, that the conductor and engineer of No. 3 were sure there was something queer about that party. It was believed they were all connected with a gang of train robbers. Whereat the major scoffed until Rawson came up and corroborated what Kearney had said and was presented by the major to his wife and Miss Leroy, who were not overcordial. Women learn so much more about their fellow passengers in the course of a few hours than do men. Then the major, in his happy way, went on to chaff the wife of his bosom upon her having nearly captured a train robber, and then Miss Leroy spoke her mind. She didn't believe a word of it.

At Butte, where they arrived late at night, while the major was bustling about after the ambulance and baggage wagons, Mrs. Mainwaring sitting at an open window and gazing out at the flitting lights on the platform and awaiting the summons to leave the car, was suddenly attracted by the sight of a little detachment of recruits marching by. The young lady, too, was at a near window, and the sergeant, catching a glimpse of her face, remembered the conversation he had heard at Pawnee and her prompt defense of the absent, and he had felt ill at ease and shame stricken ever since. What right had he to brand a man as a criminal on the mere suspicion of some railway employees? The young lady's spirited stand in defense of the defamed had astonished the major and delighted Kearney. A sudden thought struck the honest trooper as he was marching by, and, springing quickly to the side of the car, he held up to the window the handsome silver topped flask. "I beg pardon," said he, "but this belongs to that young gentleman. I was to have given it to him, but I've got to return to St. Louis to the recruiting depot, and he's stopped back there about Pawnee. He never came on this train at all, but he declared he was coming up to Fort Ransom later. Would you please give it to him, miss?"

And before she knew what to say the sergeant was gone, and there she sat with the stranger's flask in her gloved hand—the stranger whom she could have sworn she saw at Bonn and Cologne not four months before—who thought it might have been his brother, who wouldn't give his name, but who had forgotten the handkerchief with which he had stanched the flow of blood from her temple—an unsightly relic at the moment, to be sure, but safely stowed in her little satchel for all that, and already searched and not vainly for a trace of ownership. Bathed in her own blood were the letters D. H. G.

And what on earth she was to do with that handsome flask and that once more presentable handkerchief was a problem that confronted Miss Leroy two weeks later, after she had begun to feel reasonably at home at Ransom. It was the queerest phase of life that ever she had encountered. City bred, convent educated, she found frontier ways at an army post so full of novelty and sensation as her first explorations in foreign parts. For two or three days they had lived at the hotel in Butte until the major reported the carpets down and the stoves up. The next two or three were devoted to unpacking furniture, pictures, glass and crockery and putting everything where it belonged and much where it didn't. It seemed to make little difference, for in all these function, at all hours of the day and not a few of the night, the young officers, in shirt sleeves and the best of spirits, bore willing part. Such gay good humor, such utter lack of stiffness and conventionality, she had never seen. All drills and duties, it seemed, except the necessary guard, police and stables, were suspended until officers and men were comfortably housed and settled down. The bachelor lieutenants pitched tents on the parade and placidly awaited their turn to choose quarters, a ceremony which impressed Miss Leroy as something incomprehensible. It was not easy to make her realize just why Captain Ray couldn't move Mrs. Ray and the baby boys up from the hotel until Captain Freeman had chosen and why Mrs. Blake should remain at Cheyenne near her own old home until the Truscotts and Rays had settled on what houses they would take. They wanted the big double brick next but one to the colonel's, but were afraid to move in lest the new surgeon ordered out from Omaha should take a fancy to that very set. It was all plain sailing, as she could see, for the colonel, the two majors and the two senior captains, but then came the tug of war. The Greggs had moved into No. 5 confident the doctor would prefer the other side of the garrison, the very house the Truscotts and Rays thought to occupy together, but the doctor came, saw and concluded that the house he and Mrs. Doctor wanted was No. 5 and no other, whereat Mrs. Gregg was furious and the captain philosophic. "I told you so, M'riar," he was unfeeling enough to say a dozen times a day until she flew to the Stannards for sympathy.

It seemed to Miss Leroy that whether these families got settled or not the feuds never would be, and yet in less than ten days even the young married couples were snugly stowed away. Smiles and sunshine met her on every side. The men, who looked like hairy monsters at first, had shaved their beards and donned their neatly fitting uniforms. The band played every afternoon. Parades were fine, guard mounting "lovely." The little dinners and suppers and dances were just as jolly, friendly and delightful as could possibly be. Many of the young matrons were charming companions. Several of the young officers danced divinely, all of them rode well, and none of them thought anything of coming banging at the hall door at any hour of the day to ask Mrs. Mainwaring to come and do this or Miss Leroy to come and see that. The ladies ran in and out from house to house as though it were one big family, and before the 10th of November came Miss Leroy found herself completely carried away by the life and swing and movement that seemed to characterize everything that went on in the old regiment. She was on the pleasantest of terms with Mesdames Ray, Truscott and Blake. She found her aunt tireless as a hostess. She admired the colonel and his accomplished wife. She "took" to Mrs. Stannard from the start and wondered why Mrs. Mainwaring didn't enthuse over her as everybody else did. She liked bluff old Stannard and most of the officers thoroughly, and so, blithe, busy, "on the go," as they said, from morn till late at night, she had well nigh ceased to think of the shock she had sustained on the night of the collision or to speculate about the tall young gentleman who had restored her to consciousness and to whom she had not restored the handkerchief and flask, when the 10th of November came, and with it her birthday, a new sensation and an excitement at the fort.

St. Ignace to the Soo.

Chicago, May 17.—A number of Chicago capitalists are planning to build a railroad from St. Ignace, Mich., to the Soo. It has been incorporated in Michigan under the name of the Northern Michigan R. R. The line will be 60 miles long.

Convict Shot and Killed.

Michigan City, Ind., May 14.—James Lee, colored, a convict from St. Joseph county, sent up for larceny, was shot and killed by Night Officer Herrick of the state prison last night. The negro had murderously attacked the officer with an iron bar.

ECHO OF THE RIOT

Senate Passed a Bill to Regulate Gatherings in Detroit

PENALTY FOR DISOBEDIENCE

House Decides to Go Slow on Conference Committee's Report on Railroad Tax Bills—No Session of the Senate Today.

Lansing, Mich., May 17.—Once more the Detroit rippers, represented here by Senators Murfin and Holmes and J Herbert Cole, have pushed a charter amendment bill, with an important rider, through the senate. The bill was rushed through under a suspension of the rules. The rider was attached to that bland sort of blanket, Detroit charter amendment bill, fathered by Rep. Bland, and which was recently pulled back from the governor ostensibly "for correction" and modification.

Senators Murfin and Holmes had attached as a rider to the Bland bill the old anti-Campus disturbance Detroit ordinance, which was rendered practically useless by the absence of a penalty clause. This clause has been supplied and the rider adds a new chapter to the Detroit city charter.

The bill seeks to pass an ordinance that should be passed by the Detroit common council, if by any body. In other words, it is anti-home rule measure.

Aside from passing 18 bills the senate did very little business yesterday. Fifteen senators got excused from today's morning session, which indicates that there will be no quorum. The taxation committee reported out Senator Kelly's bill authorizing a general clearance sale of delinquent state tax lands in Muskegon county.

The committee reported house bill No. 826, to revise and consolidate the laws relative to the use of the Abbott and other voting machines at elections in this state. Lewis A. Stoneman of Detroit is here looking after this bill. He is attorney for a voting machine company.

The senate passed Rep. Hurst's bill to allow societies organized for receiving, loaning and investing money to loan money at the rate of 9 per cent.

Senator Lockerby got through a resolution authorizing the committee on education to visit Jerome to decide on the advisability of repealing the bill passed recently establishing the Jerome graded school.

Senator Pierson tried to take from the table his income tax bill but failed.

The program of Senator Atwood, the railroads and Speaker Carton to have the ad valorem tax bill conference committee's report agreed to by both houses of the legislature, met with overpowering opposition in the house yesterday afternoon. By a vote of 48 to 43, the house decided to make the report a special order for next Tuesday, in order to give the members a chance to consult the wishes of their constituents relative to the proposition to exclude telegraph, telephone and sleeping car companies from the provisions of the ad valorem tax bill.

LITTLE BLANCHE REYNOLDS

Dies From An Assault Committed By Schoolmates.

Harbor Beach, Mich., May 17.—Blanche Reynolds, aged 7, daughter of one of the best families in the village, was assaulted last Thursday afternoon by three girls, and cruelly beaten. She died Wednesday night at 11 o'clock from her injuries.

The victim was returning home from school when attacked by her schoolmates, who lay in ambush for her. The oldest girl in the gang, who was about 14 years of age, prevented Blanche from defending herself, while the other two beat her with a club and part of a broomstick. Blanche was almost unconscious before her assaulters ceased beating her, but managed to reach home in an exhausted condition. Her assaulters will be arrested.

Skeleton of a Man Found.

Allegan, Mich., May 17.—Two girls found the skeleton of a man about 45 years old in the woods one and a half miles from Swan creek. Sheriff Ransley summoned a jury, which rendered a verdict that it was the skeleton of an unknown man and that the cause of death is unknown. Nothing was found which would lead to the man's identity. Some said it might be Gee, or, the train robber. Dr. Bills said the man had been dead a year.

Eloquence and the Pea.

Our worthy forefathers were fond of rhetoric—particularly of funereal rhetoric—and were not always quick to perceive the dividing line between the sublime and ridiculous. They seem, moreover, to have regarded the extraordinary as contributing an added and kindred element to the impressive. Many of their epitaphs show this, but few more completely than that of an estimable matron who perished untimely in Newburyport in the eighteenth century.

Her tombstone on the crest of the burying hill is yet easily legible, with no more trouble than scraping a bit of lichen here and there and kneeling to push away the long grass and intruding daisies. Thus it reads:

> Sacred to the Memory of
> Mrs. Mary McHard
> The virtuous and estimable Consort of Captain William McHard of Newbury Port, who midst the laudable exertions of a very useful and desirable Life, in which her Christian Profession was well adorned, and a fair copy of every social virtue displayed, was, in a state of health, Suddenly Summoned to the Skies & snatched from ye eager embraces of her friends (and the throbbing hearts of her disconsolate family confess'd their fairest prospects of sublunary bliss were in one moment dash'd) by Swallowing a Pea at her own table, whence in a few hours she sweetly breathed her Soul away on the 8th day of March 1778, aged 47. This Mournful Stone as a faithful Monument of Virtue fled to Realms Above and a solemn Monitor to all below the Stars, is Erected by her Husband.

MAY PARTY

Wednesday Evening at Sutton's Opera House a Success.

MORAY'S ORCHESTRA,

Of Adrian, Furnished the Music at the Young Men's 17th Annual May Party.

The opera house was handsomely trimmed for the May party this year. The decorations were in green and white bunting festooned from ceiling to gallery. Green and white was the color scheme throughout except where the front of the stage was banked with a mass of lilacs. The stage was beautiful in palms and plants which screened the supper room in the rear and afforded glimpses of the artistically laid tables where Hiens and his assistants catered. The orchestra was Moray's, of Adrian, and gave a concert and some good dance music after.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Eccles led the grand march and many handsome gowns made the floor a gay scene from the gallery. One pleasant feature of the affair was that many of the married people joined the young folks this year in celebrating the "coming of the May." Among these were Messrs. and Mesdames Levi Hayden, Lowe, Downing, Chas. Patterson, Tom McCann, Harry Farnsworth, and Mesdames Tiffany and Tribou. The out of town people were Mrs. Carpenter, Misses Helen Carpenter, Florence Johnson, Maud Morden, Louise Emery, Bessie Andrews and Messrs. Shmutz, Perry Thayer, Homer Page, of Adrian; Will James, Detroit; George Tiffany, Hudson; Mr. Talcott, Ann Arbor; Mr. Voegele, Mansfield, O.; Miss Margaret Collins, Clinton; Chas. Harrison and wife, of Jackson.

HIGH SCHOOL.

General review in all classes now.

Botany students have analyzed over 30 specimens.

A number of the pupils will take teacher's examination in June.

The senior class pins have come and they are beauties both in design and price.

Ernestine Andersen has left school but will continue her Latin till the end of the year.

Several of the primary grades will have closing exercises and are vigorously preparing for them.

The chemistry class have had their final examination but have enough work left to keep that hour occupied the rest of the term.

The eighth grade alone will reinforce the high school with 40 new pupils. With the foreign attendance, therefore a large high school is expected next fall.

Four of the teachers will leave this year, Misses Moore, Stephenson, Pulver and Howell. Matrimony seems to be the leading cause this time. Miss Moore's place will be occupied by Linna Hall, but the others are as yet uncertain.

RAILROAD NEWS.

CHURCH WEDDING.

Miss Lena Hardenburgh and Wm. F. Fisher Married at the EPISCOPAL CHURCH WEDNESDAY NOON.

Two of Tecumseh's Most Popular Young People—The Wedding was Beautiful and Impressive in its Simplicity.

White lilacs and apple blossoms made beautiful adornments Wednesday at the Episcopal church for the wedding of Miss Lena Agnes Hardenburgh to William Fisher.

At the appointed hour, 12 o'clock noon, to the beautiful strains of the wedding march, rendered by Miss Louise Phelps, the bride, leaning on the arm of her brother, Clement Hardenburgh, came down the aisle to the altar, where she was met by the groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. C. Kemp, using the impressive ring service. The bride was beautifully gowned in brown silk with gold applique.

A reception was given to the relatives and friends immediately after the ceremony, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Alice Hardenburgh. The bride and groom received many beautiful and useful presents. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Fisher will be at home to their friends at the home of the bride's mother.

Mr. Fisher is a native of Ottawa, O., and is well connected there. He has been in charge of the Tecumseh Gravel Co. here for several years and his genial ways and bright sayings have made him a general favorite with the young people here and, in fact, with all who know him.

The bride is one of Tecumseh's most delightful and beautiful young ladies, possessing every advantage of education, careful training and disposition to make for any man a perfect companion. It is understood that Mr. Fisher's business, at least for a time, will continue in Tecumseh, and the friends and acquaintances of the couple can rejoice in the fact that the lady will remain and that he will become a fixture here. Indeed, the young people are well adapted to each other and with such a marriage there is not a sad thought, only complete happiness and pleasure.

In some way the bride and groom slipped away from the guests and drove to Tipton to take the Cincinnati Northern train west. The Misses DeWolfe, Arnold, Shull and Clemens and Messrs. Heesen, Brewer and Rosacrans took that train at Tecumseh and met Mr. and Mrs. Fisher at Tipton and showered them with rice.

Among the guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Hardenburgh, of Manchester; Miss Maude Morden, of Adrian; Raynor Brewer, of Detroit; Mrs. Lawrence Ketcham, of Toledo; Geo. Tiffany, of Hudson; W. W. Talcott, of Ann Arbor; Mrs. Harry Perkins, of Hudson; Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Fisher, parents of the groom, Miss Emil Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Haller, of Lima, O.; Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Grimer, of Columbus Grove, O.; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Harper, Jr., of Ottawa, O.

Albert Anderson.

Albert Anderson died at his residence on West Chicago street at 4 o'clock Thursday morning, after an illness of several weeks, aged 87 years. Although Mr. Anderson lived to this extreme age, until almost two years since, he has been in good health and able to transact all personal business as well as ever.

He was born April 6, 1814, in New Rochelle, N. Y., and was married to the faithful companion of his life's journey, who survives him, about 60 years ago in New Hampshire. They came to Michigan soon after their marriage and have resided in Tecumseh ever since, being counted among our most highly respected and influential families. He was engaged in the dry goods, milling and grocery business here for nearly 50 years, and was an energetic and thorough business man. He was a quiet, unassuming gentleman, well posted with a vast fund of useful knowledge, that made him an upright citizen and friend and a good father in his family.

Besides the aged wife, Mrs. Elona, he is survived by five children, Burford P., Seaton W., Mary, Erwin B. and Mrs. John Anderson. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. Maria Rosacrans, and three brothers, Webster and Egbert, who reside in this village, and William, of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The funeral will be held at his late residence at 3 o'clock standard Saturday afternoon. All who desire to view the remains can do so at 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Nancy Matthews.

Mrs. Nancy Matthews was found dead in her bed last Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock by her daughter, Mrs. Abbie Spencer, who with her husband have rented Mrs. Matthews farm, three miles west of town, several years, and Mrs. Matthews has made her home with them. Death was probably caused by heart disease.

Deceased was born in Michigan in 1836, making her age 64 years, 7 months, at the time of her death. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. Bert Slater, of this place; Mrs. M. J. Cummins, of Jackson; and Mrs. Chas. Spencer, her husband having preceeded her a number of years ago.

The funeral was held from the farm home at 2 o'clock this afternoon, Rev. Seelye, of the M. E. church, of which she has long been an attendant, officiating. The remains were interred in the Tipton cemetery.

Mrs. Matthews lived in the village a number of years in the village and many friends here and in Franklin sincerely mourn her death.

ELECTRIC RAILWAY

Ordinance Nearly Passed by the Council and Company.

EXACT ROUTE WILL NOT NOW BE SETTLED UPON.

Probably the Question will be Settled Next Monday Morning when Mr. Hatch will again be here.

The ordinance committee of the council, Messrs. Shepard, Belding and Hayden, now have charge of the ordinance relative to the new electric railway, the council at their special meeting last Tuesday evening having referred the matter to this committee, giving them power to act.

It seems that this railroad company, like all others, desires to get all that is possible of the council in the way of a favorable franchise, yet Mr. Hatch seems quite reasonable as to his final demands. The committee demand of the company that after a time of 18 months is given them to build the road, then if the company shall not have the road completed, they shall either give up the franchise or give a reasonable bond that the road shall be completed within 18 months from that time. At the present state of the iron market it will be hard work to get any road running under two years.

Although it is the disposition of the committee to give the company all possible show to build the road, yet it is their duty to protect the city against any bargain that will cost additional money or bond them so that any other line will not be kept from the place should this company conclude not to build. This is a committee of level headed men and they will not only use good judgment in the matter, but enable the road to go through. Mr. Hatch will meet the committee again next Monday morning, in the meantime having seen his Detroit partners and obtained further instructions.

WHAT IS SUCCESS?

Is it to worship earthly, groveling gold
  And, dollar blinded, to look only down,
  To rake the muck heap and forget the crown
 Until youth's bounding blood creeps strangely cold;
To dwell with envy, arrogance and dread,
  To barter all benevolence for dross,
  To lose companionship nor feel its loss
Because the flower of sympathy is dead,
   Is that success?

To labor for the rainbow bubble, fame;
  Afloat so fairly in the morning air,
  A perfect jewel for a prince to wear,
Is it a recompense for all its claim?
Through careful night and crowded, strenuous day,
  Through iron rebuff or flattery, like snow
  That leaves one thirsty, it is grasped, and, lo,
It vanishes in nothingness away!
   Is that success?

With comrade duty in the dark or day
  To follow truth wherever it may lead,
  To hate all meanness, cowardice or greed,
To look for beauty under common clay,
Our brothers' burden sharing when they weep,
  But, if we fall, to bear defeat alone;
  To live in hearts that loved us when we're gone
Beyond the twilight (till the morning break) to sleep,
   That is success!

Also report from Feb. 25 to May 1, fire team 22 days; hand labor 53 days, $66.25. Reports accepted and clerk instructed to draw orders for labor account.

Resignation of A. Hyde as water commissioner taken from table and on motion same was accepted.

A petition of Fred Kolkloesch to construct a small wooden outbuilding on his lot inside the fire limits was granted.

On motion Lilley and Wright were granted permission to remove the wooden walk on the west side of their store building and to construct a cement walk in accordance with the ordinance.

On motion the ordinance committee was instructed to draft an amendment to the sidewalk ordinance relative to the widths of certain walks.

On motion the village assessor was instructed that no poll tax would be assessed or collected during the year 1901.

William B. Hatch appeared before the council asking for a franchise through the village for an electric railway to be constructed from Ann Arbor to Adrian. The same was made the special order of business for an adjourned meeting to be held Tuesday evening, May 14.

The ordinance entitled, An ordinance to provide for the construction of cement sidewalks and to provide for the payment of the same, was taken from the table and on motion the same was passed and adopted as follows:

AN ORDINANCE TO PROVIDE FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF CEMENT SIDEWALKS AND FOR THE PAYMENT OF THE EXPENSE THEREOF.

SECTION 1.—The village of Tecumseh ordains: That whenever application shall be made to the street committee of the common council of this village for the laying of a cement sidewalk in this village, adjoining lands owned by said applicant, said committee shall forthwith cause an accurate estimate of the expense thereof to be made, according to specifications of the sidewalk ordinance then in force, which estimate shall be certified by said committee to such applicant and to the common council.

SEC. 2.—Upon payment by said applicant and landowner to the village treasurer of one-fourth of said estimate, which shall be credited to the general fund, and upon due certificate by said treasurer of such payment being filed with the village clerk, said street committee shall forthwith direct the construction of such walk.

SEC. 3.—Upon filing with said clerk due proof of the construction of said walk, and the cost thereof, by the person entitled to the same and of the ownership of the said adjoining land by said applicant or his grantee, said common council shall at its next regular meeting direct the payment of the cost of said walk to the person entitled thereto.

SEC. 4.—One-fourth of the cost of said walk with interest at five per cent per annum from date of said payment of said cost by said common council shall be levied and assessed as a special sidewalk assessment against the said lands adjoining said walk and collected with and in the same manner as the general village taxes of the then next succeeding year, and one-fourth of the cost of said walk with interest at five per cent from date of such payment by said council shall be levied and assessed as a special sidewalk assessment against said lands so adjoining said walk and collected as aforesaid with the general village taxes of the then second succeeding year. Said two fourths of said cost of said walk shall become a lien against said adjoining lands at the time said council shall order the payment of said cost of construction and shall remain a lien thereon until the same and said interest shall be fully paid. Provided, however, that any portion of said cost of construction with accrued interest may be paid at any time before maturity thereof as above provided.

SEC. 5. This ordinance shall take immediate effect.

The following resolution was on motion adopted: Resolved, That the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh does hereby require that a new sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the west line of a public street commonly known as Mill street and adjoining the east line of that parcel of land situated in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee county and state of Michigan and described as follows: A quadrangular piece ground bounded on the north by a public street commonly known as an extension of Bidwell street, on the east by a puplic street commonly known as Mill street, on the south by a public way joining Mill street so called and a public street commonly known as an extension of Evans street and on the west by said public street commonly known as an extension of Evans street.

The following bills were audited by the finance committee and on motion the clerk was instructed to draw orders for the same: Wm. Hayden Mill Co., feed, $2.52; Tec. Elec. Co., lights, $203; Floyd Freeman, ¼ cement, $5.61; C. H. Heck & Co., feed, $6.15; G. W. Jackson, repairs, $1.50; E. N. Satterthwaite, ¼ cement, $14.43.

On motion the council then adjourned to Tuesday evening, May 14, at 7 o'clock.

A STRENGTHENER

Vinol Promptly Overcomes Weakness.

DEBILITY OFTEN PRECEDES COMPLETE COLLAPSE.

We Want Every One to Know How to Get Strong.

OUR VINOL IS A STRENGTH CREATOR.

The saddest sight on earth is a broken-down man or woman.

We see such people every day right here in our city.

It is pitiful to see a man that should be in his prime dragging himself through life dejected, discouraged and broken down, due to some premature weakness. It does not make any difference whether this weakness is the result of dissipation, indiscreet living or disease; it can be overcome.

We have known of many very serious cases of debility quickly overcome by Vinol.

Vinol is a scientific rebuilder and strength creator. It contains the active curative principles of Cod-Liver Oil in a highly concentrated form. The benefit that can be derived from the use of these properties is so well known that there is no need for us to enter into that subject.

We could quote many instances where Vinol has done good; as an example, here is one coming from Jane S. Fenfren, a prominent member of the W. C. T. U., and a resident of Suncook, N. H. She writes:

"I was run down, was in bed from May to March. Was so nervous and sickly that every one thought I was in a most precarious condition. My weight was reduced to 120 pounds. I was advised to take Vinol, which I did, and am now very much better, and am able to be about again. As a rebuilder and a strength giver nothing can equal it. Vinol is a God-blessing to anybody."

Because Vinol is delicious, and because it does contain these much-sought-after medicinal properties we endorse it, and we unhesitatingly proclaim that it is better than any preparation of cod-liver oil or tonic rebuilder we have ever had in our store.

C. A. WRIGHT, Druggist.

Women are Like Flowers. Healthy and strong they blossom and bloom. Sickly, they wither and die. Every woman ought to look well and feel well. It's her right and duty, but she might as well try to put out a fire with oil as to be healthy and attractive with disease corroding the organs that make her a woman. Upon their health depends her health. If there is inflammation or weakening drains or suffering at the monthly period, attend to it at once. Don't delay. You're one step nearer the grave every day you put it off. Women can stand a great deal, but they cannot live forever with disease dragging at the most delicate and vital organs in their body. You may have been deceived in so-called cures. We don't see how you could help it—there is so much worthless stuff on the market. But you won't be disappointed in Bradfield's Female Regulator. We believe it is the one medicine on earth for womanly ills. There is as much difference between it and other so-called remedies as there is between right and wrong. Bradfield's Female Regulator soothes the pain, stops the drains, promotes regularity, strengthens, purifies and cleanses. It does all this quickly and easily and naturally. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. Bradfield's Regulator lies at hand. $1 per bottle at drug store.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good they can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonial free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

The Mayor Who Couldn't Spell "If."

During the several terms that Tim Campbell served in congress he was always prominent before the house. One of his colleagues from Manhattan was Colonel Jack Adams, who, a lawyer, while he and Mr. Campbell were in congress together spent most of his time working off practical jokes at the expense of the east side statesman. Tim had been in and out of Tammany Hall several times, those changes depending on whether his claims were recognized or repudiated.

A very hot political canvass found Tim one of the stanchest adherents of the Hall. Colonel Jack had had a falling out with the powers and was just as strong on the other side. Tim took this very much to heart, as his admiration for his fellow congressman was very strong. He concluded that, where all others had failed to bring Colonel Jack back into the fold, he (Tim) could succeed.

"Now, Jack," Tim said insinuatingly, "what do you want to go and fight the mayor for? Sure, he's a fine young fellow, bright and enterprising and one of the best educated men in America."

"Educated!" exclaimed Colonel Jack contemptuously. "Educated, did you say?"

"Sure, he's one of the very best educated young fellows in this city."

"Educated!" reiterated Adams, putting an extra dose of contempt into his voice. "What would you say, Tim, if I told you that he was so little educated that he spells 'if' with only one 'f'?"

"Does he do that?" responded Tim in a heartbroken tone.

"He does."

"Well, then, I have nothing further to say. I don't blame you."—Saturday Evening Post.

Dartmoor Superstitions.

In no part of England is superstition so rife as in the west of England, and especially so on that tract of barren land known as Dartmoor. One angler who had great luck on the river Dart discovered this last year. He made a big catch, but it was made on Easter Sunday. It consisted of 56 trout, the largest 1½ pounds and three of one pound each, besides several of half a pound, a phenomenal catch for the upper Dart. When he tried to have some cooked at the farmhouse where he was staying, the old moorland cook refused to have anything to do with them, deeming them "devil's fish" or "vishe," as she pronounced it.

Another superstition is that if one picks a piece of broom while fishing that one will assuredly be drowned before the day is out.

It is general for the moormen when doing a quiet poach when the streams are in flood to spit on their first worm for luck. It is thought unlucky to look into the water before making a cast. The most curious superstition is that if one is fishing and for some time catches nothing some one is wishing him ill, and the only way to counteract the "ill wishing" is to kneel or "sit on your knees," as they say on Dartmoor, and bite off the top of a young bracken fern. The fish then will be found to bite with most peculiar and surprising avidity.

Why He Was Deaf.

Scene: Stable of Scottish village inn. Landlord is busy repairing a piece of harness and is carrying on at the same time a conversation with the village blacksmith. Enter farmer.

Farmer—Look here, landlord. Can ye gie me a bottle o' yer best whisky?

Landlord—Weel, ye see, the horses are a' out, an I dinna ken when ony o' them'll be hame.

Farmer—It's no' a horse I want; it's a bottle o' whisky.

Landlord—Aye; but, ye see, they're a guid bit awa', an it'll be late before the first o' them's back.

Farmer (louder)—I tell ye, it's no' a horse, but a bottle o' whisky, I want.

Landlord—Weel, ye see, the beasts'll be tired, an—

Farmer—Gang awa' wi' ye an yer beasts!

Exit.

Blacksmith—Man, John, ye're gettin as deaf as a doorpost. It wasna' a horse, but a bottle o' whisky, the man was askin for.

Landlord—Ou, aye, I heard him fine, but he didn' pay for the last bottle he got.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Nice Family Mix Up.

A widower with a number of small children married a widow who was similarly blessed. In due time the newly married couple added to the number. Hearing a voice in the yard one day, the father went out to see what was the matter.

"Well, what was it?" asked his wife as he returned out of breath.

"Your children and my children were quarreling with our children," was the reply.—London Answers.

The Prayer He Didn't Make.

In a certain parish near Dumfries, Scotland, a newly made elder was summoned to the sickbed of a parishioner. Being naturally a bashful man, he was in great anxiety as to the "prayer he wad ha'e to pit up" and wished to avoid going altogether. At length he was persuaded by his wife and started on his errand. On his return his wife greeted him with the query:

"And how did ye get on, William?"

"Oh, grand! He was deid."

Hotel Life.

Jackson—What time do you wake up in the morning usually?

Jimson—Four o'clock.

"Great snakes! Why so early?"

"I board at a hotel, and that's the hour the man in the next room goes to bed."—New York Weekly.

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of This Old, Old Anecdote Will Save a Heap of Trouble And a Pile of Money.

Something has gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and some suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up a rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows:

Fixing engine	$ .50
Knowing how	10.00
	10.50

This anecdote clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works, at Marshall, Mich., residing in that city at No. 141 S. Marshall street tells in the following of his experience with the little conqueror; it will pay you to know how he got rid of a troublesome companion, he says:

"My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of the jarring of the train, and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacks of kidney complaint occurred I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by acquaintances, numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night, I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third, as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy."

A MAN AND HIS VIOLETS.

The Story of the Vivacious Maid Who Received the Flowers.

"Yes, it was a lovely bunch of violets," sighed the girl who received them, "but I wish they had never come to me. You see, it was this way: The man who sent them is one of those awfully nice fellows who bore you to death—the kind you feel so glad to see talking to some one else, don't you know," she ended appealingly.

"Well, on my birthday he sent that lovely bunch of violets—perfect beauties they were—with a dear little note to the effect that he had to go out of town, but would be represented by these little purple clad messengers, so like my eyes and whose fragrance always reminded him of me. I thought the note rather nice," she concluded pensively, "and put the flowers in the parlor on the center table, writing back that I had done so. Why in the world was I so prompt?" she wailed.

"It was no more than polite."

"Oh, much more! My dear, it is always idiotic to go into details like that. Well, he did not go out of town, but was 'fortunately' detained and came around after all to tell me so. And those wretched violets"—

"Surely they were all right?"

"I had loaned them to Annie to wear to the Blanks' dinner. Of course I had to tell him that the heat of the room was too great, and I had put them in the icebox. Just as he was going and I was congratulating myself on my escape in sailed that miserable girl, violets and all! If he had only gone, as he said he would, it would have been all right. Men are so unreliable!"—New York Mail and Express.

Life Saving Politeness.

Patriotism and politeness are great virtues, and a Japanese physician, Dr. Aoyama, owes his life to the fact that he possessed them both in high degree.

He had caught the plague and was dying for the need of the food which, in his delirium, he refused to take. His nurse was in despair, but finally conceived the idea of playing upon his patriotism by filling a glass with liquid nourishment and then offering to drink to the health of the mikado.

This was repeated until, ardent patriot as he was, the doctor felt that he had honored his sovereign enough.

Then his politeness was appealed to, the nurse proposing a toast and reproaching the sick man for not joining in it. In this way the patient's strength was maintained until the delirium subsided and he became convalescent.—Youth's Companion.

FR. PHILLIPS' DEATH.

Police Making a Searching Investigation Into the Cause.

New York, May 21.—Interest in the tragic death of Father Phillips of Hazelton, which had by no means subsided, was more acute yesterday by bringing to light in the Fotry-eighth street police station of a woman with auburn hair who answered the description of the woman whom the police have been looking for and who has been referred to as "Dr. Stanley's wife." She was closeted with Capt. Donahue for over four hours, and he then took her to lunch, after which the two went back to the station. The police took extraordinary means to keep the identity of the woman secret They even went to the extent of denying that she had anything to do with the case of Father Phillips. Late in the afternoon, however, Assistant District Attorney Garvan, who has charge of the case for the district attorney's office, was sent for and talked with the mysterious woman for an hour and a half. When he had finished the interview he said that the woman was the one Stanley had introduced as his wife and tnat she might be held as a witness in the case, but that he would not say so positively. He also said: "I am satisfied that this woman has nothing to do with the case. I shall not give her name because she comes from a very respectable family. I want to shield her because I believe in my heart that she had nothing to do with the case whatever. I questioned her and am satisfied she knows nothing about it."

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY.

Arrangements Hinge on Mrs. McKinley's Rapid Improvement.

San Francisco, May 21.—Secretary Hay and other members of the cabinet will remain with the president until Mrs. McKinley shall be able to travel, when they will all go east together. The physicians have not yet been able to fix a date when Mrs. McKinley will be strong enough to take the trip, but a week is their present approximation.

The president has promised to talk to the Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth infantry regiments, U. S. V., who have just returned from the Philippines and are now in camp at the Presidio. The day has not yet been set, but the president has promised that he will notify Gen. Shafter the night before he intends to make the promised speech. He will go out to the Presidio and the troops will assemble in camp before him.

At 9 p. m. last night Secretary Cortelyou gave out the following statement: "Drs. Hirschfelder and Gibbons met Dr. Rixey at 8:30 p. m. They find that Mrs. McKinley's improvement has continued throughout the day and her condition is excellent. Drs. Hirschfelder, Gibbons and Cushing will meet Dr. Rixey at 11:30 a.m. today."

GEN. MacARTHUR CELEBRATED

The Surrender of Noted Filipino Generals Yesterday.

Manila, May 21.—Gen. MacArthur celebrated the surrenders of the insurgent generals Mascardo and Lacuna by releasing 1,000 Filipino prisoners. Gen. Moxia, the insurgent chief on the island of Leyte, has surrendered with 20 men, the remnnnt of his command.

The president of the island of Lubang, which lies not..west of the island of Mindoro, has been arrested and brought to Cavite, cnarged with being an accomplice of the insurgents. Gen. Trias has started on his visit to the insurgent leader Bellarmino, who is operating in the province of Albay in southern Luzon. Trias will try to induce Bellarmino to surrender. Congressman Hall leaves Manila today for Zamboanga. He expresses himself as pleased with conditions here.

AD VALAREM TAX LAW

After Much Worry It Will Get to the Governor in a Compromise Form.

CORPORATIONS THAT ARE TAXED

Its Passage Will Mark Practically the End of the Law-Making Work —Legislative Comment.

Lansing, Mich., May 21.—It appears, after all, that it is occasionally possible to predict with reasonable accuracy the actions of a legislature or sections thereof, for my estimate of last week as to the probable action of the conference committee on the railroad tax bill proves to have been quite near the mark. The bill agreed upon by the committees representing the two houses provides an ad valorem tax for railroads, union station and depot companies, express, car loaning, refrigerator and fast freight line companies. The corporations that were included in the Chandler bill as passed by the house, but which are not covered by the conference committee draft, are telephone, telegraph and sleeping car companies. The elimination of these three companies is regarded as a victory for the senate, while the house is supposed to have scored in defeating the senate's proposition that an entirely new and distinct assessing board be created, the bill providing that the assessing of the property of the corporations affected shall be done by the state tax commission, whose membership shall be increased from three to five. Although quite a number of the members of the house are opposed to this compromise, there is little doubt that it will be accepted by that body after its consideration as a special order. This prediction is based on the vote of last Thursday on the question of making the bill a special order for today. The friends of the bill were opposed to this motion, as a rule, their plan being to have the report of the conference committee concurred in without any delay whatever. Although they were defeated in this, the vote showed forty-three in favor of immediate action, and there is believed to be no doubt whatever that more than eight of the representatives who voted for postponement are prepared to vote for the bill as amended when it comes down to brass tacks, as it were.

A large majority of the senators are simply waiting for an opportunity to vote for the report, but will not have a chance to do so until after the house has taken action, the report of the conference committee not having been submitted to the upper house.

Very Little Other Work Probable.

With this bill disposed of, the work of the session will be practically ended, for while there are still a very large number of bills on the calendar there are none that the state cannot just as well get along without. There will be a grand rush on the part of the statesmen to get their pet measures through, but many of them will be disappointed, for a great majority of the bills remaining unacted upon will die with the session. Just when the session will end has not been determined, but it is certain that active work on the part of the two houses will come to an end within a very few days. It will then be necessary to allow ten days in which to have the bills passed during the closing hours enrolled, signed by the presiding officers and presented to the governor for his signature, so it will be early in June before the gavel falls for the last time during the regular session of 1901.

Law to Tax Mortgages.

After much cutting and fitting the two houses finally agreed upon a mortgage tax law, the measure passed being the Lowry-Ward combination with some minor changes. A statement of the provisions of the bill as they appear in legal form would probably confuse rather than enlighten the average reader, so it may be said that the new law practically exempts real estate mortgages from taxation. This is not done in express terms, but that will be the practical working out of the enactment.

Both Parties Are Satisfied.

The Randall and Nevins bills affecting the tax levy for the support of the university and agricultural college, respectively, came together in the house last week, and the result was satisfactory to the friends of both institutions. The Randall bill sought to reduce from one-fourth to one-sixth of a mill the annual tax levy for the support of the university, and it was reported out by the university committee only after its author had threatened to delay all egislation by insisting upon his right to have every bill considered read in full if a report was not forthcoming. Then the friends of both institutions joined forces and turned in and defeated it by a decisive majority. The university people displayed considerable foxiness in having their bill acted upon first, for it enabled them to serve notice on the farmers that if the revenue of the university was reduced they would see to it that the Nevins bill, which provides a one-tenth mill tax for the support of the agricultural college, was sent to the morgue. Having compassed the defeat of the Randall bill, the supporters of the university turned in and helped pass the agricultural college measure by a big vote. The latter bill limits the annual revenue of the college to $100,000, making provision that if the one-tenth mill tax at any time yields more than this sum, the excess shall be turned into the general fund of the state. Heretofore the college has been obliged to make a fight in the legislature every two years for an appropriation. This bill will enable the managers to know in advance just what amount of money it will have to use. The bill will doubtless pass the senate.

An Additional Normal School.

The Kelly-Lugers' bill making an appropriation for an additional normal school, the location of which shall be open to the state, the site to be selected by the state board of education, is now in the hands of Governor Bliss, and there is considerable speculation as to what he will do with it. The department of public instruction insists that the additional school is needed, but there are other very well informed educators who as strenuously maintain that there is room in the three normal schools already in operation for at least 30 per cent. more pupils than are in attendance. Another argument against the bill is that if increased accommodations are needed, they can be provided at one of the present institutions at 25 per cent. the cost of establishing a new school. The fate of the bill will be watched with interest.

Salary of the State Auditors' Board.

Another bill about whose fate there is some doubt is that which provides an annual salary of $1,800 for each member of the board of state auditors, in addition to the salary provided in the constitution. It had always been supposed that this constitutional salary was all that these officials could receive unless the people of the state saw fit to amend the constitution, and several ineffectual attempts have been made to persuade the people to grant an increase. The theory on which the present bill was passed by the two houses is that it provides compensation for services which were not contemplated by the constitution at the time that document was adopted, but which have been imposed upon the auditors by succeeding legislatures. Attorney General Oren gave the legislature an opinion to the effect that the bill is constitutional, and the attitude of that official secured the passage of the measures. Lawyers in the legislature, however, argued that the constitution provides that the state officers named therein shall perform such duties as the law shall prescribe, and argued from this that it was impossible to impose upon them duties that would not be covered by the consti-

Bills Pending in the Senate.

All the apportionment bills have passed the house and are now pending in the senate. The congressional apportionment, which is the one of greatest interest, re-enacts the present law, no changes whatever being made in existing districts. Owing to the uncertainty of Jackson county's Republicanism, an effort was made by the Second district to unload the county onto the Third district in exchange for Hillsdale county, but the representatives of the Third district opposed and defeated the change. By the terms of the representative apportionment bill the counties of Saginaw, Bay, St. Clair, Eaton, Ionia, Macomb, Monroe. Montcalm, Muskegon and Sinilac will each lose one member of the lower house, while Wayne will gain two and Houghton one. Separate districts are made of the counties of Alpena, Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Chippewa, Delta, Dickinson, Emmet, Gogebic, Grand Traverse, Midland and Osceola, each of which is now combined with some other county or counties in forming a district. The basis of the apportionment is one representative for each 24,200 of population, and one for each county having a fraction more than a majority were made in the present senatorial districts. There was some shifting of territory in Kent county, Arenac county is taken from the Twenty-fourth district and attached to the Twenty-eighth, Benzie from the Twenty-seventh to Twenty-sixth, Baraga from Thirty-second to Thirty-first, and Mackinac from Thirtieth to Twenty-ninth. Some ambitious senators who figure that changes in congressional districts might give them a better show for breaking into congress are not very well satisfied with the failure to change the congressional districts, and they threaten to defeat the senatorial and representative bills, saying that "as the congressmen have succeeded in defeating any change in their districts, thereby perpetuating themselves in office, the proper thing to do is to leave all the districts in the state just as they are."

They Fell Upon That Bill.

The farmers in the house fell on Senator Palmer's bill providing for a money instead of a labor tax for the improvement of highways, and killed it by a vote of nearly two to one. The fight on the bill was led by Representative Alward, president of the legislative farmers' clubs. His main argument was that the bill would defeat the present local option system which permits townships to levy a money tax at the annual meeting if a majority of the taxpayers see fit to do so. In behalf of the bill it was urged that the present labor system results in a most shiftless and ineffectual care of the highways.

And No Gore Spilt, Either.

The much discussed garnishee bill has now passed both houses, and that. too, without bloodshed. As finally agreed to it exempts from garnishment $8 of the weekly wages of householder and also 80 per cent of all additional up to $30, and $4 per week of the wages of a single person.

Hits the Fly-by-Night Merchant Hard.

Fly-by-night merchants are hard hit by the Schumaker bill which needs only the signature of the governor to become a law. The bill requires these merchants who have been wont to go from place to place conducting "fire sales," "bankrupt sales" and the like to make a special deposit with the secretary of state for a license to continue in force one year, the fee for which is $25. Only one license can be issued to the same person. In addition to this cities and villages in which the merchant does business are to have a lien against this deposit for the amount of any unpaid portion of the tax levied for the privilege of doing business therein, such tax to be on the basis of the tax rate of the locality. A severe penalty is provided for untruthful advertisments or announcements as to the character of the sale.

Earle Persists and Succeeds.

Nothing daunted by the failure of his joint resolution providing for the submission to the people of a proposed good roads amendment to the constitution, Senator Earle has secured the adoption of a concurrent resolution providing for the appointment by the governor of a commission to consist of two senators, three representatives and two members of the state board of agriculture whose duty it shall be to investigate the subject of highway improvement in Michigan and recommend to the next legislature some plan for a general system of highway improvement.

JAMES V. BARRY.

The Servant Problem In Mexico.

"You foreigners," says a Mexican woman quoted by a correspondent of the Boston Transcript, "are so silly with servants. You come here and exclaim, 'How awfully the Mexicans treat their servants!' and then you give them iron beds and mattresses stuffed with wool, where with us they have to lie down to sleep on their straw mats, as is best for them. You think it nice to give them ribbons for their hair and neck, and some of you put the women in corsets and make them wear caps and aprons! This turns the heads of the young women, and they think they are real senoras (ladies) and grow impudent. That is how you spoil our servants, who, when they get angry with us, talk up loudly and say they will go and live in a foreign family! Ah, you foreigners are so shortsighted. Soon you will see how there are no more good, loyal, old fashioned servants! You pet a race which needs firmness and discipline, real kindness, not pampering."

The North Pole.

The north pole is the mathematical point at the northern termination of the earth's axis. Whether land or water be there the phenomena of the sun during the polar day or of the stars during the night would indicate its position.

A SLICK SWINDLER

Who Got Out of Jackson By a Little Confidence Game

NOW ON HIS WAY BACK THERE

Since Leaving Jackson the Swindler Has Been Operating in Other Localities With a Good Measure of Success.

Jackson, Mich., May 21.—Deputy Warden A. C. Northup of the state prison is en route from St. Louis, Mo., to Jackson prison with John R. Davis, aged 42, one of the slickest swindlers in the country. He succeeded in getting out of prison last winter by the same sort of confidence game which sent him to prison from Detroit on Aug. 2, 1899.

In Detroit his scheme was the organization of a large stock company to organize a hotel resort near Detroit. It was capitalized at $250,000, and Davis succeeded in getting enough victims interested to permit him to sell stock and pocket the money. He was convicted of embezzling $50 and was sentenced to five years at Jackson in the recorder's court.

When ex-Gov. Pingree was busy last winter raising the gates of Jackson prison, Davis planned to get out the front gate. He first interested a prison guard, claiming he had $20,000 in a safety deposit vault in Baltimore. As an evidence of good faith he showed the keys to the private drawer where the money was locked up. He also showed to several Jackson attorneys who were callers at tne prison, a New York draft for $60,000, and claimed his corresponding deposit was in a bank at Weston, W. Va. It was nearing the close of Pingree's term and any effort for freedom must be made quickly. The prison guard, a Jackson attorney and a Detroit attorney close to Pingree made a deal with Davis, which promised them big pay for their services.

It resulted in Davis' sentence being commuted to two years and six months and a parole was granted him. His time under the arrangement would expire Oct. 26 next. The Jackson attorney and Detroit attorney were kept waiting by Davis until finally, last February he disappeared. They sent the prison guard to Baltimore with the keys to the safety deposit vault to obtain the $20,000. It is related that when the keys were presented the clerk looked through the grates at the guard and said:

"Young man, I am sorry for you," and passing back the keys, which were as big as barn keys, "you are not the only one. How much are you out?"

At the time Davis fled from Michigan he had retained a Jackson attorney at Battle Creek, getting an option on land for a proposed $30,000 business block. Since then he has been operating in Louisiana and Missouri.

The prison officials advertised in detective papers exclusively, which led to his arrest at St. Louis, Mo.

Final Adjournment June 5.

Lansing, Mich., May 21.—The indications last night were that the legislature will not finally quit work this week. Some of the legislators say both houses will not suspend operations before a week from Wednesday. Rep. Rulison of the upper peninsula said last night:

"In my opinion, the legislature will not quit work until Thursday noon, May 30, with final adjournment about June 5."

It is likely the much amended Chandler ad valorem tax bill will be passed by both houses today.

Distinguished Citizen Dead.

Monroe, Mich., May 21.—James Sisung of Frenchtown died Monday morning at the residence of his son Dr. V. Sisung, in this city. Deceased was born near Sourbourg, Lorraine, France, March 8, 1821. He was a descendant of a family which figured prominently in French history, and was a relative of Count De Loban, a marshal of France under Napoleon, and chief organizer of the French army during the "Hundred Days." A number of his cousins were officers in the Franco-Prussian war, ranking from captains to brigadier generals. Another distant relative died a commissioned officer in the army of Rochambeau in the siege of Yorktown.

Honors to the Dead Statesman.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 21.—The remains of the late ex-Ambassador Edwin F. Uhl lay in state in St. Paul's church from noon to 2 o'clock yesterday, and during that time were viewed by thousands. The Episcopal ritual was used at the funeral service. Prominent members of the bar from this and other states were in attendance The remains will be taken to Ypsilanti today and interred in the family lot there. All the local and United States courts and banks of the city were closed during the afternoon in respect to the memory of the deceased.

A Useful Citizen Dead.

Detroit, Mich., May 21.—Louis Henness, aged 71, died Sunday at his residence, 219 Antoine street, the result of an operation performed for an enlarged gland in his abdomen. Mr. Henness was born in Westphalia, Germany, where he resided until 1854, after which he came to America. Mr Henness lived in Detroit the rest of his life. He owned stores at Calumet, Lake Linden, Houghton and other points in the upper peninsula, which were conducted by his sons.

Funeral of an Old Printer.

Detroit, Mich., May 21.—There was a big turnout of members of the typographical union at the funeral of the late secretary - treasurer, George Thorpe, Sunday. The pallbearers were C. O. Bryce, John Drew, Joseph A. Labadie, James H. Walker, Thomas Parent and A. H. Smith. A delegation of printers from Lansing attended, and the floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

The Way to Win Strength.

The Romans won their empire by attacking their enemies one by one. Besides this, they did not attack a new enemy until they had conquered the old enemy. They went farther still and like the English in conquering India used their late enemies, and this is what we should do in learning and practicing games and athletics. It is of little use to try to conquer the whole empire at once. First conquer a part and make it your own. Then proceed to a second part and conquer that; and, if you can, let the parts which you have already conquered help you to conquer fresh parts.—Eustace H. Mills in Saturday Evening Post.

BURGLARIES IN FLINT.

One Man Brought to Bay With a Gun and Locked Up.

Flint, Mich., May 21.—For the second time this year thieves forced the front door of St. Michael's Catholic church Sunday night and stole a gold ciborium valued at $50. The disfigured remains of the vessel were found yesterday morning under a pile of ties in the Grand Trunk yards. Proceeding to the Presbyterian church the burglars pried the door of the pastor's study and smashed open a contribution box, stationed at the main entrance, but got nothing, as the treasurer had removed the contents after the services Sunday night.

The residence of Clayton Jones was also burglarized. Mrs. Jones waking to find a man removing the gold buttons from her waist. The thief raised a window in her room and with a garden rake hauled the garment to him. She gave the alarm and he made off. Next a visit was paid to Hunt's grocery, Richfield road, near the Grand Trunk tracks. The thieves opened a tool chest in the Webster Vehicle factory and obtained a chisel which was used to pry the door to Hunt's store.

Hunt lives across the street and heard the commotion. He grabbed a gun and started to investigate. Meeting a man in the middle of the road, he captured and held him until the police arrived and took him to jail where he gave his name as Van Barry, and said he arrived on a freight train from Battle Creek. The chisel was found in the road where he was caught and it is suspected he committed all the thefts reported. This is the sixth time Hunt's store has been burglarized this year.

STAR WITNESS

Will Appear Before Grand Rapids Grand Jury.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 21.—The star witness before the grand jury yesterday was McGeorge Bundy, who for a short time was attorney for E. K. Garman, one of the principals in the water works promotion scheme. He gave the jury a detailed account of the water enterprise, reinforced with documentary evidence.

Other witnesses were Rep. David E. Burns, Dan Malcolm, Lon Gould, S. S. Bailey, Guy Sintz and E. F. Gorham. T. F. McGarry, said to have been one of the local promoters and who has been out of town most of the time since the Salsbury episode, returned Monday and will go before the grand jury. Willard Kingsley, attorney for the hydraulic company, has also returned, and it is expected E. H. Garman will appear this week.

KILLED HER CHILDREN

But Was Unsuccessful in Getting Away With Herself.

St. Louis, Mich., May 21.—Sarah wife of Elmer Quimby, a farmer, living five miles south of this city, gave her two children, a girl aged 9 and a boy 7 years old, each eight grains of morphine, about 11 o'clock Sunday night. She had to give the girl a second dose at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Both children died at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Quimby says she took 18 grains herself, but the dose was too large. Family trouble is assigned. The children were by her first husband. She is under arrest on a charge of murder.

Threw Vitriol in His Face.

Romeo, Mich., May 2..—Dr. Charles A. Spencer yesterday morning threw the contents of a vial containing oil of vitriol at the head of Attorney J. L. Starkweather, severely burning the right side of the attorney's face and chest. Had the dose struck him in the face he would undoubtedly have lost the use of his eyes. Spencer's wife recently commenced suit for divorce and Starkweather was her attorney. The assaulter was taken to the Mt. Clemens jail. Starkweather is 56 years of age, a graduate of the University of Michigan, and is one of the best known lawyers in this section of the state.

Drowned While Fishing.

Muskegon, Mich., May 21.—Andrew Russia, Stephen Balog and Charles Messer were fishing in Mona lake, when their boat was capsized. Messer clung to the boat and was rescued but the other two went down at once. Mrs Russia, on learning of the death of her husband, rushed to the lake and threw herself in with suicidal intent. A fisherman cast his line toward her and caught her by the hair, holding her up until she could be taken from the water. Twice after that she attempted to jump in again, but was prevented by friends. It is feared she will lose her mind.

Amalgamated Association.

Milwaukee, May 21.—The wage committee of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tinworkers held two sessions yesterday, but report is not quite ready for presentation to the convention, which meets today. It is not likely the convention will get down to secret work until Wednesday. Nearly all of the 250 delegates to the convention reached Milwaukee last evening.

An Extraordinary Request.

London, May 21.—The Marchioness of Anglesy yesterday made a somewhat remarkable application to Sir Francis Jeune, president of the divorce division of the high court of justice, asking the court to rescind the divorce granted her Nov. 7 last. Justice Jeune characterized the whole case as a most extraordinary one and decided to hear the application in camera May 13d.

Boers Are On the Move.

Cape Town, May 21.—Eight hundred Boers have crossed the Orange river from the northwest and have reinforced the commandoes in the eastern district. The latest reliable report locates Dewet near Philippolis, in Orange River colony, and not far from the Cape line, with 40 horsemen. All the commandoes in the Orange River colony have instructions to cross the Orange river. Several British patrols have been ambushed.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." A Prediction.

When the plans of Gov. Pingree to procure equal taxation in Michigan were defeated, he said, "I will live to see the day when the people of the state of Michigan will say, 'Pingree was right; he started the movement in Michigan to make railroads pay their share of the taxes and they are now paying them.'"

It seems that in other states than Michigan this idea of the railroads paying their just proportion of the taxes is beginning to gain favor. In Wisconsin both political parties made great promises before election about forcing the railroads to pay their share of the tax, but since that time nothing could be done.

The state tax commission, appointed by the legislature of 1899 upon demands of the friends of the railroads, reported that the railroads were paying only half the tax assessed upon farms and merchants and home property and, in spite of this report and the party pledges, a bill to increase railroad taxation from 4 to 5 per cent. on gross earnings was passed by the Assembly, was promptly turned down by the Senate. In order to supply needed revenue, the legislature voted to tax dogs from one to three dollars and Gov. LaFollette promptly vetoed the bill, saying, "The tax imposed may not be a serious burden in itself, but it will add to the burdens borne by a great majority of the people which are already out of proportion to those paid by people who it seems are much more potent in shaping legislation."

Gov. LaFollette is right. The railroads should pay their just proportion of the tax and it will not be long before the members of the legislature will see that the people demand honest action in this matter.

Less than six months ago the Lake Shore road reduced the fares in Michigan to two cents per mile and last week the Wabash did likewise. It will not be long before all the roads will have to do likewise, and this can be traced directly to the work of Gov. Pingree. In many respects Pingree was an old fool, but the roduction of the fares of these two railroads has done the people of Michigan more good than can be traced to the work of all its governors since the time of Gov. Bagley.

THE HOTEL CHECK PROBLEM

A Question of Whether to Offend Guests or Risk Losing Money.

The hotel clerk was standing behind the desk, with a disconsolate look on his face.

"What's the matter?" asked a friend.

"Matter?" said the clerk. "Why, it's the same old story. I've been stuck for another check. This check business causes us hotel clerks more trouble than anything else in the world. There is a general rule in hotels that no checks shall be cashed, but very often travelers run short of money. It is good business policy to cash these checks when you can be sure that they're all right. No hotel can afford to be continually offending guests. At the same time, if a clerk cashes a bad check he has to stand the loss.

"The average hotel clerk has learned by bitter experience to be a pretty good judge of human nature, but every now and then he slips up. Only a week ago a big, splendid looking fellow came to me and got me to cash a check for $20. I sized him up and decided that he was all right and that he was a good man to keep among the steady patrons of the hotel. A few days later back came the check, with 'No funds' marked across it. The result was that I was out $20."

While the clerk was talking a swagger looking woman came up to the desk and, smiling sweetly at the clerk, said:

"Will you please cash this little check?"

The clerk was all graciousness. He took the check and examined it carefully without saying anything.

"Oh, it's all right," said the woman, "Of course, if you don't want to cash it you needn't. Mr. So-and-so knows me quite well, and you can telephone him about it if you want to, but it would save me a great deal of trouble if you could cash it for me now."

"Certainly, madam," said the clerk, and then he went over and held a consultation with the cashier.

They decided that the woman was a good investment and gave her the money. She went away smiling, and then the clerk said:

"Now, there is just about an even money chance. If I hadn't cashed that check, she would have been highly insulted and would have talked about this hotel as long as she could remember. If she is all right, she will be a good customer, but if she isn't I am out another $25."—New York Sun.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

The recruits brought to Ransom by Lieutenant Rawson were for distribution to those troops of the regiment most in need of new blood, and, as luck would have it, these were all of the battalion at Fort Fred Winthrop, an outlying post close to the now crowded reservation of the Sioux. Thither had Atherton ordered Rawson without delay of a day, partly because recruits were needed, but mainly because the lieutenant showed symptoms of an oncoming attack of a bibulous character, and Atherton would have none of that in his garrison. Rawson was ordered northward forthwith and marched with his Johnny Raws at dawn next day, and, except for the voice of one crying in the wilderness that the party had looted the groggery of Laramie Pete at the Dry Fork of the Ska, nothing more was heard of them till they joined at Winthrop, none the worse for their wintry march. Ray had looked over the array and decided that he could afford to wait and pick for himself. Sergeant Kearney had gone back to the recruiting depot. The regimental adjutant had been designated as recruiting officer at the station and had disdainfully rejected one after another half a dozen seedy looking tramps, when one day, perhaps the fifth after their arrival at the post, the sergeant major put his handsome head into the office, followed it in, carefully shut the door behind him, stood scrupulously at attention and hemmed behind his hand to attract his superior's notice.

Mr. Dana looked up from the tangled mass of figures at the foot of his regimental return, laid down his pen and said, "Well?"

"Will the adjutant see a man that wants to enlist?"

"Not if he's like the lot that have been here so far."

"He isn't, sir, but I don't know about him."

"What's the matter? I haven't time to waste if he isn't good enough to suit us." And Dana glanced out along the wooden porch as though in search of the would be trooper.

"He's good enough, I don't doubt, sir," said the sergeant major, a half smile breaking about the corners of his mouth, "as far as looks go, but I never knew fellows like this one to enlist that didn't have something wrong with 'em, and he says he wants to take on with Captain Ray."

"He'll take on where we see fit to put him," said Dana, with the dogmatism of the service. "Let's see the gentleman who wants to dictate where he'll go."

So the sergeant major opened the door, jerked his head backward in encouragement to the invisible party in the outer office and said, "Come in!"

There stepped quickly into the room a young man about 6 feet tall, erect and athletic in build and carriage, with a fine, clear cut, frank face, crowned with a crop of curly, close cut, light brown hair, with very deep blue eyes, large and clear, under heavy brows and thick, long, curling lashes, a curly blond mustache sweeping out at the ends and barely hiding the curve of his handsomely chiseled lips, chin and jaws cleanly shaved, throat powerful, open and bare, for the rolling collar of a brand new blue flannel shirt was confined only by a loosely knotted tie of silk. The coat he wore was a sort of double breasted pea jacket of dark blue beaver, now thrown open in deference to the warmth of the room, but the first significant if not suspicious thing the young man did as he entered was to begin buttoning it throughout. Snugly fitting trousers of dark blue, belted at the waist, stout, slender, well made shoes and a soft black crush hat completed his attire. As Dana looked at him in some surprise the newcomer brought his heels together, and between him and the foremost noncommissioned officer in the —th the expert eye could hardly have told which was the more soldierly in build and carriage.

For a moment no one spoke. It was Dana who finally broke silence.

"Why—you've served before."

"Only in a militia regiment, sir."

"Where?"

"In New York city."

The adjutant had a dozen more questions on the tip of his tongue, and the visitor saw it.

"I have answered that, sir, because I presume I have to account for standing attention, but there are many questions that may occur to you that I do not wish to answer. If I may speak with Captain Ray, I think I can satisfy him without going into particulars."

Dana whipped his wooden chair around and squarely confronted the speaker. That he was a man of education and social position in the past, at least, Dana saw at a glance, and just as quickly did the companion thought flash across his mind, "Another case of the prodigal son." Incredulity as to the motives of a man in enlisting in those days was not confined to the rank and file.

"Captain Ray may or may not be satisfied, but in either event, as recruiting officer of the regiment, I have to be," said the young officer, with a touch of asperity in his tone. It was not good to his ears to be told that a would be recruit declined to answer questions.

The newcomer, far from looking disconcerted, smiled affably and frankly. His blue eyes twinkled, his white teeth gleamed. "The best looking scapegrace that ever came to us. Confound his impudence for grinning," said Dana to himself.

"That is why I wish to speak with Captain Ray, sir," said the civilian. "He might be able to satisfy you when I, probably, could not."

"I don't know how you make that out," said Dana, curiosity betraying him into a half argument with the applicant, which Dana very well knew was infra dig.

"Possibly Captain Ray will explain it," was the answer, and the serenity of the applicant remained unruffled.

"Oh, very well," said Dana, nettled in spite of his better nature. "Go see Captain Ray if you wish."

But even as he spoke the hall door opened and in burst Major Mainwaring. There is no other way of describing the major's method of entering a room. It has been said that he was blunt both in speech and in action. A soldier for years of his life, no amount of domestic polish had ever succeeded in smoothing off the rough edges of the camp. Mainwaring prided himself on being direct in everything he said and did. Men and women who knew him well knew there was a mine of genuine kindness and goodness under the rugged surface. Men and women who heard him speak for the first time declared him a brute.

"Man wants to enlist, sir," was the reply.

Now, Mainwaring was not the recruiting officer of the regiment. He was in nowise responsible for their selection. He had been but a few months a member of the regiment himself, having, as has been explained, been promoted to it from another when Major Barry became lieutenant colonel, but it was a peculiarity of Mainwaring's that he considered it his inalienable right to have a say in everything going on, and it wasn't so much what he said as how he said it that made it obnoxious. He scowled at the very presentable newcomer as though words were inadequate to express his disapprobation, then gruffly demanded:

"Where you from?"

A flush went up to the forehead of the young man, and there was an instant's hesitation, then in a very quiet tone he replied, "The east."

Major Mainwaring was studying him sharply, a suspicious light in his black eyes. "Haven't I seen you before?" he presently asked, the words tumbling all over one another's heels.

"Not out here, certainly," was the tempered reply, though the blue eyes were firing up and looking square into the kindling black.

"Do you mean to tell me you haven't been in service before?" The major's precipitate style of questioning left barely time for answer.

But the civilian took his time and chose his words. "I do not mean to tell you—anything, sir."

For a moment Mainwaring simply glared as though he could not realize the full significance of the words.

"What in thunder do you mean by that?" he finally growled.

"Just what I have said, sir," was the reply. "Five minutes ago I wished to enlist in this regiment; now I don't. Good day to you, gentlemen." And, to the speechless amaze of the sergeant major, the suppressed delight of Dana and the profane astonishment of Mainwaring, he calmly walked past the two officers, replacing his hat as he did so, and stalked deliberately into the hallway and out of the front door.

"Well, of all the chip on the shoulder specimens I ever saw," loudly laughed Mainwaring, "that fellow beats the lot. What do you s'pose fired him off so? I hadn't begun to say anything to him. The man's a dash dashed double dashed liar, and I know it. I've seen him somewhere before, and he knows it, and he's afraid to show up again and took the first excuse to get off. That man's a dash dashed deserter or a horse thief or something. He knows me and didn't know of my promotion to this regiment or my being here. You are well rid of him, Dana. He'll never show up at Ransom again."

But he did, for just two days later Captain Ray came cheerily into the office with enlistment papers in his hand. "Dana, old boy, I've got a tiptop man to be sworn in. This way, please, Hunter." And there at the doorway stood the applicant of two days before.

Dana glanced over the papers. "Arthur Hunter, born New York, by occupation a clerk, do hereby acknowledge to have voluntarily enlisted this sixth day of November, 188–, as a soldier in the army of the United States, etc., and do solemnly swear that I am 25 years and 7 months of age, etc., and I, Arthur Hunter, do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America, etc."

Then Dana looked up at the dark eyes and curling black mustache and animated face of one of the crack captains in the regiment and from him to the silent, blue eyed and, as before, thoroughly presentable stranger, and there was embarrassment in the adjutant's face. For a moment he hesitated, then turned to the would be recruit.

"Will you step outside a moment? I have to speak with Captain Ray."

He was instantly obeyed.

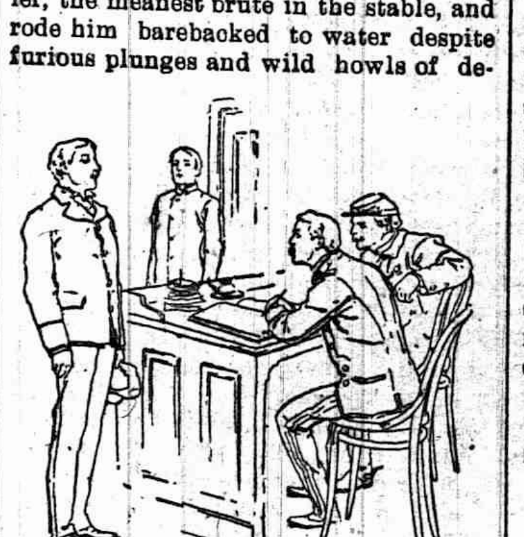
"I beg your pardon, captain," said Dana, "but I have to ask a question or two. Major Mainwaring is sure he has seen this man before and that he is a deserter or something disreputable despite his good looks. He refused to answer for himself two days ago."

"Yes, I know," answered Ray smilingly. "We all know how suave and encouraging the major is apt to be to strangers. It's a wonder some wild westerner hasn't put a bullet through him. I've heard all about that interview."

"And — you're willing to take chances? You're satisfied this man's all right?"

"All right as men go, Dana. We can't expect all the 'vartues and timperance besides for $13 a month,' as Mulligan said in the Mexican war. But this applicant satisfies me that he means to serve, that he loves a horse and can ride like a Kentuckian. I'll bet he can fight, and it's none of our business who he is, where he hails from or why he enlisted so long as he does his duty. Now I'm willing to take him."

And that settled it. Recruit Arthur Hunter was formally accepted as a member of the sorrel troop, took his first lesson with the currycomb and brush without a word, and, "without turning a hair," his initiation on Buckler, the meanest brute in the stable, and rode him barebacked to water despite furious plunges and wild howls of delight from threescore trooper throats. Furthermore, Hunter accepted barrack fare without remark and barrack chaff without remonstrance, and when 48 hours elapsed and his captain asked him how he liked it the new trooper clicked his heels together and said, "Better than I hoped to, sir," and then surprised that officer by a request to be allowed to be absent until next day. Etiquette required that such favors should be asked through the first sergeant in writing. The colonel's consent had also to be given, but Hunter produced in explanation a telegram received but half an hour before stables. That dispatch was addressed properly to Trooper A. Hunter, Fort Ransom, and said: "Must move tonight. Will bring your things on No. 3," and it came from Pawnee.



Recruit Arthur Hunter was formally accepted.

Captain Ray looked it over in some uncertainty. "What things are these?" he asked.

"A trunk, sir, and some other property, principally clothing."

Colonel Atherton did not look overpleased at the application of Captain Ray for permission for a new recruit to be absent overnight, but Ray was a favorite. Sergeant Merriweather was going to Butte on pass after supper. Recruit Hunter could go with him in the post trader's wagon. Ray felt sure of his man, and the colonel consented.

And so it happened that Merriweather's pretty wife, the invalid of a fortnight agone, was surprised by the sight of a tall, very fine looking young man, in a new fatigue suit not yet altered to fit him, who appeared at the doorway of her little abode shortly after gun fire and asked for the sergeant.

"He'll be here directly. Surely this must be Mr. Hunter," said she, dusting a chair and looking up at him from under her long lashes. "You'll come in and wait, won't you?" she added invitingly. But Hunter thanked her briefly and said he'd go to the store, which he did, with her bright eyes following him in lively curiosity.

It was midnight when Sergeant Merriweather, driving in, reported his return at the guardhouse and found the officer of the day and half the guard searching busily about the premises in hopes of discovering by what means two general prisoners had sawed their way out of their iron barred room. The rest of the guard were in pursuit. It was a night of excitement and disgust for most of them, and they were all wide awake and eager for news when, at the break of day, there came galloping out from Butte the local agent of the Transcontinental, with a startling story. Train No. 3, "The Owl," the Pacific express, had been held up by robbers about an hour earlier, just east of Ska bridge. Jimmy Long, engineer of 783, was badly shot. His fireman was killed. The robbers, nearly a dozen in number, had terrorized the train hands, got everything there was in the safe, in the mail car and, among the passengers in the day coach and sleeper and had then ridden off northwestward across the Ska. They were heading for the Dry Fork. The sheriff was trying to raise a posse in town, but it was slow work. For God's sake, couldn't the cavalry go in pursuit?

VISITORS NOT WANTED.

People Who Want to See Greenland Must Get a Royal Permit.

Greenland is governed in a grandmotherly way by Denmark; but, as it consists of a group of colonies which would not under any circumstances attract many tourists or traders, no outsider complains of the exclusiveness of the Danish authorities. Trade always has been and still is monopolized by the state, and only government vessels are allowed to sail in Greenland waters. For foreign travelers also Greenland is a closed country unless the traveler in question has beforehand obtained the rare distinction of gaining the permission of the Danish government.

The monopoly of the trade is said to protect the Greenlander from being deceived by unscrupulous merchants. The administration settles a fixed price both for the goods the Greenlanders purchase and for the products they sell. In this way all are treated in the same manner, and the business being carried on by the state is a guarantee that the natives are not imposed upon.

Furthermore, the members of the administration are enjoined to take care that the natives do not leave themselves short of produce by selling more than they can dispense with, so that they are destitute of needful food and clothing when the slack time arrives. The native Greenlander never has been, neither is he now, able to purchase a single drop of spirits from the administration.

The exchange of goods between Greenland and Denmark is, as a rule, carried on exclusively by means of the nine vessels belonging to the Greenland company — viz. five brigs, three barks and a small steamer having a total register of about 2,000 tons net. Several of these vessels, which are suitable for sailing through the drift ice, make two voyages a year and the steamer, as a rule, three voyages.—Montreal Herald.

Womanly "Tenderness."

"Don't talk to me of the tenderness of woman's heart," said the man who hates women, though he has never been married. "She hasn't any. I was traveling recently on a through train to New York from the west, and in the morning, just after most of us had dressed and were sitting in the end of the car, the conductor came and called two men away. One of them belonged to an intelligent and well dressed woman sitting opposite me, and when he came back she asked him what the conductor wanted.

"'Why,' said the man seriously, 'the man in lower 8 has been found dead.'

"The woman's eyes widened, and I thought she was going to say something sweet and sympathetic, but she didn't. What she said was:

"'Why, how thoughtless of him, in a car with all these women too!'

Cooked Under Water.

An Englishman made a wager that he could cook a plum pudding ten feet beneath the surface of the Thames and won the bet by placing the pudding in a tin case and putting the whole in a sack of lime. The heat of the lime, slaking when it came in contact with the water, was sufficient to cook the pudding in two hours.

Until 1627 the Chinese wore their hair long and coiled on the top of the head, where it was fastened with an ornamental pin. The Mantchoo edict making the pigtail a sign of loyalty changed this style.

An Alternative Conclusion.

STRIKE IS GENERAL

Fifty Thousand Machinists Quit Their Work

STRIKERS LOOK FOR SUCCESS

Approximately Fifty Thousand Machinists Struck Yesterday For a Nine-Hour Day, With the Old Scale of Daily Wages.

Washington, May 21.—Approximately 50,000 machinists throughout the country struck yesterday for a nine-hour day; a scale of wages equal to the present 10-hour per day scale, and other demands. This is the estimate of President O'Connell of the National Association of Machinists based on the telegraphic advices that have reached him from the machinists' headquarters in the various cities. The strike thus far has not extended to the allied trades, save in one or two instances, as at Scranton, Pa., where men in a part of the allied trades are out. No machinists engaged in government work are affected. This is due to the fact that on such work an eight-hour a day scale already prevails.

Railroad machinists as a rule are not involved in the strike, though the men on several roads are out. The Central Vermont shop machinists at St. Albans, numbering probably 200, have struck. The Lehigh Valley railroad machinists at Buffalo, Sayre Wilkesbarre and Elmira are out, aggregating about 500 all told. The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western men at Buffalo, Scranton, Wilkesbarre and intermediate points are out. The Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe men also are out. The strike order, however, does not apply to the railroads generally.

It is explained at headquarters that there is no competition between the railroads and the private work and that work among the private establishments is to be adjusted first.

The situation Monday afternoon was summarized by President O'Connell in the following statement to the Associated Press:

"We are demanding a nine-hour day universally throughout the trade with an increase of wages sufficient to overcome the loss of the hour in time; regulation of the apprenticeship system and the number that shall be employed in accordance with the number of journeymen machinists employed; agreements as to arbitration of all disputes that may arise in the future; the right of the machinists to be represented by a committee; and agreements that there shall be absolutely no discrimination against machinists because of their membership in the union.

"From the present indications and the statements issuing from headquarters at the various points the orders are being generally obeyed and in larger numbers than was anticipated."

Following is a statement of the men out at important points:

Hartford, Conn., 1,000; Ansonia and Derby, Conn., 500; Hamilton, O., 1,000; Buffalo, 1,200; Scranton, 2,500; Cincinnati completely tied up and 3,000 men out; Connersville, Ind., 200; Palestine, Tex., 200; York, Pa., 300; East Orange, N. J., 300; Oswego, N. Y., 300; Norfolk, Va., all shops out, 500 men.

Cincinnati, May 21.—The session of the Metal Trades association, held yesterday afternoon, decided to close all shops affected by the strike indefinitely. This means the beginning of a bitter struggle here.

The first day of the strike of the machinists for a nine-hour day and for an increase of wages, was marked by complete unanimity on the part of the members of the machinists' organization and by a practically complete acquiescence of their fellow laborers who are not members of the organization. The event also was marked by an entirely peaceful beginning. The presence here of President Gompers and two other members of the executive board of the American Federation of Labor, shows a determination on the part of that powerful organization to give the machinists all the support within its power. On the other hand, the action of the Metal Trades association evinces a purpose to resist the demands of the machinists to the utmost.

San Francisco, May 21.—Sixty-five hundred union machinists and other iron trade workmen, affiliated with them, quit work in this city yesterday. It is expected 1,000 more men will join the strike as soon as they shall be ordered to do so by their respective national directors. Among the latter are the iron molders and the coremakers. The other crafts affected include almost every branch of the iron shipbuilding and boilermaking trades.

Strikes in Michigan.

Mr. O'Connell said last night that up to 5 o'clock reports show that 904 firms, employing approximately 30,000 men, had signed the agreements for the nine-hour day or made satisfactory arrangements with the local organizations.

Detroit, May 21.—The machinists' strike in Detroit involves about 550 men, according to information given out by Business Agent Gore at the strikers' headquarters in the Hilsendegan block last night.

Seventeen of the 80 shops employing union machinists have given in and signed the union agreement. These shops employ about 150 men.

Grand Rapids, May 21.—Practically all the machinists in this city, with their helpers, numbering 500 men, went on strike yesterday. The Sticky Fly Paper company and the Grand Rapids Hardware company are the only firms that granted the men's demands.

Bay City, May 21.—All the machine shops in Bay City were idle yesterday excepting that of the Michigan Central in West Bay City. There are between 200 and 300 machinists out, and as the blacksmiths and boilermakers generally followed the machinists, there are fully 600 men out of work.

She Waited.

Even a Scotchman cannot always be humorous, if he would. Like other people, however, he is sometimes funny without meaning to be. The Scottish-American thinks that the message sent by a young man in Peeblesshire to his waiting bride may have kept her from worrying over his nonappearance, but that she must after all have received it with mixed feelings.

The bride elect lived in a village some distance from the home of William, the bridegroom. The wedding was to be at her home. On the eventful day the young man started for the station, but on the way met the village grocer, who talked so entertainingly that William missed his train.

Naturally he was in what is known as a "state of mind." Something must be done and done at once. So he sent the following telegram:

Don't marry till I come. WILLIAM.

If the bride elect knew her William, she probably knew how he felt when he sent the message and forgave the mental confusion which resulted in what she must have looked upon as a needless request.

A CULINARY GENIUS.

Cooked Dinner In His Home While at Business In His Office.

The ordinary man is nowhere more out of place than in the kitchen. All rules have their exceptions, however, and a correspondent sends a story of a man who might have led armies perhaps, but was certainly equal to culinary emergencies.

In the absence of his wife and family it became necessary, as he thought, for him to cook his own dinner, and in view of the fact that he was a man of business his presence was also needed down town at his office.

Now, the same body cannot be in two places at once, and this well known consideration would have settled the question for an average man. He would have either spent his forenoon in the kitchen or gone to his office and lunched out. This, however, was a man to whom physical laws do not courtesy even as custom to great kings. The case stood thus:

He was to have a boiled dinner and would have it done to a turn, piping hot and ready to serve at his home coming. The meat, turnips and beets, therefore, which require a longer time, he put on before leaving the house. The potatoes and cabbage, needing less time for cooking, were put on the cover of the pot.

Then he dropped a string through a hole in the edge of the cover, ran it through a loop suspended from the ceiling and thence down to the sink. In the sink hole he firmly stuck a candle, to which, two inches below the top, he tied the string.

Last of all he lighted the candle and went to his business. In two hours, or about half an hour before he was to return, when it was time for the vegetables on the cover to go to their appointed place, the slowly descending flame burned the string, which released the otherwise unsupported edge of the cover, which dropped its burden into the pot and fell back where it belonged.

When the genius reached home, his dinner was ready.—Youth's Companion.

IT IS OUR AIM

To make our store exactly what a 20th Century store should be. A store where you can drop in and feel at home whether you buy or not. A store that stands ready to correct any mistake and exchange goods or give back your money without questioning or quibbling. A store where a child will be received as careful attention as a grown person. A store where one man's money buys just as much as another, and we guarantee our prices to be as low if not the lowest; quality considered as good as any store in Michigan.

New Telephone Connections

For the last year the Tecumseh Telephone Co. have been practically cut off from all long distance toll lines. In fact the only toll line we have ever had was a small sized iron one to Adrian and by connection there reached other points. For more than a year they have had little service to Detroit or Jackson, none to Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Toledo, Hudson or Hillsdale. Many of their subscribers as well as other citizens wished to talk with people in these cities.

Naturally the directors of our local exchange have been working in every known way to reach these towns and and for more than a year have been quietly negotiating and just lately have succeeded. While the character, ownership and management of the Tecumseh Telephone Co. has not changed in the least and the stock and entire control of the company remains in the hands of our Tecumseh people, they have made an agreement with the Michigan Telephone Co., commonly called "The Bell Co.," by which all the long distance lines of that company, now passing through our village, will be connected with the switchboard of the Tecumseh Telephone Co. and so with all its subscribers.

Then we will have two pair of copper wires and two of iron that now pass through Tecumseh from Adrian to Ann Arbor and Detroit. Five pairs of these wires have never been connected with the Tecumseh office but all will now be connected. One pair of coppers are through long distance wires and will be connected with no places between here and Detroit, so we will at all times have the best of service with Detroit. When connected any of our subscribers can talk directly from their residence or place of business, over the best long distance copper wire lines to any city in Michigan or the adjoining states.

We will have four distinct lines to Detroit, rate 15 cents for one minute or five minutes for twenty-five cents; three lines to Toledo, rate 25 cents for three minutes. You can talk five minutes with Adrian, Dundee, Brooklyn or Manchester for 10 cents; to Hudson, Morenci, Blissfield, Deerfield, Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Dexter or Jackson for 15 cents. With those now under contract to be connected by June 1, Tecumseh exchange will have about 350 subscribers and they have many more applications for 'phones.

ARABS GALORE.

Arrayed in rhe Fantastic Garb of the Orient, 200 Members of the Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan

MAKE MERRY.

A Class of Nearly Twenty-five Tyros Introduced into the Hidden Mysteries of the Order and made Votaries of Mecca Temple No. 56 D. O. K. K. of Detroit.

All local events will hereafter date from the time when the D. O. K. K. visited Tecumseh. Great interest had been awakened among our citizens during the past few weeks, regarding the proposed pilgrimage of the Knights of Khorassan to this village and the crowds that greeted the caravan Thursday evening would have done credit to several Saturday nights.

The special coaches of Mecca Temple were attached to the regular D. & L. N. train, arriving here at 8:15 p. m., and were loaded with about two hundred knights in uniform, who, headed by the Tipton band, proceeded to parade the streets which were ablaze with red fire. Owing to an indisposition on the part of the camel, he was taken directly to the opera house and did not participate in the street pageant, but the tiger took part with a will, walking with apparent ease on his hind legs.

After counter marching on Chicago street, the caravan took possession of Sutton's opera house, which had been duly prepared by a vanguard, and conferred the degree upon a class of twenty-three candidates, fifteen of whom were members of Tecumseh Lodge K. P., three from Detroit, two from Blissfield, and one each from Adrian, Hastings and Milan. It is entirely unnecessary to give a list of the Tecumseh boys who were made members of the order as they could be easily distinguished the next morning by a slight limp in their gait, a broad smile and a satisfied expression of countenance, but the following are ready to take off their head gear to the D. O. K. K. any day in the week: James Lowry, Ernest M. Coller, Otho G. Hunt, Thomas Adamson, Chas. H. Heck, Isaac P. Keyser, Will Orr, Albert Deming, O. E. Hawkins, Robert Codling, Will J. Ingersoll, Clarence Jackson, Ray McCollum, Harvey Welling and George Church.

After the initiatory ceremonies, refreshments were served and the members entertained by some of Detroit's best vaudeville talent, who had been brought along for the purpose. These entertainers included vocalists, banjo and black face comedians and delineators of Hebrew life who brought down the house with their fun.

Among those taking part in and enjoying the sport were such well known men as Ex-judge Gartner, Sheriff Dickenson, Dr. R. S. Cunningham, Attorney Arthur Howell, F. H. Clarke, F. J. Peddie and Dr. M. F. Stein, from Detroit; Prosecuting Attorney Kuntz, of Mt. Clemens, and a score of other votaries prominent in business and political circles.

At 1:30 Friday morning the tents were folded and the Arabs silently(?) stole away to their special train accompanied by their newly made brethern who gave the Detroiters a hearty sendoff and then went home to laugh over the recollections of an evening spent on the desert sands and the oasis of Zem Zem's sparkling well.

Woolson Comfort.

Woolston Comfort, an old Tecumseh pioneer passed away at his home in Jackson, Friday, May 17, at the age of 67 years. He was born in Buck county, Pa., March 12, 1834 and moved with his parents to this place in 1840, where he resided until 12 years ago, when he moved to Jackson and was engaged in the transfer business. Mr. Comfort was a well known and respected citizen while here. He was proprietor of the Quaker mill now owned by Chas. Everett. The funeral was held Sunday at 3:30 at his home in Jackson. He leaves beside his wife, who was formerly Martha V. Ramsdell, and a host of friends, two sons, N. L. Comfort, of Battle Creek, and C. C. Comfort, of Jackson, to mourn.

Among those from this place who attended the funeral were T. I. Sutton and wife, Thos. Meade and wife Moses Comfort and son Fred, Mrs. Mary Taylor and daughter, Mrs. Jas. Satterthwaite and daughter Anna, Albert Comfoot, Libbie Satterthwaite, Chas. Patterson and wife and Chas. Everett.

SENIOR RECEPTION.

At the Home of Miss Mable Mills, the Seniors Receive the

JUNIORS AND TEACHERS

Of the Tecumseh High School-House was Beautifully Decorated in Both Class Colors.

Friday evening at the home of Miss Mable Mills the seniors gave a reception to the juniors and teachers of the high school in return for the pleasant reception to the seniors by the juniors but a few weeks before. The Mills residence was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The porch, bright with Japanese lanterns, was a pretty sight.

The reception room was handsome in red and white, the senior colors. These colors were draped from staircase to the doors, forming a cradle just above one's head, at the foot of the stairs. There in peace the senior "mascot," a doll dressed in their colors, reposed, but not for long for it had disappeared entirely before the evening came to a close. About 8 o'clock the guests, sixty in number, began to assemble and were received by the Misses Stella Zimmerman and Gladys Sisson with white dresses and red sashes and collars and Messrs. Leon Williamson, Raymond Mills and Bayard Case in black clothes with orange vests.

As the guests entered, the name of an animal written on a slip of paper was pinned on ths shoulder of each one, so that the wearer was unable to learn the name of the animal he or she represented, but were obliged to guess by the way the others acted toward them. The booby prize was given to Eleanor Norcross, who took the longest time in guessing. The prize was animal crackers tied with red ribbons.

In the bow window in the reception room, Miss Annie Ferguson in red and white and Miss Zilla Mills in orange and black served the frappe. The front parlor was decorated in the junior colors of bunting draped from chandelier to the corners of the room and yellow tulips. Again the colors of the senior predominate in the back parlor and the music room, these colors being furnished with red tulips and white lilacs.

A program, consisting of instrumental music by Clarence Witherall and sister, Miss Lena, a song by Mrs. Kellogg and two nice recitations by Miss Annie Ferguson, were presented. After the program was finished, tables were brought in for refreshments, Mr. Witherall and Miss Lena playing in the meantime. The tables presented a handsome appearance with white table clothes trimmed with smilax and myrtle.

The refreshments were served in three courses and again the senior and junior colors predominated. Following is the menu: Creamed chicken, sandwiches, white jelly with strawberries, lady fingers tied with black, schrimp salad with red radishes, the salad served in white boxes tied with red ribbons, red and white ice cream, white cake, coffee. The favors were hand painted roses in colors of red and white with the date.

During the refreshment hour, the guests were entertained with a music box. After supper an enjoyable social time, after which the guests departed each one feeling that they were indebted to the senior class of 1901 for one of the most delightful evenings in the history of their school career.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Council Chamber, Village of Tecumseh.

Adjourned regular meeting held May 14th, 1901. Present, the entire council.

The following ordinance was recommended by the ordinance committee:

AN ORDINANCE TO AMEND AN ORDINANCE PASSED BY THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH MAY 6, 1895, ENTITLED, "AN ORDINANCE REQUIRING THE BUILDING AND MAINTAINING OF SIDEWALKS WITHIN THE VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH," AND THE AMENDMENTS THERETO.

The village of Tecumseh ordains: That Section XIII of an ordinance passed by said council May 6th, 1895, entitled "An ordinance requiring the building and maintaining of sidewalks within the village of Tecumseh," and amended by said council August 22d, 1895, be and the same is hereby amended to stand and be as follows, viz:

SEC. XIII—All sidewalks hereafter built or rebuilt along the north and south lines of Chicago street between the west line of VanBuren street and the east line of Wyandotte street (except that portion thereof within the fire limits, and provided for in the preceeding section) shall be not less than five feet nine inches in width; and sidewalks hereafter built or rebuilt along said lines of Chicago street west of the west line of VanBuren street shall be not less than five feet in width; and all sidewalks hereafter built or rebuilt along said north and south lines of Chicago street (except that portion east of Wyandotte street) shall be built or rebuilt entirely of cement or artificial stone.

Moved that the above ordinance be passed and adopted. Aye—Hunt, Hayden, Belding, Shepard, Smith, Avery; nay, none. Declared passed and adopted.

The following ordinance was recommended by the ordinance committee:

AN ORDINANCE TO AMEND AN ORDINANCE PASSED BY THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH MAY 6, 1895, ENTITLED "AN ORDINANCE REQUIRING THE BUILDING AND MAIMTAINING OF SIDEWALKS WITHIN THE VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH."

The village of Tecumseh ordains: That an ordinance passed by said council May 6th, 1895, entitled, "An ordinance requiring the building and maintaining of sidewalks within the village of Tecumseh," be and the same is hereby amended by adding thereto two new sections to stand as Sections XV and XVI, and to be as follows, viz:

SEC. XV.—All sidewalks hereafter built or rebuilt along the west line of Union street, in this village, between the north line of Pottawatamie street and a point twelve rods north from the intersection of said west line of Union street and the north line of Bidwell street (extended far enough westward to make such intersection), shall be constructed entirely of cement or artificial stone.

SEC. XVI.—All sidewalks hereafter built or rebuilt along the west line of Union street within the limits, mentioned in the preceeding section, shall be of the widths as follows, viz: along said line and between Pottawatamie street and Chicago street, and between Logan street and the northern limit of said line as in the preceeding section mentioned, not less than five feet; and between Chicago street and Logan street, not less than four feet and six inches.

Moved that the above ordinance be passed and adopted. Aye—Hunt, Hayden, Belding, Shepard, Smith, Avery; nay, none. Declared passed and adopted.

The application of F. B. Wood for a cement sidewalk along the west line of Union street, together with proper certificates was submitted and on motion the walk was ordered to be constructed.

The following bills were audited and ordered paid:

Buffalo Meter Co., supplies,		$118.20
J. L. Waldo,	½ cement walk,	5.44
McClue Sisters,	" "	10.01
A. W. Mills,	" "	19.77
Chas. Eldredge,	" "	8.36
Edward Mott,	" "	7.26
H. W. Conkling,	" "	10.89

A number of citizens being present, the president asked for an expression of opinion regarding the electric railway franchise which was quite freely given after which the matter was on motion referred to the ordinance committee with instructions to meet with Mr. W. B. Hatch and, if possible, draft a franchise ordinance which would be agreeable to both parties and submit the same.

Council then adjourned.

DON H. C. BOWEN,
Village Clerk.

WHAT THEY SAY.

The Herald is Proud of the Compliments it Receives from Other Papers.

The Tecumseh Herald blossomed out last week in a new dress—Manchester Enterprise.

The Tecumseh Herald, one of the best edited and best printed papers of Lenawee county, came out last week with an entirely new dress of type.—Milan Leader.

The Tecumseh Herald receives congratulations from the brethren of the press upon its evident taste and apparent prosperity—a handsome new dress of type throughout.—Morenci Observer.

The Tecumseh Herald came out last week with a complete new face of type, including column rules, headings and advertising type, and its appearance is consequently much improved.—Monroe Democrat.

The Tecumseh Herald came to us last Friday with a new spring suit, even the ads were set in new type. It looked as slick as a button. The Herald management is to be congratulated on the improvement.—Clinton Local.

The Tecumseh Herald has donned a new spring dress of new type, and makes a handsome appearance. It is published twice a week and is a credit to Tecumseh and its enterprising publisher, Geo. N. Stacy.—Dundee Reporter.

We were obliged to look twice at the Tecumseh Herald this week to identify that periodical. An entire new dress of type gives Editor Stacy's news and advertising columns the style and smartness of a new gowned summer girl.—Brooklyn Exponent.

The Tecumseh Herald came out Friday with a complete new dress, including advertisements, heads and body matter, and presents a decidedly attractive appearance. Bro. Stacy is evidently getting his share of the prosperity that is floating around, and The Times trusts he may continue to do so.—Adrian Times.

The Tecumseh Herald last Friday appeared upon the journalistic stage in a new spring attire, from sunbonnet to shoestrings, and presented a very neat appearance, fully justifying the many bouquets the Herald threw at itself. The advertising type is new also and runs to italic light-face of two or three styles.—Adrian Press.

The Tecumseh Herald is handsome in a new spring dress, which makes it look as bright and fresh as a brand new sixteen year old beauty just fitted out with a modern outfit of man tailored suits from an up-to-date store that advertises its goods. The Herald is 52 years old, and starts out as if it proposed to make the record a hundred at least—and here's hoping it may.—Adrian Telegram.

After Sickness

Take Vinol—Our Great Strength Creator.

IT GIVES ONE A SPLENDID APPETITE.

AND QUICKLY REBUILDS THE SYSTEM.

We Will Refund the Price of Vinol if It Fails.

The worst part of sickness, frequently, is getting over it.

The patient's strength is depleted, his system is generally demoralized, relapses are continually feared, and naturally.

The one thing to aid recovery is to give the patient that which will enable him to get strong, and at the same time give strength direct to the different organs of the body.

Nothing will do this like Vinol.

It acts directly on the stomach, creates a healthy appetite, and enables the digestive organs to obtain the necessary elements to increase the weight of the patient and to make new healthy flesh and muscle tissue and pure, rich, red blood.

The following is a letter showing where Vinol was taken and did good after a case of sickness. It reads as follows:

"I wish to certify to the very great benefit which has been derived from the use of Vinol in my family. My wife was very sick with the grippe and afterward was wholly run down. One bottle of Vinol places her on her feet in better condition than she had been before in six months. I heartily recommend and endorse it."—HENRY F. STURTEVANT, 81 Huntington St., Brockton, Mass.

Everything that is in Vinol is plainly printed on the label of each package.

We know Vinol is a splendid preparation, and in many cases we have been able to see for ourselves the wonderful results it brings about.

Remember that we guarantee Vinol and refund the purchase money if you are not satisfied.

RIGHT UP TO DATE.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

These are days of records and of the beating of records. Benson's Porous Plaster, for quickness of action and thoroughness of cure, has no records to beat except its own.

Benson's Plaster, always the best, always the leader, is to-day better than ever. It sticks to the skin but never sticks in its tracks. It marches on.

The people not only want to be cured but cured quickly—and Benson's Plaster does it. Coughs, colds, lumbago, asthma, bronchitis, liver and kidney complaints, and other ills approachable by an external remedy, yield to Benson's as ice does to heat.

Neither Belladonna, Strengthening or Capsicum plasters are to be compared with Benson's. People who have once tested the merits of Benson's Plaster have no use for any other external remedy.

More than 5,000 physicians and druggists (and a thousand times as many non-professional persons) have called Benson's Plasters one of the few (!) home remedies that can be trusted.

Fifty-five highest awards have been made to it in competition with the best known plasters of Europe and America. Better proof of its merits is inconceivable. Be sure to get the genuine.

For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States, on receipt of 25c. each.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good they can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. STARTLED THE CAMP

A PRANK THAT ENLIVENED A SNOW BOUND MINING TOWN.

The Resurrection of a Supposed Dead Lawyer Was a Mutual Surprise to the Community and to the Victim of the Tricksters.

"Life in a mining camp when it is snow bound," said a prominent mining man of Chicago the other day, "is a dreary time, and men will do anything for the sake of a little amusement. The story I am going to tell you actually did occur, and at that time we all welcomed the joke as a godsend and made a hero of its perpetrator.

"The winter of 1893 rested an appallingly heavy hand on the Cœur d'Alene. Buried many feet deep under a mass of fleecy snow, the country lay prostrate. So intense was the cold and so heavy the weight of the snow that it was possible to work none but the richest claims. Ingress to and egress from that bountifully rich territory was a feat that none but the hardiest man dared essay, for it was an even chance that death from exposure might be the lot of the one who attempted it.

"Wallace at this time was a thriving, busy, prosperous town where the artificial excitement of a mining boom everywhere betrayed itself. The shutting down of many of the mines had left a large number of men living in Wallace with nothing to do. Time hung heavily on their hands, and nothing was of too small importance to attract interest provided it held out the hope of killing a few hours of the dreary time of waiting.

"Just at this period the most prominent young lawyer of the town fell ill. There wasn't anything particular the matter with him except a heavy cold and impending fever; but, being somewhat of a hypochondriac, he at once believed himself to be in a dangerous condition. He promptly took himself to his bed in the rear of his office, denied himself to all but two or three of his intimate friends, installed a nurse to look after his wants and promptly gave himself over to that luxury of believing himself to be really ill which is so dear to the hypochondriac's heart.

"The three men who were his friends and who were admitted to his apartment took advantage of the conditions surrounding him to perpetrate a practical joke that has since become famous in the northwest. They gave out the news that the lawyer, one Jack Greene, had died, and as his mourning friends they received the camp, which called in a body to express its regret.

"In the meantime Greene, in the next room, heard nothing, the visitors being naturally quiet in the presence of death. One of his friends went to the local undertaker and, informing him that Jack was dead, purchased a coffin. Alleging the hard winter and consequent hard times, he beat the undertaker down one-half in his price. The undertaker, however, got even by supplying a plain pine box painted a deep black. This was placed in Jack's office, and in the dead of night lumber carefully weighted to the weight of Greene's body was packed inside it by the three conspirators. The lid was then screwed down, and the following day John Greene, followed by the entire population of the town of Wallace, Ida., was laid away in the cold, cold ground.

"About ten days later Jack, having entirely recovered his pristine health, appeared upon the street. To say that his advent created a sensation is to put it mildly. Three or four superstitious miners, thinking it was his 'ha'nt,' straightway took to their cabins on the hillside and to prayer and fasting. The only woman in the camp had a fit of hysterics and fainted dead away. Greene, however, stopped the general panic that his appearance was precipitating by stepping into the Crystal Palace saloon and there absorbing his four fingers of 'red eye' in a perfectly natural and earthlike manner.

"It was hard to tell whether the town of Wallace or Jack Greene was the more astonished by the explanations that there ensued. At length, when those present had become convinced beyond cavil or doubt that it was Greene in the flesh and not Greene in the spirit—although by this time it must be confessed that spirit in great plenty was in Greene—they sent for the three conspirators.

"'What did you do it for?' was the question addressed in blunt and simple terms to the ringleader.

"'Well, I'll tell you. You see we wanted to run Jack for a town office and we thought in this way we could get a line on how he stood with the community. But'—and here he slapped a wad of newspaper clippings down on the bar in front of the astonished and aggrieved Greene, 'Jack, you won't do. Just read those obituaries and see what the people think of you. Why, after such a send off as that we wouldn't dare to run you for the office of picking fleas off a yellow dog that was locked up on the town farm.'"

THE GRAND SCHEMER

AN INTERVIEW IN WHICH HE TALKED TO GOOD EFFECT.

He Joyfully Subscribes to a Home and Philanthropically Founds a Utopia—Then, Thanks to His Trusting Caller, He Indulges In a Substantial Lunch.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

Major Crofoot, grand promoter and general originator, was just making ready to go out after a luxurious 15 cent lunch when there came a timid knock on the door. It couldn't be the agent of the building after the four months' back rent, for he would have boldly knocked the door open; his landlady, to whom he owed $48, didn't know where his office was; the tailor had grown discouraged, the coal man always sent his bill in the forenoon, and should it be a bill from the cobbler he would dispute its correctness. In answer to the major's "Come in!" a young woman entered.

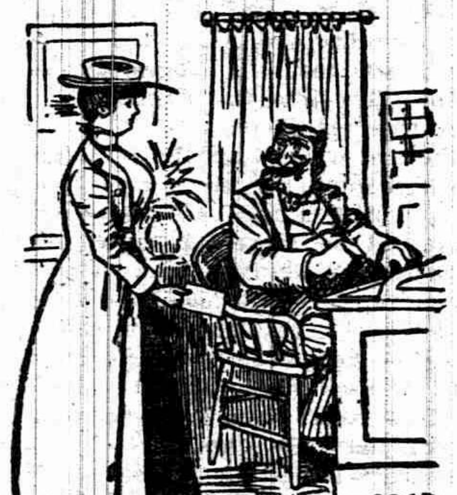
"I—I have called," she began, "in the interest of a new industrial home soon to be established. I am soliciting personal subscriptions."

"My dear woman, sit down—sit right down," cheerily replied the major. "We may call this a coincidence—a curious coincidence. Not half an hour ago I began drawing up plans for just such an institution. It is to be called the Crofoot Self Supporting Home."

"Then you would not want to subscribe to another, of course?"

"Perhaps so. You may give me what particulars you can."

"It is to be a home where children without parents and friendless old folks can be provided for. In return for their board and clothes they will do what work they can. I believe they will make brushes and brooms."



"PLAIN AS DAY, MY DEAR YOUNG WOMAN."

"Exactly; I see. A noble idea, my dear woman, a noble idea and a grand charity, and you deserve credit for interesting yourself. We cannot have too many of these institutions, and I personally feel that I cannot do too much for them. You may put me down for $10."

"That is very nice of you," she said as she wrote his name in her book. "I have taken 200 subscriptions, and yours is the most liberal of all."

"I never do things by halves, miss. When I enter upon a charity, I do it with my whole soul. You may make my subscription $15."

"How good of you!"

"And now about my own home, the one I have planned. You will probably be interested in it. I shall erect a building to accommodate at least 250 inmates. It will not be an industrial home in the usual use of the term. Perhaps I shall change the name to 'The Crofoot Utopian Power company.' The first idea is the care and comfort of the unfortunate; the next to make them feel that they are not dependent upon charity."

"That is good of you," observed the caller.

"How best to do this was long a puzzle to me, but I have solved it at last. When Major Crofoot starts in on an idea, he never lets it get away from him unsolved. There will be no manufacturing in my home. The inmates shall simply eat, sleep and walk about. Your countenance expresses surprise, but let me add that each and every one shall earn his keep."

"I—I can't see how."

"The simplest thing in the world. In the basement will be a 5,000 horsepower engine. Pipes will lead to it from every room. That engine will be run by what may be called lost power. For instance, you sneeze or cough. There is power there, but it is wasted. You fall off a chair; you sing or whistle; you yawn. It takes power to do it, but the power is wasted. By a system of pipes all this lost power will be conducted to the engine to run it. No coal, no gas, no wood. Engine runs right along day and night and has power enough to supply all factories within half a mile of it. What the factories pay will keep the home going. Do you understand?"

"What an idea!" gasped the woman.

"Not a bad one," smiled the major as he walked around, "and I am sole originator. All others will be imitations. All I shall ask of the inmates is to take comfort. As they rock to and fro in 250 rocking chairs the engine is worked up to its full capacity; as they move across the floor, eat, sleep, quarrel or make up they furnish me power. Out of 250 people 188 will snore in their sleep. These snores will give me a pressure of 50 pounds on the engine."

"Wonderful! Wonderful!" she whispered.

"It's just making use of natural philosophy. It is not a stock company, and there will be no dividends, but I want outsiders interested. I want 100 people to take shares of $17 each in order that they may help me run the home and receive a share of the public praise. The superintendent alone will receive a salary. May I offer you the position?"

"I don't believe I could take it. You see, I am only a volunteer canvasser."

"Exactly, but I am satisfied you would make a good superintendent and see that none of the power was wasted. I can say that the salary will be at least $5,000 per year."

"It is awfully kind of you, but I fear I must decline."

"Then I will not press you. I will, however, put you down for a $17 share, and whenever you are near the home you are entitled to drop in and stir up the inmates. The harder you stir them the more power we get. Have you $2 handy, miss? If so, I will use it for revenue stamps."

"I don't understand," she replied as she rose up with a puzzled look.

"Plain as day, my dear young woman. I subscribed $15 to the home you are canvassing for. I put you down for $17 for a share in the Crofoot Utopia Power company. The difference between $15 and $17 is $2. You had best pay now and have it over with."

"But I don't see," she protested as her eyes grew big.

"Then we will go over it again. If you add 2 to 15 it makes 17, doesn't it? And you owe me just the difference. This being my busy day"—

She looked at him in a vacant way for a minute and then laid $2 on the desk and walked out without a word. Ten minutes later she was back with the real estate man on the first floor, and the real estate man pounded on the door and called out:

"Open, you sleek, slick man, and hand over that $2!"

"Yes, you talked me out of $2," added the woman.

No reply.

"Open, or I'll kick the door in!"

"Yes, we'll kick the door in!"

The silence of death.

"Major Crofoot, you are a scoundrel!"

"Yes, a deep dyed scoundrel!"

But the major heard not the words. He had seized the money, locked up his office and gone down by the back stairs after his luncheon. He no longer figured on a 15 cent "grab," but his thoughts bounded forward to a 50 cent sit down with plenty of elbow room.

FIRST PAGE FOR SPEECHES.

Rivalry Among Congressmen For a Good Position in The Record.

The effort that is constantly being made to secure the printing of speeches on the front page of The Congressional Record is not generally understood. Senators and representatives naturally desire to have their deliverances in congress receive as much attention as possible, and there is but one publication in which they can monopolize the front page in a display of their speeches. That one publication is The Record.

Of course speeches that are printed in regular order in the debate, appearing on the day after they are delivered, are to be found only in their regular place in The Record. But in the cases of speeches withheld for revision there is an opportunity to have them displayed on the first page of the official report of the proceedings. This is merely done by an arrangement between the senate and house by which this privilege is about equally divided. Senators and representatives who withhold their remarks for revision frequently inquire when they can have the first page of The Record, which is generally reserved for at least a week ahead.

The general rule is, "First come, first served." In this way those who want to make their speeches influential will at times arrange to have them on the first page of The Record on the morning of a day when a vote is to be taken, in order that they may be brought prominently to the attention of their fellow legislators just before they are to take action on the matters of which they treat. It is in the nature of judicious advertisement.—Washington Star.

Lincoln Couldn't Do It.

"When I was in Springfield, Abraham Lincoln and General Baker, who was killed at Leesburg, Va., during the civil war, made the race for the Whig nomination for congress," said Dr. D. B. Hill. "Both were Whigs, and both were keen for the nomination. Both had a strong personal following, and if both ran the Democrat would win in the district. So a primary election was necessary to settle the contest. Baker won. Both men were at Springfield when the news came. Lincoln was depressed. The crowd to cheer him up called on him for a speech. Getting up, he said: 'Gentlemen, I'd like to comply with your request, but I can't make a speech now. I expected to receive the nomination, but I failed. If I had won, I know Baker would have got up here and so charmed you with his eloquence as to make you believe you had done him a favor by nominating me. But I can't do it.'"—Argonaut.

They Used Clean Ones.

The head master of a boarding school in Sheffield is very particular about the behavior of his scholars during mealtimes. A short time ago the master observed one of the boys cleaning his knife on the tablecloth and immediately pounced on him.

"Is that what you generally do at home, sir?" he asked sternly.

"Oh, no," replied the boy quietly. "We generally use clean knives at home."—London Fun.

Whistled as She Sang.

The man who knew many things was instructing the new and verdant stenographer as to the use of the various office appliances, and finally he introduced her to the speaking tube.

"Now, see," said the man, "you put one tube to your ear and the other to your mouth, then whistle."

"Into which one do I whistle?" asked the guileless stenographer.

"Heavens," cried the man, "which one do you suppose you whistle in, the one at your ear or the one at your mouth?"

"That was what I wanted to know," said the stenographer, "for I whistle as I sing, entirely by ear."—Memphis Scimitar.

Deserved Acquittal.

Little 3-year-old Minnie could repeat nursery rhymes and talk like an old woman. One day, having done something strictly against orders, her mother said, "Minnie, I really don't know what I had better do with you." Drawing a long breath of relief the little miss said, "I'm awful glad you don't, mamma," and marched off, taking it for granted that the matter was settled.—Chicago News.

Won by a Dead Man.

A valuable cup was won in a bicycle race in Australia by a man who was dead when he passed the winning post. The race took place at an "electric light carnival," so called, in the presence of 10,000 spectators. In the last lap James Somerville, a rider, forged to the front and secured such a lead that his victory was assured.

When within 25 yards of the finish he was seen to relax his hold on the handle bars and lose his footing on the pedals. He did not fall from the machine, however, and amid frantic cheers dashed by the goal, winning the race by half a wheel. As he passed the finishing post he pitched forward and fell to the ground.

When he was picked up he was found to be dead, and, what is more, the doctors declared that death had come to him when he was seen to lose his hold on the handle bars. It was a dead body that had ridden the last 25 yards of the race.

His Recommendation.

Fair Shopper (to assistant, who has shown her every piece of goods in stock)—Well, I don't see anything here that suits me. I'll go down to Yard & Stuff's and see what they have.

Salesman (eagerly)—Here's the card of one of their assistants. Will you kindly get him to wait on you?

Fair Shopper (pleasantly)—Ah, a friend of yours, I suppose?

Salesman—No, my greatest enemy.—London Fun.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley, of Ann Arbor, Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter, of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache," "modern wonder-workers," etc.

Mr. Wooley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

MACHINISTS ON TOP

Big Gains by Strikers Reported in Detroit and Elsewhere.

EXPECT A SETTLEMENT SOON

Policy Is to Discourage Bringing Out More Men Than Is Absolutely Necessary to Effect the Success of the Movement.

Detroit, Mich., May 24.—A signal victory has been won by the machinists' union. The American Car & Foundry Co., formerly the Michigan-Peninsular Car Co., has signed the agreement. Everything the union demanded has been conceded, and more, for every one of the 3,000 employes has been given a 54-hour week and more pay, with the distinction that all except the machinists will get a half-holiday on Saturday. This will give the latter an opportunity to make needed repairs on the machinery.

The Michigan-Peninsular company employed 58 machinists. Every one of these returned to the shops yesterday morning. But this was not all that was accomplished in settling the difficulty, for 3,000 men engaged in other avocations, who had been forced into idleness by the strike, also resumed work.

The Boyer Machine Co., whose plant has been closed since Monday, yielded to the demands of the machinists at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. They, too, granted more than was asked and not only the 35 machinists but the entire force of 250 employes are to receive the benefits of shorter hours and more pay, with the same distinction that was made by the car company. Everything has been settled satisfactorily to both parties and the men returned to work this morning.

A small concern, the name of which is withheld by the executive committee, yielded yesterday, and the men, about six in number, returned to work on the 9-hour schedule. Now that two of the larger concerns have given in it is confidently expected that others will follow in quick succession. Business Agent Gore is of the opinion that the strike, so far as Detroit is concerned, will be settled before the week is over.

Washington, May 24.—President O'Connell of the machinists' association, in summarizing the situation last night said: "The situation now shows that we are largely the gainer in the number of settlements made. The adjustments reported during the day show a gain in New England of 1,500 in the number of men returned to work, with the demands granted of 500; of 500 or 600 in Ohio, and probably 1,000 in Pennsylvania. About 1,000 men struck Thursday. There are some additions in Philadelphia and at Americus, Ga. Our policy is to discourage bringing out any more men than is absolutely necessary to effect the success of the movement."

Mr. O'Connell said a strike of the machinists on the Seaboard Air Line would occur this morning. He said the strikers would number between 500 and 600.

Advices to headquarters here indicate that at San Francisco many of the smaller concerns are ready to grant the demands but are not ready to sign the agreement. At Indianapolis the American Bicycle Co. is reported as agreeing to the demands but refusing to sign the agreement. The same condition exists at several other points, and the matter is being left to the organizations to settle. Mr. O'Connell said last night that he could not understand such a policy on the part of the employers, but was not disposed to haggle over a minor issue, and if necessary he would insist on the men staying out on account of that technicality. He said the organization of the men is sufficient to enforce their demands, and that the question of signature was comparatively trifling.

In this city every establishment employing machinists signed agreements yesterday, one of them, the Cahill Typewriter Co., however, refusing to unionize the shop. There are about 100 machinists in Washington outside of government shops. In Boston 39 firms, employing 1,650 men, have signed the agreements thus far, leaving 1,200 men still engaged in the strike. The men are out in the American Bicycle Co. shops at Springfield, Mass., Westerly, R. I., and Thomasville, Conn. The local combination of employers at Bridgeport, Conn., has been broken by the agreement of the Capsule Machine Co. there. Reports up to 5 o'clock last night showed the following additional agreements:

Indianapolis, two shops; Grand Rapids, two; Erie, Pa., the Erie City iron works and the Cleveland & Hendricks Machine Co.; Pittsburg, a half dozen oil well supply concerns; Meadville, Pa., the Phoenix iron works.

Against American Competition.

London, May 24.—Sir Alfred Hickman, conservative (former president of the British Iron Trade association), in the house of commons yesterday protested against railroads which were governmentally controlled especially in Burmah and Egypt, continuing buying American locomotives, when the report of the inspector of Burmah railroads, mentioned by Lord Hamilton, the Indian secretary in the house, May 7, showed they required more repairs and more coal than locomotives of British make. Sir Alfred Hickman also made allegations against the way an American firm is constructing the great viaduct in Burmah.

Child Whipped in Court.

Findlay, O., May 24.—The National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has instructed its attorney to bring proceedings against Mayor Watson of this city. Watson caused the father of 7-year-old Amos Watson to whip the child in police court, the child having confessed to stealing $65. The mayor adopted the course because there was no law in the case which met his ideas of severity.

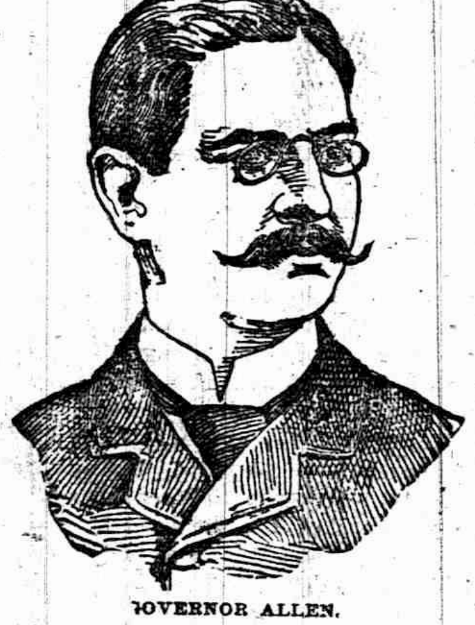
GEN. ALLEN'S WELCOME

Demonstrative Welcome Tendered the Governor of Porto Rico.

San Juan, P. R., May 24.—The demonstrative welcome tendered to Gov. Allen, who arrived here yesterday on the Mayflower, easily surpassed any similar previous demonstration. The Mayflower was met by a launch containing Mr. Hunt, secretary of Porto Rico; Col. Buchanan, the collector of customs; Capt. Yates Stirling, the captain of the port, and other friends of the governor's. Gov. Allen landed at the water front at 15 minutes past 11. The public square fronting the dicos was thronged with thousands of people. The crowd was much larger than that which welcomed Gov. Allen upon his first arrival in Porto Rico. Yesterday he was greeted with rousing cheers.

There was a procession half a mile long formed by the police, 1,500 school children, a regimental band, labor organizations from San Juan and other towns, and delegations from Mayaguez and Ponce that had chartered steamers to represent San Juan. Citizens were in carriages and on foot and the balconies were covered with bunting and flags. Arriving at the palace, Gov. Allen was made welcome by speeches by Manuel Egozcue, the mayor of San Juan; Senor Rossy, the speaker of the legislature, and others.



GOVERNOR ALLEN.

To a crowd of 5,000 persons Gov. Allen made a long speech in reply. He said that since his visit to Washington the wishes of the people of Porto Rico are better understood and that he brings them hope, cheer and encouragement. He expressed his desire for the cooperation of all to aid the government in advancing the interest of the island.

GOV. TANNER DEAD.

Prominent Republican Statesman and Politician Passes Away.

Springfield, Ill., May 24.—Former Gov. John R. Tanner died here suddenly in the Leland hotel yesterday afternoon from rheumatism of the heart. He had been confined to his room since his return from Chicago last Saturday, with rheumatism of the left side, but the case was not considered at all serious. He felt much worse yesterday, and Dr. J. N. Dixon, the family physician, was called. He found the governor dying.

Gov. Tanner had held various positions besides that of governor, having been a member of the Illinois legislature United States marshal for the southern district of Illinois, state treasurer and assistant at the United States sub-treasury at Chicago, and was for many years a member of the republican state committee and chairman of the same. He was candidate for United States senator this year against Senator Cullom. He leaves a widow, one son, Col. J. Mack Tanner of Springfield and colonel of the Fourth I. N. G., and one daughter, Mrs. John A. Barnes of Chicago.

Gov. Tanner was 57 years old. He served as a private in the Fifty-eighth and Sixty-first Illinois infantry regiments. He was also formerly a member of the railroad and warehouse commission.

Died From Being Scalded.

Traverse City, Mich., May 24.—The 15-months-old son of Andrew Champagne died yesterday, the result of burns received Wednesday. The mother placed a boiler of scalding water in the woodshed, covering it with boards. She went back to cover the stove. Returning she found the child had pulled aside the boards and had fallen in head first. His arms and face were terribly scalded.

REVIEWED TROOPS

Visited the Presidio Camps and Talked to the Soldiers

FAVOR FOR AN OLD ARMY CHUM

President Visited the General Hospital, Visiting the Sick Wards, Bowing and Speaking Words of Cheer to Sick Soldiers.

San Francisco, May 23.—Mrs. McKinley was up yesterday and was well enough to appear at her window and wave a farewell to the president as he departed for the military review at the Presidio.

While the present intention of the presidential party is to start for the east at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, this will not be positively decided upon until after a consultation of the attending physicians, which is to be held at noon today.

President McKinley spent a fairly busy day. After breakfasting at the residence of Irving M. Scott, he returned to his temporary home and received a delegation of federal officials. The reception was very informal and lasted 20 minutes.

The president asked these officials to provide a position for an old man named Ritter, who served in his regiment during the civil war. Mr. Ritter lost a leg in battle and is now a resident of San Deadrino. The president remarked that this was the first appointment he had asked for and hoped his old comrade would be provided for. The officials promised to grant the request.

The most important event of the day came next. It was the president's visit to the Presidio, where he reviewed the Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth volunteer regiments, just returned from the Philippines to be mustered out of service. When the president mounted the reviewing stand the soldiers cheered him. He addressed them with much feeling.

The president next visited the general hospital, visiting the sick wards, bowing and speaking words of cheer to every sick soldier.

In the afternoon the president was the guest of honor at the reception at the Union League club, the Ohio Society of California, the Mexican war veterans, Pioneers and Native soldiers. The latter three societies presented him with a paper-weight containing $350 worth of gold. At each reception the president responded briefly to presentation speeches.

On his way to dinner, President McKinley stopped at Union square and turned over the first shovelful of sod, where the monument to the American Dewey's victory at Manila bay, is to be erected.

The president attended a reception last night given in his honor by the G. A. R. posts of the city. This afternoon he will go to Oakland to review the school children of that city.

AMERICAN JOURNALISM.

Exhaustive Address Delivered by D. O. Haynes in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., May 24.—D. O. Haynes, publisher of the New York Commercial, delivered an address last night on the "commercial press" at a banquet of the Business Men's league. He discussed the wide range of American journalism and the splendid progress it has made in a quarter of a century.

There are 25,000,000 readers of the daily newspapers, he said, while not more than half a million are vitally interested in the purely commercial newspaper. He quoted figures at length from government reports to show the immense annual natural products of the United States, totalling in the year 1900 more than four and a half billion dollars.

He explained in detail how valuable the exclusive commercial newspaper is to the great interests engaged in production and commerce. He told how the statistics of the trade are gathered for this important constituency and how this news is valuable when a section of the world knows the volume and prices in other sections. Mr. Haynes's plea was for a world wide commercial press for business men.

United States on the Lookout.

London, May 24.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Pekin says that the government of the United States will under no circumstances consent to any increase in the Chinese tariff, unless commercial advantages are conceded in return.

Washington, May 24.—The position of the United States government, as understood here, has been that if Chinese duties on imports were increased and the government regarded it as likely that an increase in these duties must be made in order that China could meet demands of the powers for indemnity, that attendant upon this increase should be measures providing for greater freedom of trade between China and the outside world, an abolition of the Likin tax and possibly other reforms.

Dietary Repartee.

"I think," said A. Bronson Alcott in one of his conversations, "when a man lives on beef, he becomes something like an ox. If he eats mutton, he becomes sheepish, and if he feeds upon pork may he not become swinish?"

"That may be," said Dr. Walker, "but when a man lives on nothing but vegetables I think he is apt to be pretty small potatoes."

Nearly every Chinaman can read, but 90 per cent of the women are entirely uneducated.

SUICIDE OF AN ANARCHIST.

Angelo Bresci, Slayer of King Humbert, Strangled Himself.

Rome, May 24.—Angelo Bresci, slayer of King Humbert, committed suicide yesterday by strangling himself in his cell in the Santo Stefano prison.

From statements made by the jailers it appears that the anarchist's nerve collapsed under the strain of solitary confinement. Lately he has been plunged into the deepest depression, and it was easy to see that his mind was giving way. Bresci was found dead on the floor of his cell, strips from his shirt were made into rope. This he had twisted about his neck, and had thus slowly strangled himself to death.

Gaetano Bresci was born in Florence in 1869. He was denounced in 1895 as a dangerous rioter and was deported to the island of Pantellaria, where he remained until 1896, when he was liberated under the amnesty after the battle of Adowa. He went to the United States in 1897, and married soon afterwards, at West Hoboken, N. J.

Bresci went to work in a silk mill in Paterson. He became interested in anarchy and joined the "Right of Existence Group." The penitentiary of Santo Stefano, where he killed himself, is situated on the island of that name off the gulf of Gaeta, northwest of Naples.

SYSTEMS OF TAXATION

Discussed By Prominent Men of the Country.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 24.—A large number of prominent men from all parts of the United States, representing all the conflicting theories of what constitutes proper systems of taxation for raising revenue for federal, state and municipal government, met in the public library hall yesterday. The conference was called by the National Civic Federation.

The meeting was called to order by Frederick Judson of St. Louis, chairman of the Missouri delegation, who announced that in discussing papers delegates would be limited to five minutes each.

Prof. R. A. Seligman, instructor of political economy at the University of Columbia, read a paper on "Inequalities of taxation."

Hon. James A. Garfield of Cleveland spoke on "The listing of personal property."

Dr. Max West of Washington, a member of the national industrial committee, spoke on the taxation of farmers.

The proper method of taxing personal property was taken up and after a lengthy discussion of the subject a resolution offered by Prof. Seligman was passed, providing that steps be taken for the formation of a national organization for the reformation of taxation methods.

After a recess, Prof. Frederick C. Howe of Cleveland read a paper on the subject of federal restraint on the taxation of franchises.

A general discussion of Mr. Howe's ley of Wisconsin; Pines of Kentucky; Mather of Illinois; Judson of Missouri and Niles of Maryland participated. The next paper read was that of Chas. S. Fairchild of New York, former secretary of the treasury. Mr. Fairchild was unable to be present, and his address, entitled "The taxation of banks and trust companies," was read by L. Carrol Root.

Vice-President Roosevelt will be present at today's conference as the guest of the federation.

IN A MULE CART.

Convicted Commissary Officials Taken to Prison.

Manila, May 24.—The gates of Bilibid prison, Manila, swung open last night and admitted a mule wagon bearing three former United States officers, who reluctantly alighted and began to serve sentences in expiation of crimes in connection with the commissary scandals. The sentences read to the convicted men will be promulgated today. Capt. Frederick J. Barrows, late depot quartermaster of the department of southern Luzon, is sentenced to five years' imprisonment; Capt. James C. Reed, late depot commissary at Manila, to three years imprisonment, and Lieut. Frederick Boyer, late depot commissary at Calamba, to one year's imprisonment.

By order of the provost marshal, Gen. George W. Davis, a representative of the Associated Press was accorded an interview with the prisoners. Capt. Reed and Capt. Barrows seemed comparatively unmoved by their situation. Lieut. Boyer protested his innocence and seemed vindictive toward Capt. Barrows, who, he alleged, was alone guilty of misappropriating bacon.

Major Hale, commandant of the prison, cleared a store room to be occupied by the trio apart from the Filipino prisoners, but, as Lieut. Boyer avoids speaking to Capt. Barrows, other arrangements are probable.

Big Flowing Oil Well.

Marion, Ind., May 24.—What is probably the most productive oil well ever drilled in this part of the state was that yesterday in the Baldwin farm. The well is owned by Wilson & McCulloch and is located at the western edge of the city. The oil shot up as high as the derrick and after flowing one hour a tank holding 250 barrels was half filled. This indicates a production better than 2,000 barrels a day.

The Alaskan Boundary.

Ottawa, May 24.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier again referred yesterday in parliament to a meeting of the joint high commission which he said was important and would meet early on account of the attitude of Newfoundland. If the Alaskan boundary could not be settled by a compromise, then it should be referred to arbitration.

Mark Hanna Mustered In.

Cleveland, O., May 24.—Senator M. A. Hanna was last night mustered into Memorial Post, G. A. R., of this city. He was received with great enthusiasm and made a brief speech in reply to the congratulations upon the new honor conferred upon him.

Fish That Change Color.

It has been found that certain prawns, common along the coasts of England, change their color at least twice every 24 hours in order to harmonize with the stronger or weaker light prevailing near the surface or in the deeper water. As evening approaches these fish lose their distinctive day colors, and all assume a transparent azure hue. The change begins with a reddish glow, followed by a green tinge which gradually melts into blue. The day and night change has become so habitual that specimens kept in perpetual light or perpetual darkness nevertheless undergo the periodic alteration of color.

MERCHANTS' TALK

Presented Their Views on the Garnishee Bill

LEGISLATIVE APPORTIONMENT

Senator Helme Delivers Himself On the Array of Talent From Detroit, Then Votes for the Measure as a Mathematical Necessity.

Lansing, Mich., May 24.—About 100 merchants, etc., from several parts of the state appeared before Gov. Bliss yesterday and urged him to sign the Nevins garnishee bill. The governor was applauded and cheered when he came into the room where the callers were waiting. He briefly addressed those present.

"There are points in this bill that I do not like. If the bill had went through as I thought it would, it would have been much better than it is now, and would have suited you better, I think. However, I'll be glad to hear you on the points of this bill you wish to discuss."

The governor at first said that he objected to the provision of the bill providing for an $8 flat exemption of an employe's wages. He expressed the opinion that this exemption should apply to the weekly wages of an employe. However, the business men present explained that this provision would work all right in the practical operation of the bill. Then the governor talked as though he would sign the measure.

Gov. Bliss is also in a quandary over the Lowrey-Ward mortgage tax bill. Members of the state tax commission and others are knocking against the bill, because, they say, it would operate to take a considerable amount of property off the tax rolls. On the other hand, friends of the bill are writing the governor letters urging him to sign it in order to place foreign money loaners on the same basis as Michigan money loaners, and to prevent "double taxation" of mortgaged real estate.

Both houses decided to adjourn today over to Monday night at 9 o'clock.

The feature of the day in the senate was the debate and the diplomatic play of the Wayne senators over the representative reapportionment bill. Senator Kelly made a long and emphatic speech against restoring to Wayne its 14 members at the expense of one each from Muskegon and Bay. Earle was the only Wayne man to talk, and he made an equally emphatic speech on the other side. Helme took the chance to poke fun at Detroit's delegations.

"We have had Detroiters here," said he, "that smoked pipes; others that [illegible] some that drank nothing but milkshakes and others that took theirs by cases of pints; all kinds, in fact, and it's a little tough on us to have to have any more of 'em, as well as tough on Detroit to have to stand for any more of 'em here." He added, however, that under the constitution the matter of making a reapportionment is simply a mathematical calculation, and that there was no way of legally getting away from giving Detroit 14. Senator Kelly tried to have the Hurst bill substituted, a bill which he said was drawn by J. Herbert Cole with the advice and assistance of ex-Gov. Rich, and which gives Wayne 14, but spreads the loss on other counties than Muskegon and Bay. Detroit didn't care a rap which bill was taken, but the Hurst bill trod on Palmer's toes and he fought it. The substitute was lost, the other bill was amended so as to make it just as it came from the house, and it was then agreed to and passed by 26 to 3—Baird, Kelly and Sleeper.

Cleaned Up a Gang.

Port Huron, Mich., May 24.—Detective Clark cleaned up on a gang of alleged highway robbers yesterday morning, and Ax Hoffman, a pugilist, who was to fight last night in Sarnia, and Fred Pearson are locked up as principals, and Pearl Baldwin and George Zess are held as witnesses. For some time past, several farmers' rigs have been stolen, and some time later the rig would be found on the outskirts of the city, and the horse would wander around stripped of its harness. Clark ran the matter down and secured most of the stolen property. One more arrest will take place, and the entire crowd will have been corralled.

Badly Injured.

Mason, Mich., May 24.—E. Blakely was badly injured Wednesday evening while breaking a colt for J. B. West, about eight miles east of this city. Blakely fastened the lines around his waist. The colt became frightened, jerked Blakely from his feet, dragging him a considerable distance over rail fences, between barns, trees, etc. His skull was fractured and shoulder broken. His recovery is doubtful.

Died From An Old Wound.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 24.—Abraham Cowert died at the hospital here Wednesday night. During the Howard-Baker feud in Kentucky, Cowert was a participant. He was shot in the head, but survived. Later he moved to Union City, Mich. A blood tumor resulting from the rifle wound formed on the brain, and thus another fatality is to be reckoned in the trouble which existed between the two Kentucky families.

Germany Adopts American System.

Berlin, May 24.—During the past month experiments have been made between Berlin and Hamburg with the system of rapid telegraphy of Prof. Rowland of Baltimore. The results are most satisfactory, the new system easily doing double the amount of work done by the Baudot apparatus. The correspondent of the Associated Press understands that the German postal department intends to introduce the Rowland system between Berlin, Hamburg, Cologne, Leipsic and Frankfort.

Shudders at His Past.

To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." RAY'S RECRUIT

BY

CAPT. CHAS. KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER" "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

CHAPTER VI.

A territorial governor is not an awe inspiring official ordinarily, but the governor of Wyoming, relieved of his valuables at the point of the pistol, was not slow in seeking redress. From Butte he wired full particulars of the robbery to the department commander, who was at Pawnee just back from an inspection of the Sioux agencies, 50 miles to the north. The general was waiting for the east bound train at the depot hotel, was aroused in an instant, and lost no time in wiring authority to Colonel Atherton to use any means in his power to head off and capture the robbers without waiting for civil process. The news of the hold up with its attendant casualties wênt buzzing over the post at reveille, and barely had the story reached Atherton as he stood under the flagstaff receiving the reports of the troop commanders when out came the telegraph operator, racing, and the colonel read the hurriedly penned lines and turned to Ray. Somehow or other whenever any swift, hard riding had to be done, Ray and Ray's troop were the first fellows thought of.

"Let your men finish breakfast," said the colonel, "then—do your best." And he handed the dark eyed Kentuckian the dispatch.

In an hour from that time Mrs. Ray, holding her baby boy in her arms, was gazing from the north window of her army home at some black specks on the far horizon, and little Sandy, tugging at the skirts of her pretty morning wrapper, was coaxing for mother to hold him up too. The sorrel troop were up and away, heading for Wheelan Springs, on the Laramie trail, and bets were even between Stannard and Mainwaring that "Ray would nab the outfit before sundown."

But who could that "outfit" be? Jim Long said all were masked, and he recognized none. Scut, his fireman, died without a sign. Parks, the expressman, declared every form unfamiliar. Jarvis, the conductor, and Ryan, a brakeman, alone could furnish anything like a clew. Two of the desperadoes were dressed like two cowboys they had had aboard the night of the collision, a fortnight back, and the leader, who was tall, slender, well dressed, with the voice and intonation of a man of education and social position, closely resembled in build a passenger who boarded the sleeper that night at the Junction and left it after the accident and went to Pawnee. The division superintendent wired to Omaha such particulars as he could give. The legal representative and certain detectives of the road were ordered to leave for the scene by first train. The sheriff at Butte had a good sized posse in readiness by breakfast time and then started valiantly on the trail of Ray's troop, passing through Fort Ransom about the time that Mr. Dana was mounting guard.

Other sheriff's officials went out to Minden with the division superintendent, and others still pushed on to Pawnee, up on the broad plateau, to inquire for two cowboys, a tramp and a swell, all of whom had appeared there in company just after the smash up at Alkali Flats, none of whom were there now, but one of whom, the tramp, so called, looking so entirely a different man—with trimmed hair and beard and good clothes—as to have been unrecognizable had he not rashly given himself away to everybody by bragging about his exploits the night of the smash up. That tramp had boarded No. 3 at 3:30 a. m. at Pawnee with a ticket for Sweetwater, but, so it transpired, had checked his trunk only as far as Butte. All this by rapid telegraphing to and fro was developed before the posse started on its way, but not until after the despoiled train had changed engines at Butte, and then, according to the inexorable rules of the railway, had gone on again. Jarvis remembered that a very decent, quiet fellow boarded the forward passenger coach at Pawnee with a ticket for Sweetwater, but he did not connect him with the tramp so lavishly provided for by the "swell" the night of the collision. But, now they spoke of it, they were about the same size and build, and, what made it significant, that fellow seemed to have disappeared when the robbers jumped aboard and went through the passengers, nor did he appear again until just as the train pulled out for Butte after the robbers were gone. Wiring west after the rushing train speedily brought this answer: "No party with ticket from Pawnee to Sweetwater aboard." And as he had been seen and talked with and listened to up to the moment of the arrival of No. 3 at Butte Jarvis declared the man must be somewhere about the town at this moment, and Butte's few policemen were put in search.

All they discovered by noon was that such a party had been seen talking excitedly with a tall stranger in heavy overcoat and cap near the baggage room just after the train came in. The baggage man said that the man who presented check for the trunk from Pawnee was tall, slender and dressed in rough, heavy coat and traveling cap. The trunk was sole leather. It had a lot of foreign stamps, hotel posters and railway luggage slips all over it, but the baggage master had no time to examine it. Two men had carried the trunk away between them, declining the offers of the baggage man. Somebody remembered such a trunk being wheeled in a barrow up Hoyt street just after No. 3 came in, two men with it, a tall and a short, and that was all.

Recruit Hunter's pass was up at noon, and at 11:30 he jumped from a light wagon at the south gate and was hailed by the corporal of the guard as he was striding briskly toward his troop quarters:

"Say, young feller, come back here."

The tall recruit halted, turned and looked around, irresolute. It might be authoritative, it might be mere practical joke. At all events the corporal was responsible, and the soldier walked straight to where the noncommissioned officer was seated on a bench, near the hall door of the guardhouse.

"Where you been?"

"To town on pass," was the calm answer.

"What did you hear about that hold up?"

"Nothing of consequence."

"Well, your troop's gone thief catching, and you're to report to Sergeant Merriweather as soon as you come in. Now you've come in, you haven't any cigars or drinkables about you, have you? This is the custom house if you have."

Hunter looked neither annoyed nor disconcerted. Taking two or three cigars from his overcoat pocket, he said, "Catch!" tossed them carelessly to the vigilant wearer of the chevrons, hastened to barracks, deposited his bundles on the bed assigned him and looked up and down the now silent and almost deserted building in search of some one to tell him what had taken place. Two men, one laid up from the kick of a horse, the other with an arm in a sling, came down to investigate the contents of his bundles, but were disarmed of hostile intent by his easy good nature and prompt offer of cigars. Whisky he had none. Asking for Merriweather, he was told to look for him at his quarters.

"Catch him out of watching distance of the little woman!" said one of them, with a grin. "Mind your eye, Hunter. She'll be making up to you next," said the other, "and we don't want you to be found with your head in the horse pond, like Pat Shea." And then it transpired that Trooper Shea had been a devoted admirer of pretty Mrs. Merriweather while she was still housemaid at the Freemans and that Pat's devotions were equally divided between her and Muldoon's saloon until one winter's morning he was dragged by the legs from his icy winding sheet with a dreadful gash in his throat and the neck of a bottle still grasped in his frozen hand. Hunter obeyed his orders and went, and Mrs. Merriweather saw him coming and ran to her glass before she answered the sharp knock at the door.

"Why, it's Mr. Hunter!" she said. "Sure, I knew the step before I saw you! Come in, Mr. Hunter! The sergeant's gone to the commissary, and I expect him back every minute."

But the trooper's blue eyes glanced only indifferently into the coquettish and smiling face.

"I was directed here," he said, "to report to Sergeant Merriweather, but I'll go on down to the stables and stop on my return. Thank you, no!" he continued, with cold courtesy, as she again urged that he should enter, and strode away stableward with more than one pair of eyes from the laundresses' quarters gazing after him, those of Mrs. Merriweather being clouded and perplexed.

It had been a perfect morning, keen and frosty at guard mount, but warmer as the sun wheeled high toward the zenith, and Atherton had had the regiment out for drill. The broad prairie northeast of the post was alive with prancing, high mettled steeds, with dashing riders, and not a few carriages and Concord wagons, filled with ladies of the post, all rejoicing at having the regiment once more at home. For nearly two hours Atherton had had the seven troops in rapid movement here and there and everywhere over the plain, and now, the drill over, troop after troop came marching sedately and quietly homeward to cool and calm the horses before reaching stables. In full ranks, 50 men at least to each company, in their trim fitting fatigue dress and with the silken swallowtail waving at the head of each little column, they looked wonderfully businesslike and serviceable. The easy, practiced seat of every man, the nonchalant grace of every pose, the resolute, dust covered, sometimes devil may care faces, all seemed thoroughly in keeping with the scene and surroundings, thoroughly in accord with the buoyant action of the mettlesome mounts. Accustomed from boyhood to the best of horseflesh, a born rider and judge, Trooper Hunter could not but see that though these frontier steeds might lack the dainty trappings and satin coats of the park and avenues of Gotham, there were life and spirit, fire and endurance, in almost every one in each of the seven columns. Standing by the northward gate, he keenly studied each troop as it came jogging briskly in. The colonel and the major, the adjutant and certain other officers seemed to have grouped about the carriages of the ladies at the edge of the drill ground, but at least one officer rode with every troop, the best opportunity the newcomer yet had enjoyed of studying these future comrades with whom he might never expect to exchange a word or meet with more than the formal and punctilious touch of the hand to cap. They were moving at ease now until each troop in succession might cross the sentry post and be called to attention in recognition of the salute of its solitary occupant.

Barrie's Strange Theory.

A very strange theory is propounded in Mr. J. M. Barrie's new play. It is one of which those who hold the rights of women to be sacred will rightly disapprove, and assuredly the balance of justice does not seem to be very evenly held between men and women in this new dramatic problem, but the author would have us believe that the story he has set forth is not merely made for the stage, but is one of everyday life, and as such we are asked to accept his solution of the problem propounded as the best in the circumstances. Woman, it needs not to be said, is always forgiving and generous to the opposite sex, but why should a play be written to show that to save one man from the unhappiness which his own sin brings upon him two women must sacrifice themselves? The life of a pure and innocent girl must be clouded, the life of the "other woman" must be wrecked, because if either or both treated according to his deserts the despicable creature who has deceived wife and victim alike the punishment would be greater, we are asked to believe, than the sin warrants! Again, it is suggested in this production that a woman had far better marry a rake than risk spinsterhood, and indeed the character through whom this theory is propounded is even made to say that rather than lose the joys of wifehood and maternity a woman should close her eyes to the fact that her lover has wrecked another woman's honor, and, maybe, broken her heart. Surely it is as unjust to the noble band of spinsters to accept such a theory as it is degrading to the honorable estate of matrimony. —Philadelphia Ledger.

KLONDIKE BILL

Comes Home from Alaska.

A MAN WITH LOTS OF MONEY

Having Just Recently Returned from the Gold Fields and Purchased a Fine Farm near Tecumseh for his Newly Married Niece and Husband, will Start Them up in Life as a Wedding Gift—A Realistic Romance.

A few days ago there arrived in this village a gentleman familiarly known among his old friends as Uncle Bill, or Klondike Bill, as it was in Alaska where he had just recently accumulated a fortune in the gold fields. He had with him his newly married niece, Fannie, and husband, John.

They went directly to Hotel Emery. Said he, "This is a typical Michigan hotel of the first class. I have known J. H. Emery, the proprietor, for years, and he is mine host after mine own heart, a thorough business man, endowed with that delightful intuition that makes a guest feel at home, comfortable, contented and in mighty good luck. The house is one of convenience, and a home for the travelling public. The apartments are well furnished and the cuisine all that a superior chef and unlimited orders on the market can make it. I have engaged rooms for you to occupy until your own home is in readiness." With this remark Uncle Bill graciously presented the deed of the fine farm he had bought for them.

"After breakfast," said the old man, "I am ready to go and buy your outfit, but first of all we will drive out to the farm and see how you like it. To expedite matters, I have ordered a carriage from G. B. Garlinghouse, our enterprising liveryman. When the handsome carriage with elaborate trappings and prancing horses, drew up in front of the Hotel Emery, Fanny declared it was the finest turnout she had ever seen. "Yes sir-ee," replied Uncle Bill, "the three S's, 'Speed, Safety and Style,' is G. B. Garlinghouse's coat of arms. So, young folks, when you want to take a drive, either for business or pleasure, go to him for a rig every time." It was in this stylish turnout that the trip to the farm and the rounds of the village were made. For funeral outfits, weddings or picnic parties, this stable has the finest in the village.

"By the way," exclaimed Uncle Bill with a paternal air, "the next thing to look after is the lumber for those other improvements which are so absolutely necessary. Come with me and I'll introduce you to my old friends, Webster, Cobb & Co., who are the principal dealers in that line in this village. They have a well equipped and conveniently arranged lumber yard, planing mill factory and storehouse in connection. They carry the most complete line of building material in the county—everything from the sills for the foundation to the shingles for the roof, including doors, windows, newel posts, mouldings and lath. It is pleasant to deal with Webster, Cobb & Co., for their greatest aim is to give satisfaction to every customer, and everybody for miles around Tecumseh buy their lumber and building material from them. Special attention given to car lots."

"Now children, since you have bought the lumber and shingles for our new house and barn, where can we find a carpenter to do the work?" "That's so," said the old man, "and we don't want any botcher to do the work either, so in order that we may find a good man, I will go with you and see if we cannot get Geo. J. Kempf to do the work—that is if we can get him,' but I understand that he is always busy and has built the best houses and business blocks here in Tecumseh. Mr. Kempf is a builder of wide experience and considered the best carpenter and builder in the country." George J. Kempf got the contract for both the house and barn and received the entire praise of all for his excellent workmanship. He is building a house now for Dave McWilliams.

"You were speaking, uncle, of putting in a warm air furnace in our houses both on the farm as well as here in Tecumseh, what make of furnace do you intend to put in?" "Why, I have decided to put in the Beckwith Round Oak furnaces, as these furnaces have a world wide reputation, and are sold here by Satterthwaite Bros. These furnaces have been in the market since 1870 and are acknowledged by every person who is fortunate enough to own one to be all that can be said of a hot air furnace, viz.: Durability, economy, perfect in design, easily managed, will burn either coal or wood and many more equally as good points, and above all the prices are very moderate." It is needless to say that Satterthwaite Bros. got the contract for the furnaces.

"How about the plumber, uncle?" inquired Fannie. "You remember you said you would see somebody for that." "Jess so, jess so; and we shan't have any botcher do the work either. I'll go and see Mr. J. M. Ingersoll on Railroad street. We've got to have gas and water pipes put in, a hot water heater and a porcelain bath tub besides some sanitary fixin's, and he is the very man to do the work. He observes closely all the hygienic laws guarding against dangers from sewer gasses. You can always feel safe about the house when a practical man as I know Mr. Ingersoll to be, does the plumbing." The aforesaid plumber got the contract, did just what Uncle Bill said and won Fannie's praise for his excellent workmanship. He also does eavestroughing and tinwork.

Uncle Bill then inquired for a first class painter, grainer and paper-hanger and he was directed to the old reliable and only first class all round painter in Tecumseh, George T. Matteson, painter, decorator, calciminer and grainer, so Matteson got the contract.

"Having provided you with a cage for the bird," said Uncle Bill, "now the first thing we'll look after will be the furnishings for it." Hereupon Fannie energetically declared that she had heard so much about W. F. Sisson, the furniture dealer, that she had decided to go there. The result was that they were ushered into such a bewildering display that the girl was at first at a loss how to select. But she soon yielded to the seductiveness of a magnificent parlor suit, a bed room suit in golden oak finish that would do credit to any parlor bedroom. To this she added an easy rocker for Uncle Bill, and also one of those elegant $18 antique finished bed room sets for the servant girl, and didn't forget a most convenient and ornamental writing desk for "Hubby" John. At W. F. Sisson's.

"A pretty good start," said the old man, "and now we will go back to Satterthwaite Bros. and buy our hardware, stoves, tinware, etc." Here Fannie's housewifely instincts had full play in the marvels of kitchen apparatus. "There is not an establishment in this section that carries a more comprehensive stock of household furnishings than Satterthwaite Bros.," remarked Uncle Bill. "Every possible piece of kitchen furniture from a tin dipper to a cooking range, is here in all styles and varieties" If Fannie fails to accomplish wonders in the culinary art, it will not be for the want of superior cooking utensils, for she purchased a Garland range and also a genuine New Process gasoline stove and a Challenge refrigerator for summer use, with all equipments needed in a well regulated kitchen, besides New Era paints and oils.

"But look here, Uncle," interrupted the young man as they reached the street, "What about coal? We've got the stoves, but I reckon they won't be of much service without fuel. We cannot keep warm on love alone, can we?" "I am glad you mentioned it," replied Uncle Bill. "Buying so much in one day kinder befuddles a fellow. Fortunately, however, it is only a short distance down to Chilson & Moore's coal and wood office near the Cincinnati passenger station. They are my favorite dealers and sell good coal that burns up clear and leaves no klinkers. They screen their coal to make it clean, so I will buy my coal of Chilson & Moore. They sell hard and soft coal and always give full weight and prompt delivery."

"Uncle Bill," said Fannie, "I shall be so lonesome here without a piano in our house; is there any person here who handles pianos?" "Well, I should think so! There is J. A. Maus in the Dewey block, who sells the finest pianos in the country. He is reliable and you can depend upon what he tells you." "So we will go and see Mr. Maus," said Fannie. Uncle Bill was seen examining his pocketbook rather lugubriously. "I think I can afford it," said he, "and I admire your judgment in selecting one of Maus' pianos, as I am told that he has the best, and the best is always the cheapest." While at J. A. Maus' music store their attention was called to the fine line of instruments in stock, while Fannie soon selected the coveted piano with its beautifully artistic design of case and sympathetic and brilliant quality of tone and many other good points. She also admired the beautiful organs and his full line of sheet music.

"By the way," remarked Uncle Bill as they reached the street, "I must run down to Lilley State bank and get another check book. Come along with me and get acquainted with F. A. Shephard the cashier, for of course you will do business with them and it is always more pleasant to be personally acquainted with the people you do business with. This bank is as solid as the base of the universe and has a strong working capital. And say, John, Lucius Lilley, the president, is the oldest continuous banker in the state. You will find them ever ready to extend any accommodations compatible with business principles. They never experienced any trouble whatever during financial storms all these years."

At this point, somewhat to the confusion of John, the old man indulged in a half serious criticism of his personal appearance. "You are decidedly offstyle for a townsman," said he, "and we'd better go over to McCann Bros.' clothing store and see about some new duds." After John had fitted himself to a new suit, from the piles of fashionable garments that cover the tables of this extensively stocked establishment, Uncle Bill declared, "Now you look like a newly married man." Before leaving, having found prices and goods irresistible, John also invested in a complete outfit of gent's furnishings, from a late style hat to a dozen shirts, also a good farm suit. At this point Uncle Bill declared he would get suited too, and before leaving McCann Bros.' mammoth store he had purchased a complete outfit of wearing apparel for himself and John.

"Oh say, uncle," exclaimed Fannie, "where can I go for dry goods? This dress is hardly suitable, I must admit." "Well, my girl, if you want to select from one of the most popular establishments in the town, I will direct you to Anderson & Rosacrans who carry a stock of dress goods that for variety and real value, is seldom ssen outside the largest metropolitan cities. They carry all the new fabrics and you are sure to be guided right in your selections. You will find Anderson & Rosacrans pleasant to deal with and their employes polite and expert, while their prices cannot be duplicated." Fannie soon selected a pretty dress, latest style, and one of the celebrated R. & G. corsets, and also her lace curtains, portieres, comforts, carpets and— "Well, well," laughingly interrupted Uncle Bill, "right here is the place to buy." Fannie's order suggested her thorough appreciation.

'Let's see—I promised you a gold watch, didn't I?" queried Uncle Bill of Fannie, "and Adamson Bros.', jewelers and book sellers, is the place to buy one cheap." Entering this popular jewelry store the old man gallantly acquitted himself of the promise and then directed Fannie's attention to the superior silverware carried by the house. "There is no other such place in town," said the old man, "and I will guarantee the quality to be the very best. Pick out your family clock while here," he added. Adamson Bros. carry a magnificent line. "Don't forget another fact," he continued, "if ever you unfortunately need optical goods, this is the place to come. They have everything required to improve affected eyes, and say, my boy, remember they are also expert doctors of sick watches." They also carry a fine line of books and stationery and Tom has just returned from Chicago and making his summer purchases.

"Oh me! Oh my!" ejaculated Fannie as they halted before J. J. Belcher's show window. "What a perfectly lovely slipper." "Yes," said Uncle Bill, "J. J. Belcher's stock of fine boots and shoes can't be equalled in style and extent in this city. Go in, look and get acquainted." It might not have been policy to extend this invitation had not Uncle Bill known what wise economy it is to trade at this exclusive boot and shoe store, for Fannie found goods and prices so seductive that she purchased an outfit from a dark chocolate Oxford slipper to a handsome patent leather walking boot. John invested in gents fine shoes while Uncle Bill indulged in a pair of stout farm boots, and rubbers for the crowd. "No one needing footwear can resist the styles and prices offered by J. J. Belcher, of Tecumseh," remarked Uncle Bill.

"I would like to make you acquainted with my dentist friend, Dr. W. D. Reed too," said the old man, "whose office is over Avery & Co's. If you ever have to supplement your natural teeth"—"Ugh! Don't mention false teeth to me," cried Fannie, "I'll never carry 'pearly lies' in my mouth if I go toothless." "Oh, as for that," laughed Uncle Bill, "if you'll only consult a good dentist in time, you can save the catastrophe. Dr. Reed, for instance, is wonderfully expert in saving natural teeth by gold crowning and bridge work, and he has the skill and every mechanical appliance necessary to do his work with the least discomfort to his patrons. And he makes tooth filling a pleasure when he uses that local anæsthetic of his. I know because he used it on me and it is a daisy."

"Halt!" commanded Uncle Bill, as the party came in front of C. A. Wright's handsome drug store. "Walk right in." "Why, uncle, we're not sick, and—" "Guess I know that, but I 'spect it won't be long before this young man begins to take an interest in matters of paregoric and" "U-n-c-l-e!" "Well, we will go in anyhow, we may find some toilet article Fannie wants." Sure enough, before leaving she was loaded down with combs, brushes, face powders and ounces upon ounces of fine imported perfumes, besides buying several boxes of anti-headache remedy, patent medicines, etc. They also bought paints, oils and wall paper for their new house. "Don't forget to come here with your prescriptions," added Uncle Bill, "as C. A. Wright is a thorough pharmacist and uses only pure and reliable drugs."

"Yes, and while we are on this important topic of gastronomics, we must not forget meat. It goes hand in hand with groceries. Now to locate a meat market where you can get prime tender meats of all kinds and game in season, the Central meat market kept by Art Gove, is the place to supply you. This is the boss market of the village and popular with everybody who is particular to have the best. The reason for this is because he is very careful in the selection of stock and gets the best of everything and keeps nothing but the very best, and you are waited upon in a jiffy by a neat and polite assistant. To keep your 'hubby' in good humor, Fannie, trade at Art Gove's market every time as nearly all the people of the village and surrounding country do."

Woman-like Fannie was discussing the matter of how she would arrange her new house and was interrupted by Uncle Bill. "And these house-fixin's remind me," said he, "that you haven't got your dishes yet. The most famous stock in extent, quality and completeness is at O. G. Hunt's Economy Store, so we will have to go there." But the average reader need not be told what an array of tableware Fannie had to select from. There isn't positively a thing in the line of china, crockery, glass or porcelain needed for use or ornament in any part of the house that cannot be found at O. G. Hunt's Economy Store, in infinite variety and at wonderfully low prices. They also have a splendid stock of lamps of every description and a general line of bazaar and fancy goods. Fanny's large order suggested her thorough appreciation.

While walking down Chicago street, Fannie suggested that they buy their books and stationery. "And I have the place in my mind's eye where we can buy them," remarked Bill. "Yes, I must have an album," quoth Fannie. "And yes, a Bible with a reasonably big family register," interrupted the old man, "so while we are now at Adamson Bros.' jewelry and book store I am sure you will find many articles indispensible for the library, because Mr. Adamson has an unequalled stock." So here Fannie's purchases included miscellaneous books, fancy stationery and fine umbrellas. They also found an immense assortment of the late novels, magazines, periodicals, and newspapers, subscribing for everything in sight. Fannie remarked to the generous old uncle, "Well I don't know when to quit buying for there is such an immense variety to select from at Adamson Bros.', jewelers and booksellers."

"And as you are going to keep horses" continued the old man "of course you'll need harness. The best horse milliner in this city to my notion is C. A. Slayton. He uses only first class material and gives personal supervision to the minutest detail in buying of the manufacture. There is nothing in harness that cannot be had of him—heavy and light, single and double, plain, fancy and farm harness. They have all of them in stock, besides a fine lot of lap robes, horse nets and all kinds of turf goods, also exle grease and oils, and in fact one of the finest stocks you ever saw." After a visit to the harness and implement store, John said he thought if a man couldn't get satisfaction at C. A. Slayton's, it was his own fault; and he expressed himself as pleased with their candor and fairness.

"Speaking about bicycles," said Fannie, "and of all the different bikes we have examined around in the different stores, there are none of them that can come up to the bicycles we saw down at Satterthwaite Bros.' big hardware store where we bought our Beckwith round oak furnace, and that elegant Garland steel range." "Besides,' said Uncle Bill "the Satterthwaite Bros. are fine fellows to deal with and I know they will give us a good bargain in bicycles as they did in the other things we bought there' So Uncle Bill with his generous disposition bought both Fannie and John an elegant bicycle each and he also decided to buy one and learn to ride himself, as he found he could buy new high grade bicycles at Satterthwaite Bros.' cheaper than they were selling an inferior make at some of the other stores, and, by the way don't forget that they also handle everything pertaining to fishing, hunting, base ball and all atheletic and sporting goods.

"You spoke, uncle, about someone being such an expert blacksmith and scientific horseshoer." "Oh yes, nuf sed, glad you mentioned it," said Uncle Bill, "we'll leave Fannie here and I will take you down to his shop." Soon the pair arrived at James Elliott's shoeing smithy, on Railroad street opposite the Emery House, Uncle Bill introduced John to Mr. Elliott, remarking that Mr. Elliott is also the president of the village. "You will find him a good business man," said he, "and no slouch at horseshoeing either." He makes a specialty of scientific horse shoeing and general repairing and every farmer in our neighborhood and other neighborhoods too for that matter go to James Elliott to have their forging, horseshoeing and carriage repair work done.

"Now John," said Uncle Bill, "since we have been all around and examined the different buggies and wagons you say you like those buggies and wagons that you saw at Witherell & Son's carriage show rooms, corner Chicago and Pearl streets. Well now, you and Fannie have good taste in your selections of all kinds of vehicles, as Witherell & Son's carriages and buggies are the finest on earth, and they are the exclusive agents in the village of many different manufacturers goods from some of the leading makes of buggies. Witherell & Son are ready to deal with you on any of their lines and give you the best bargains on their goods possible. So they selected a handsome surrey and they found the prices very reasonable. They also handle harness and blankets.

"And another place I wish to take you, children, is to the Globe Mills, operated by the Wm. Hayden Milling Co. Your introduction to Tecumseh would not be complete without. Talk about flour; why, bless you, there ain't no flour to come up to '1900' or the Hayden Best Patent Flour made by this mill, as it is all made from choice selected winter wheat, and bread made from it does not become dry and stale, but retains moisture and the natural flavor of the wheat for several days. All good housewives use these brands as they are well and favorably known all over this section of Michigan. The Wm. Hayden Milling Co. employ none but expert millers and their name printed on a sack of flour is a safe guarantee of its superior quality." This mill pays the highest market price for all kinds of grain at all times.

"Now, my boy, as you have the farm you will necessarialy require all kinds of farm implements, so come with me down to C. A. Slayton's implement store and I will introduce you to my old friend Slayton, who is agent here for the McCormick Harvesting Co's goods and is well known among the farmers in this vicinity; and anything in the implement line that C. A. Slayton recommends, you may depend upon it that it is just as he says." So Uncle Bill bought John a roller and a McCormick binder and mower, a McCormick steel rake and celebrated McCormick binder twine, an American cultivator and other arsicles for the farm, together with a handsome lumber wagon, a top buggy, a bicycle and a harness. He also bought salt, lime, cement, fertilizers, land plaster, etc.

"Now," continued Uncle Bill, "for a picture of this crowd in good old country fashion, and the place to get them is at W. J. Sissem's ground floor gallery in the Marks block. His pictures are grand in fidelity and finish. I want one full size photo for my study and some small ones for my friends. W. J. Sissem has the soul of a true artist. All his work is a labor of love, in which he will not stop short of perfection, and as he is famous for successfully enlarging and gives satisfaction in this class of work also, I want to give you a life size representation of yours truly." (Uncle Bills picture may be seen at W. J. Sissem's gallery at any time the reader desires to call.)

Upon summing up the wonderful events of the day, Fannie began to express thanks. "You have bought us everything," she exclaimed.

"Only one thing," replied Uncle Bill reflectively, "but I can remedy that. W. F. Sisson, the furniture man, always has a nice line of them and you can get one whenever you want it; I'll pay for the best." "Why, Uncle, what on earth can it be?" "Well, it's a baby buggy, and—"

But Fannie had fainted.

Geo. VanAtta has gone to Lima, O., to take a run between Lima and Detroit on the D. & L. N.

D. & L. N. HAS CHANGED HANDS AND NOW BECOMES THE DETROIT SOUTHERN.

The Detroit & Lima Northern railway was sold at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the depot of the road at Lima, O., Walter S. Harsha, clerk of the United States circuit court, of Detroit conducting the sale. The purchaser was Samuel Hunt, president of the Ohio Southern. The two systems will be merged into one and renamed the Detroit Southern railway. The addition will make a total of 527 miles of track, reaching from Detroit to Wellsville, O. It is also proposed to build 22 miles of road into West Virginia and connect with another line of 150 miles.

Samuel Hunt will remain president of the new company, Frederick Dewey, present general manager of the Lima Northern, will occupy the position of general manager. The sale will probably be ratified by the United States court within ten days, but no radical changes will be made for 60 or 90 days. Detroit will now have a direct connection with the richest coal fields in Ohio.

More Violation of the Fish Law.

The Richardson brothers, of Springville, who are charged with spearing fish in an inland lake, have engaged Fred Wood and Henry C. Smith for their attorneys. The case has been adjourned in a justice court at this place to June 19 and the Richardsons say they will fight it to the supreme court if necessary. Deputy Game and Fish Warden Deuel and County Warden Wilson, of this place, caught the brothers on the Springville mill pond at night and arrested them for spearing. The officers confiscated all the fish, jacks, spears, etc., and it is alleged appropriated the fish to use on their private tables. The Richardsons also claim to enjoy the right to spear and fish as they choose, because they own the land under the water of the pond, which is made by a dam on the stream called Wolf Creek. A fund has been made up among the farmers about Springville and the lakes in northern Lenawee to put up a strong fight. These farmers and fishermen lay the claim that the two game wardens are working more in the interests of Tecumseh sportsmen than they are to protect the laws. Game Wardens Deuel and Wilson claim the defendants were spearing fish against the law and it will no doubt take the court to decide which side is right.

NEW LUMBER FIRM.

The Lumber Business of Temple, McClure & Co. Purchased by WEBSTER, COBB & CO.,

Who Own Similar Concerns at Eaton Rapids, Ypsilanti and Two Other Places in Michigan.

Yesterday a check signed by Webster, Cobb & Co. and made payable to Temple, McClure & Co., changed the interests in the lumber and planing mill business from latter to former firms. It is the purpose of Webster, Cobb & Co. to enlarge the plant in all details of the business. The lumber stock will be increased to be as complete and large as any in the county. The mill will be worked to its full capacity and the new firm looks upon Tecumseh as a good point for a first class concern of this kind. Mr. F. H. Lyman, late of Chicago, where he has been fourteen years in the lumber and manufacturing business, has an interest in the business and will be resident manager. It is likely that the firm name will be changed as soon as the firm gets nicely to running.

Webster, Cobb & Co. is a strong firm and the HERALD bids them welcome to Tecumseh to take the place of Temple, McClure & Co., which latter firm of men has always done a good business and been a credit to the circles and affairs of Tecumseh.

PRECIOUS STONES.

The Methods by Which They Are Tested by Experts.

In a lecture on precious stones recently delivered before the Industrial association of Berlin, Dr. Immanuel Friedlaender said that the testing of diamonds is comparatively simple. The common test for hardness suffices. If the stone resists strong attacks, it is certain to be genuine; if it does not, the damage is insignificant, as only an imitation has been destroyed. This test, however, is doubtful with rubies. If a ruby can be affected by a steel file or by quartz, it is surely not genuine, but such a test with a topaz is liable to injure a valuable stone.

The test for hardness is of no avail with emeralds, as this stone is not much harder than quartz and in addition possesses the quality of cracking easily.

For examining rubies and emeralds the optical test is best. A glass magnifying about 100 times suffices. Every expert knows that almost all precious stones have little flaws. Nearly every ruby and all emeralds have many defects, which are so characteristic that the genuineness of the stones is readily established. Such a test is very necessary with rubies, because the imitations are very deceiving. Their color is absolutely durable and often much finer than that of the genuine, although it may be stated that a somewhat yellowish tint is always suspicious.

The only reliable way in which genuine rubies can be told from imitations is by the minute air bubbles of the latter, which become clearly visible under the magnifying glass. These are not to be found in the natural gem. On the other hand, the imitations lack certain defects characteristic of genuine rubies—certain vacuums, whose outlines are much more indistinct than those of the air bubbles in imitations.

True emeralds have similar characteristic defects, such as inclosures of liquids and curious dendrites. Sapphires also show peculiar netlike formations.

SOUTHERN MOUNTAINEERS.

The Part They Played In the War Between the States.

It is odd to think that the southern mountaineer was not discovered until the outbreak of the civil war, although he was nearly a century old then, and it is really startling to realize that when one speaks of the southern mountaineers he speaks of nearly 3,000,000 people who live in eight southern states—Virginia and Alabama and the southern states between—and occupy a region equal in area to the combined areas of Ohio and Pennsylvania, as big, say, as the German empire, and richer, perhaps, in timber and mineral deposits than any other region of similar extent in the world. This region was and is an unknown land. It has been aptly called Appalachian America, and the work of discovery is yet going on.

The American mountaineer was discovered, I say, at the beginning of the war, when the Confederate leaders were counting on the presumption that Mason and Dixon's line was the dividing line between the north and south and formed, therefore, the plan of marching an army from Wheeling to some point on the lakes and thus dissevering the north at one blow. The plan seemed so feasible that it is said to have materially aided the sale of Confederate bonds in England, but when Captain Garnett, a West Point graduate, started to carry it out he got no farther than Harpers Ferry. When he struck the mountains, he struck enemies who shot at his men from ambush, cut down bridges before him, carried the news of his march to the Federals, and Garnett himself fell with a bullet from a mountaineer's squirrel rifle at Harpers Ferry.—Scribner's Magazine.

The Honorable Board.

Sam Rawson occasionally said a good thing, and one of these occasions chanced to be the town meeting. The people of Sam's village could not understand how the money appropriated for the roads had vanished with such poor results.

A stretch of road running past Sam's house was in notoriously poor condition, although Sam declared that he had paid liberally to have it put in good order, and there was general interest when Sam rose to make his statement before the selectmen.

"I'd just like to say one thing," he drawled, heedless of the fact that he had interrupted an indignant neighbor. "I don't want to make any fuss, but I'd just like to ask the honorable board of highwaymen"—

That was as far as he could get. A roar of laughter swept over the town meeting and showed its effects in the red faces of the "highwaymen."—Youth's Companion.

LIGHTNING'S FATAL WORK.

Two Persons Killed—Damage by Wind and Rain.

Olivet, Mich., May 24.—A terrific wind and rain storm passed over this section of the state yesterday afternoon, blowing down barns and fences. C. A. Newcomb was standing in his barn at the time. The hurricane came along and blew it over, crushing him under the debris. When taken out Newcomb was dead. Reports show that the wind did considerable damage to shade trees.

Benton Harbor, Mich., May 24.—A heavy electrical storm passed over this city Thursday afternoon, doing considerable damage. The most serious results were noted around the electric street car barns, where the fixtures were torn down and connections destroyed.

Conductor John Brown of St. Joseph was badly shocked. The house of Wm. Kennedy was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. Fire was also started in Peters's lumber and shingle yards, but was extinguished by the company's fire department. The loss from the two fires amounts to several thousand dollars, besides other damage from the storm.

Cassopolis, Mich., May 24.—Mrs. Edith Stretch, aged 60 years, living one mile north of here, was struck by lightning and instantly killed last evening about 7 o'clock, while standing out in the door yard.

Marshall, Mich., May 24.—A terrific wind, electrical and rainstorm burst over this city last evening, and the downpour converted the streets into rivers. Considerable damage was done by the flooding of cellars.

HUNTING HORSE THIEVES.

Armed Vigilance Committee Makes It Warm for Them.

Prescott, Mich., May 24.—For some time past horse thieves have been getting in their work in this vicinity and the officers were unable to locate them. The people became thoroughly aroused when it was learned that valuable teams had been stolen from John Clark of this place and from Andrew Smith and John C. Lundy of Arenac.

A vigilance committee was formed, and accompanied by the sheriffs of Arenac, Iosco and Ogemaw counties, with all of their deputies, a big man hunt was organized. The woods were scoured in all directions and the gang located in an old camp in Reno township, Iosco county.

When the officers approached the place they were met with a shower of bullets. No one was hit, however, and the deputies returned the fire. After the smoke of the battle had cleared away, it was found that all had escaped but one, who was identified as Alfred Yarmes. He was captured and taken to Standish, where he was locked up. Another of the party is said to have been Enoch Yarmes, a brother of Alfred, and the officers are now searching the woods for him. The horses were recovered.

SCORED A POINT.

Court Admits Expert Testimony in a Murder Trial.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 24.—The defense scored heavily in the Monrow-Aukerman murder trial yesterday. The only witness was County Physician Young, who was called by the people to testify concerning the wounds. On cross-examination by Attorney Carney, he was put through a series of hot questions on insanity, the defense beginning to make its chief point.

It is believed the defense will put on witnessed showing that Aukerman inherits insanity from his ancestors. His neighbors will testify that he has acted queerly and been morose and melancholy since childhood. The attorneys had a long argument over accepting Dr. Young as an expert witness on the subject, the court finally overruling the objections. Aukerman is very cool, and talks occasionally with his sweetheart, Josephine Smith, who sits beside him.

Expect Indictments.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 24.—The grand jury was busy examining side lights on the water scandal yesterday. Seventeen witnesses were called, including business men, brokers, bankers and newspaper men and their examination is supposed to have been to ascertain how freely some of those suspected of boodling spent their money and where the money came from. The jury will probably continue operations on the water scandal for several days yet, and several indictments are looked for. Then a recess may be taken before the investigation of other scandals is begun.

Jack Will Be Brought Back.

Owosso, May 24.—Four months ago Jack Krieger of Flint is alleged to have robbed Archie McDonald of $20. Jack gave the officers a wrong steer when they came to look him up, and while they were searching for his partner, who later got 90 days, Kreiger disappeared. He was arrested at Elgin, Ill., and will be brought back by Sheriff Gerow.

Fourteen Lives Lost.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 24.—The Tennessee river reached 35.8 at this place yesterday afternoon and last night night was slowly falling. Its tributaries in upper east Tennessee, where the greatest loss has resulted from the flood, have rapidly receded into their banks, revealing wreckage of houses and bridges and ruined crops. The loss of life thus far reported is 14, though it is not improbable that there are others.

GET STRONG

Vinol Makes Weak People Strong.

WE GUARANTEE IT WILL DO SO.

WE KNOW OF NO TONIC OR REBUILDER LIKE IT.

Vinol does create strength.

We know that and have proved it in many instances.

The reason Vinol rejuvenates and strengthens a person is that it acts directly upon the stomach, strengthening and toning up this great vital organ and enabling it to obtain for itself, from the food that is taken into it, the elements which are required to make firm healthy flesh and muscle tissue, sound bone structure and pure healthy blood.

Vinol does this in a scientific way and is enabled to do it because it contains, dissolved in a delicate mild wine, in a highly concentrated state, the active principles of cod-liver oil.

Vinol does not contain any of the grease that formerly characterized cod-liver oil, hence is free from all the objectionable features which made it impossible for patients to take or retain that vile-smelling remedy into their stomach.

Vinol in its favorable action upon the stomach and other organs of the body acts also in a beneficial way upon the nerves and brain, and will be found to be invaluable to brain workers as well as body workers.

The following letter is from a well-known authoress. It reads as follows: "I wish to acknowledge the receipt of the Vinol and testify to its great benefits. Since taking it I am much improved in health, and during the intense heat of last August I should not have been able to continue in my literary work if it had not been for the strengthening properties of Vinol. Yours in gratitude."—ELLA STARR, 106 W. 82d St., N. Y. City.

We wish any one suffering from weakness, a demoralized condition of the nerves, or a susceptibility to wasting diseases, to call on us and hear what we have to say in regard to Vinol.

Try it on our recommendation, and if you find it does not do everything we claim for it, we will gladly refund to you the amount you have paid us.

A Baby's Birth

is very much like the blossoming of a flower. Its beauty and perfection depends entirely upon the care bestowed upon its parent. Expectant mothers should have the tenderest care. They should be spared all worry and anxiety. They should eat plenty of good nourishing food and take gentle exercises. This will go a long way toward preserving their health and their beauty as well as that of the little one to come. But to be absolutely sure of a short and painless labor they should use regularly during the months of gestation. This is a simple liniment, which is to be applied externally. It gives strength and vigor to the muscles and prevents all of the discomforts of pregnancy, which women used to think were absolutely necessary. When Mother's Friend is used there is no danger whatever.

Mother's Friend

JEWEL MALADIES.

Precious Stones That Are Subject to Serious Changes.

The decoloration of precious stones when they have been exposed to the air for a long time is considered one of the most frequent maladies. Among the colored stones, the emeralds, rubies and sapphires are those which remain intact best. Nevertheless they are not exempt from changes, as has been proved by many experiments recently made in Paris. Two rubies of the same size and shade were kept for two years, one in a showcase and the other away from all light. At the end of this term a comparison revealed that the first had become somewhat lighter in color.

The influence of light makes itself felt more plainly on topazes and garnets. The garnet turns much paler in a short time, while the topaz assumes a darker shade and even loses the brilliancy possessed by it when freshly cut.

The most sensitive stone in this respect is the opal. This stone draws its marvelous rainbow reflections from numerous little clefts which allow the light to pass and reflect it in different directions. Often the opal stands the manipulations of cutting and polishing well, and all of a sudden it splits. It suffers always by excess of heat. Owing to its chemical composition it is sensitive to all the changes of temperature.

Pearls deteriorate very easily. In the fire they are transformed into a piece of lime. Placed in contact with an acid, they behave as lime or marble would under the same conditions. It sometimes happens that during the work, if the hand touching them is very sweaty, they lose their luster or break, being attacked by the acid of the perspiration.

Since pearls are composed of concentric layers of mother of pearl, it is sometimes possible to repair them by taking off the outer layer, but this operation is extremely difficult and delicate. If the interior colors are injured there is no remedy.

Diamonds are less sensitive; still it is not prudent to take them too near the fire.—Jewelers' Circular-Weekly.

THE HELPFUL WOMAN.

Her Advice to Her Husband and the Result of Following It.

There was once a Woman whose Husband Depended on the State of the Market for his Daily Toast. One Day he Appeared before Her with a Sad Countenance.

"All is Over, my Dear," said he. "Wheat is Way Down, and I doubt if after Tomorrow we shall have More than Ten Thousand a Year to Live On. I am Sorry that I Married you to Drag you Down to This, but I must Tell you Sooner or Later. I am a Ruined Man."

"Nay, do not Lose Heart," said his Wife. "Can you not Speculate Further?"

"I cannot," he replied, "for I have Lost my Nerve. My Friends Urge me to Throw what I Have into Copper, but I Dare Not. Five Thousand a Year would Hardly buy Croquettes for Two. I would Better Keep what I have Saved from the Smash."

"At any rate," said she, "come Out and Have some Lunch. Let us Go to Sherry's and get a Nice Litle Bird. Then you will Feel Better."

"Bird!" exclaimed her Husband. "Unhappy Woman, if you see anything better than Broiled Chicken and Beef a la Mode for the Rest of Your Life, you will Do Well. In my present Frame of Mind I would Suggest a Night Lunch Cart."

"Let us have One Good Meal at least," urged his Wife, "before we Die to the World. I have Twenty Dollars in my Purse. I will Buy our Lunch with that; after that the Night Lunch."

"Very well, for the Last Time," replied her Husband.

Then they went to an Expensive Restaurant and Ate a more than Satisfactory Luncheon. At the end of it her Husband said:

"I think Better of that Copper than I Did."

Then he went Back to Wall Street and Made Sixty Thousand Dollars in Thirty-eight Minutes.

This teaches us that Digestion is the Better Part of Valor.—Century.

Use For Old Envelopes.

Rigid economy is the mother of accumulation. One of the busier business men of this city, with offices on Broadway, never purchased a scratch-book in his life and never wastes a fresh piece of paper on a memorandum or a column of figures. Every envelope that comes in his mail is sliced apart, back from front, and the front, or address side, is preserved for use. The inside forms a clean, smooth sheet 3½ by 6¼ inches. One of the millionaires of Boston made his start by saving empty nail kegs and selling them back to the nailmakers for 10 cents each in trade. His clerks were accustomed to kicking in the staves and burning them in the stove.—New York Press.

Sinking Spells,

fainting, smothering, palpitation, pain in left side, shortness of breath, irregular or intermittent pulse and retarded circulation all come from a weak or defective heart. Overcome these faults by building up the heart-muscles and making the heart-nerves strong and vigorous. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is the remedy to use. It is the best.

"I had fainting and smothering spells, dizziness with a full feeling in my head and deranged stomach. I heard of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and at once began its use. I could see an improvement after the first dose, and just two bottles cured me completely."

AN INDIAN CIGAR SIGN.

The Fate That Overtook One Aggressive Wooden Savage.

The city of Little Muddy, on the upper Yellowstone, was an exceedingly wide awake town in 1887. When it had reached the mature age of 3 months, every kind of business man was represented except the cigar dealer, and the next week a man from Chicago named Stark opened a tobacco store, with a large, gaudy and aggressive wooden Indian in front, holding a tomahawk savagely in one hand and a bunch of cigars in the other. It would take a chapter to tell of all the trouble Stark had with that wooden aborigine. This variety of sign was rare in that region, and gentlemen not unconnected with the stock growing industry who came in from the ranges wearing spurs and weapons would resent his threatening attitude—for that matter, no Indian, even the most peaceably disposed, was popular. He was knocked off his pedestal half a dozen times a day. Stark learned to know what had happened whenever he heard a dull crash in front and would step outside and restore his fallen warrior.

But the red man did not meet his Waterloo till Tobe Hartley and a friend, preserved to us under the name of Long Isaac, came in from the Lightning's Nest neighborhood. A close friendship existed between these two worthies. It was their first vacation from the ranch for several months. They wandered about town in a receptive mood and sought to enjoy their visit. No facts are extant concerning their condition after some hours, but we may perhaps be allowed our suspicions. Finally they separated, and Tobe, coming along to the Indian and not noticing his upraised hatchet, sat down at his feet to rest. He soon fell asleep and sank lower. At this juncture Isaac came around the corner and took in the tragic situation at a glance.

"Killed my partner for a simple bunch of cigars, did you?" he cried. "Well, we'll see about it!" and he produced his firearms and began shooting accurately and rapidly. At the end of ten minutes Stark gathered up his noble savage in a basket, while the resuscitated Tobe and the avenging Isaac moved off arm in arm.—Harper's Magazine.

BATTLES OF NATURE.

Unceasing Struggles Which End In Survival of Fittest.

We read the tablets of long ago which the geologist has deciphered for us, and we find them an endless story of battles. The successful species which occupy the great geological horizons have come out of great tribulation. The trilobites and stone lilies of the silurian period, the gigantic club moss and fluted sigillarians of the coal age, the enormous ammonites of the jurassic and chalk epochs, the mighty elephants and majestic deer forms of the tertiary era are magnates of the times and masterpieces of the struggle. They have been redeemed at great price, even of a thousand species and tens of thousands of individuals who fell short of the typical fitness and were killed out. These magnates, each in its turn, were pioneers of progress, like the scouts of a great army and were caught in a physiological ambush.

The pedigree of the horse in the most recent past has been made out, traced shall we say, for a hundred thousand years before man came on the scene (for Lord Kelvin asked the geologist to hurry up and not be too lavish with time or we should have said 250,000 years before man). The fleetness, grace and strength of the horse are owing to his ability to walk on one toe, to which have been correlated the wonderful instincts by which he has become the partner of man in his industries and struggles. He has been derived in almost a strict gradation from the two toed, three toed, four toed and five toed ancestors which flourished in the ages which preceded man. Myriads of individuals and all the species and varieties died out to make room for the one toed selection to enable this favorite to occupy the ground unthwarted by crossing or by recurrence to average forms. He was redeemed at a great price and has come through a great tribulation.—Contemporary Review.

Only a Lawyer.

When Justice Bookstaver was on the supreme court bench, he had as special officer or attendant a punctilious old German, who always stood guard at the door leading to the justice's private chambers when the justice was within. One day a prominent lawyer and two of his clients called and asked if the justice would receive them.

The officer threw open the door and called out loudly to the justice:

"Shudge! Two shentlemans und a lawyer vants to speak mit you."

The three gentlemen laughed.

"Vor vhat you laff, eh?"

"Don't you count me a gentleman?" asked the lawyer.

"Ach, you're a lawyer only; dat's different."—New York Mail and Express.

A Crownless Coronation.

A coronation without a crown sounds distinctly Irish, yet such was in effect the ceremony in which Henry III took the most prominent part at Gloucester on Oct. 28, 1216. On this occasion a plain circle was used instead of a crown, which had been lost with the jewels and other baggage of King John in passing the marshes of Lynn or the Wash near Wisbeach.—London Telegraph.

Evasion.

"See here, you sir!" cried her father. "Didn't I tell you never to enter my house again?"

"No, sir, you didn't," replied the persistent suitor. "You said not to 'cross your threshold,' so I climbed in the window."—Exchange.

The Counterfeit Bill.

The average counterfeit bill shows better work on the right hand side than on the left. More care is taken to make the work accurate, because unless a man is left handed it is customary in counting a pile of bills to hold the left ends down and turn up only the right ends. The assistant in the city banks now reverses the process and turns the bills with his left hand.

Stylish.

"What's dem spots on you all's forehead?" asked Mr. Erastus Pinkley.

"My wife done gimme dem," answered Mr. Simpkins Colliflower. "Dat's de stylishes' kin' o' decorations. Dem's poker dots."—Washington Star.

Proper Return.

"I hurl the lie back in your teeth!" he cried.

Which was quite appropriate, for they, too, were false.—Philadelphia North American.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley, of Ann Arbor, Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter, of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache," "modern wonder-workers," etc.

Mr. Wooley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

A ball game was played in Milan Thursday afternoon between Milan and Dundee base ball teams, score 14 to 12 in favor of Dundee.

Chas. Henry Shoman, of Ann Arbor, and his colored boy quartette, gave a grand entertainment at the Haynes' opera house last Wednesday under the supervision of the Epworth League. Mr. Shoman is a good elocutionist and humorist and it seems strange that more of the members of the League were not there.

The Dramatic in Life.

The undying interest which is taken in the theater is explained by the very profound line with which Shakespeare began a very silly speech, "All the world's a stage." People as a rule take no interest in anything that is not dramatically (or, as in the case of politics, melodramatically) formulated. Any creed to be popular must be dramatically stated. Therefore the gospels are preferred to the epistles. Æsop's fables are remembered because they are the truth about things stated dramatically and morally.—F. G. Bernard Shaw.

An Armless Wonder.

Bulwer in his "Artificial Changeling" makes mention of one John Simons, a native of Berkshire, England, born without arms or hands, who could write with his mouth, thread a needle, tie a knot, shuffle, cut and deal a pack of cards, etc. This wonderful personage was exhibited in London in 1653.

Quite a Relief.

Husband—What do you do when you hit your thumb with a hammer? You can't swear.

Wife—No; but I can think with all my might and main what a perfectly horrid, mean, inconsiderate, selfish brute you are not to drive the nails yourself.—New York Weekly.

Legislative Race for Adjournment Has at Last Entered the Home Stretch.

WE DO THINGS BETTER NOW

Comment on the New Corporation Tax Bills—Classification of Railway Freight Rates.

Lansing, Mich., May 28.—Tomorrow at midnight will, to all intents and purposes, mark the close of the regular session of the forty-first legislature of the state of Michigan. To be sure the resolution adopted by the two houses fixes final adjournment for June 6 at noon, but it also provides that no business other than the preparation of bills for presentation to the governor for his signature shall be transacted after tomorrow. The result will be that Thursday morning's trains will take the great majority of the solons out of the city to their respective homes, and, sad to relate, the places that knew not a few of them will know them no more forever. Under the old system of enrolling manuscript bills for presentation to the governor, only three days intervened between the cessation of regular business and final adjournment, but now that these bills are prepared by the printer more time is required. The new system is altogether the better one, insuring much greater accuracy and an altogether file for preservation in the archives of the state. It was inaugurated four years ago and has given the greatest satisfaction. Each morning between Thursday and the hour set for final adjournment the presiding officers will rap the atmosphere and two or three hangers-on to order at a given hour, and then promptly declare the body adjourned for lack of a quorum until the following day at a like hour. On the 5th inst. an adjournment will be taken until the following day at 12 o'clock, at which hour each house will be declared adjourned sine die, and, unless some exigency which makes the calling of an extra session necessary is encountered, the work of the present legislature will come to an abrupt end.

REPRESENTATIVE D. M. FERRY, JR.

Prediction That Was Fulfilled.

Another correct prediction was made last week, so I feel that my reputation as a prophet has not been completely shattered, after all. This time I was right in predicting that the two houses would eventually adopt the report of the conference committee on the so-called railroad tax bill. There was very little discussion in either body—practically none in the senate—when the report finally came up for consideration. Some of the members of the lower house would have been far better satisfied with a bill that included sleeping car and telegraph and telephone companies, but they voted for the conference compromise measure, as they deemed it the best that could be had. About nineteen, however, refused to be comforted. They preferred nothing to what the conference committees had prepared for them, and, therefore, voted against the bill. As presented to the governor for his signature, which will doubtless be attached to it, the bill provides for taxing on an ad valorem basis railroad and union depot and station companies, fast freight, refrigerator car and car loaning companies.

Taxes on Other Corporations.

The corporations eliminated from the bill as originally passed by the house are sleeping car, telephone and telegraph companies. The first named paid the state of Michigan the munificent sum of $82. Following the disposition of the railroad tax bill the house passed a bill providing for a specific tax of 3 per cent. on the gross Michigan earnings of sleeping car companies, and another measure fixing the specific tax rate of telephone companies at 3 per cent. and of telegraph companies at 7 per cent. on their gross Michigan earnings. The telephone rate is the same as in the existing law, but the telegraph rate is an increase of 4 per cent.

State Tax Commission.

Simultaneously with the passage of the railroad tax bill the two houses passed a bill increasing the number of members of the state tax commission from three to five, and it is expected that the governor's nominations of the two additional commissioners will be sent to the senate today. It appears to be a foregone conclusion that one of the new commissioners will be ex-State Senator Ira T. Sayre, of Flushing, but nothing is definite is known about the other. In the hope of having an upper peninsula man on the commission Governor Bliss tendered the appointment to Graham Pope, of Houghton, but after considering the matter for several days that gentleman declined to accept the honor, so it is not at all likely that the place will go to any one above the straits of Mackinac. The most active candidates are ex-Auditor General Roscoe D. Dix, of Berrien Springs, and City Assessor George C. Winslow, of Kalamazoo. The latter has made a most enviable record as assessor in the celery city and has an enthusiastic following.

Classification of Freight Rates.

Shippers throughout the state will be interested in the Hardy bill, which provides for the classification of freight rates, etc., and which stands just a fair show of becoming a law, having been agreed to by the house. This bill establishes a freight bureau as an adjunct to the railroad commissioner's department, and provides for a commission to consist of the railroad commissioner and two persons to be appointed by the governor for terms of six years each at an annual salary of $2,500. This commission is to classify rates, fix minimum rates and investigate all cases of alleged discrimination in rates on the part of railroad companies. An important provision bearing upon this feature of the proposed law is as follows:

"Upon the hearing the commisisoners shall take into consideration the lowest schedule of rates in effect by any railroad company for substantially the same service in this or any other state. Also if the company complained of is operating beyond this state, or has traffic arrangements with other lines beyond this state, their several freight schedules shall be taken into consideration in determining what is a reasonable rate or classification for substantially a similar service. After such hearing the commissioners shall fix reasonable maximum charges and classifications for all kinds of property and notify the several roads thereof. The classification and charges shall govern all roads in this state, and in no event exceed the charges now in effect or hereafter fixed by the decisions of any court or by any of the provisions of this act."

Helme's Anti-Trust Bill.

Senator Helme has succeeded in getting his anti-trust bill away from what he conceived to be a hostile committee and having it placed on the general order. This bill is simply a copy of the Missouri anti-trust law, which is a very brief document lacking complications. Among other things this law requires every firm and corporation doing business in the state to file annually with the secretary of state an affidavit to the effect that they do not belong to any pool, combination or trust, and provides that failure to file such affidavit shall be punishable by forfeiture of license to do business and a fine of $1,000. In this connection it may be interesting to note that within a very few days Judge Spencer, of the circuit court of St. Louis, has held that failure to make affidavit does not merit the punishment provided, but that such failure makes it obligatory upon the county attorney to prove that the accused firm or corporation was instrumental in forming a trust or that it belonged to a trust, and in the event of proof that the firm was in a trust, then the fine and other penalty should be imposed.

Apportionment Out of the Way.

The apportionment bills are all out of the way now, having passed the senate after being fought by several senators whose territory is disastrously affected thereby. The provisions of these bills, showing how present congressional, senatorial and representative districts are affected, were set forth in my last letter.

License for Embalmers.

A rather important law enacted last week is that which provides for the licensing by the state board of health of embalmers who prepare bodies of persons dead from contagious and infectious diseases for transportation before interment. The bill provides that such embalmers shall have certificates issued by the state board of health after examination. The objcet is to prevent the spread of contagious diseases by the improper preparation of bodies for transportation in the states. The examination fee is $5, and all expenses of the examination are to be paid from the fees collected. The annual renewal of licenses is not contemplated.

Law for the State Census.

The new law providing for the taking of the regular state census of 1904 is a radical departure from previous census statutes. While heretofore the secretary of state has had charge of this work the selection of the census enumerators has been made by the respective township boards and city councils. The bill now in the hands of the governor provides for the establishment in the office of the secretary of state of a census bureau, the chief of which shall receive an annual salary of $1,800 a year during the continuance of the work. It also provides that all the census enumerators are to be selected and appointed by the secretary of state and that they shall receive $3 per day for ten hours' work, instead of $2.50 as heretofore.

House Reaches for a Scalp.

Several days ago the lower house reached for the scalp of the chief deputy game warden, passing a bill abolishing the office on the ground that it was altogether too costly a luxury. The chances are that the senate will take a different view of the matter.

General Game Law.

For a number of days the two houses have been in a deadlock over the Handy general game law. Conference committees were appointed and the result is a victory for the house. The committees agreed upon a bill which restores the spring shooting of ducks, making the spring season from March 2 to April 10, and which makes the open season for birds from Oct. 15 to Nov. 30.

"Straw" Liquor Bonds.

The indications are that the efforts of the Anti-Saloon League to secure the passage of a law designed to do away with the multiplicity of "straw" liquor bonds throughout the state will prove unavailing. The league sought to have enacted a law requiring securities on liquor bonds to file a sworn schedule of their property so that the township or city board could definitely know if they were owners of sufficient property to cover their liability, but all efforts to induce the liquor traffic committee to report the bill out have failed.

New Treatment for Mental Troubles.

Governor Bliss has signed the Bangham bill making an appropriation of $50,000 for the establishment in connection with the university hospital of a psychopathic ward for the treatment of acute and probably curable mental troubles.

"Well, femininity is becoming very aggressive."

"It seems so. But when I am at home and Henrietta is out lecturing I get my book of choice selections and read, 'The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world.' And then I feel perfectly content."—Washington Star.

21 DEAD MINERS

Catastrophe Caused by Fire Damp Explosion

THE WORST IS NOT KNOWN

An Explosion Similar to This Occurred at the Old Richland Mine of the Same Company, in Which Twenty-Eight Lives Were Lost.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 28.—A special from Dayton says that an explosion of mine dust occurred in the New Richland coal mine of the Dayton Coal & Iron Co. at 5 o'clock last evening and that the dead bodies of 12 white miners have already been taken from the outer drift and that five more are known to be dead. It is stated that 35 men, all white, were at work in the mine, and it is feared all have perished.

Relief gangs are at work, but on account of the immense amount of debris in the shaft the work has been slow and tedious. The mine is a new one and extends about 2,000 feet. The explosion is thought to have been caused by an open lamp carried by one of the miners. The mine is remote and several miles from Dayton and details are difficult to obtain. A explosion similar to this occurred at the Old Richland mine of the same company by which 28 miners lost their lives.

Dayton, Tenn., May 28.—The explosion at the Richland mine of the Dayton Coal & Iron Co., two miles from Dayton, at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, resulted in the death of 21 men, all white, and most of them married and with families.

The explosion was caused by what is known among miners as a "blow blast." It is the custom of the miners to place blasts and fire them off at quitting time each afternoon, leaving the coal thus thrown down to be loaded and hauled from the mine next morning. The Richland mine is destitute of water and great volumes of fine particles of coal dust, invisible to the naked eye, accumulate at the eye of the mine. This dust is subject to explosion if exposed to flame. At 4:30 in the afternoon a dynamite cartridge was placed in position for a blast in one of the rooms, and the miners started for the mouth of the mine. The blast did not explode, as expected, but instead, a long flame shot out of the blast hole and ignited the accumulation of dust. Instantly a terrific explosion occurred and a seething mass of flames came to the mouth of the mine and extended 300 feet into the open air, scorching the leaves of nearby trees.

Thirty-four men were in the mine at the time. Four of these escaped with slight injury. Twenty-one were killed and nine of them were burned, most of them fatally. The force of the explosion caused great masses of coal and slate to cave in from the room of the mine, and many of the fated miners were completely buried. Word quickly reached Dayton and rescuers were at once organized and proceeded to the mine. One by one the blackened and horribly disfigured bodies were taken out and carried to the mouth of the mine, whence they were taken to Dayton. Scores of relatives and friends gathered at the mouth of the mine and the shrieks of anguish as their bodies were removed were heartrending. The two undertaking establishments of this place were employed and the bodies prepared for delivery to their families. All the men employed in this mine were residents of Dayton.

The American Bicyclist Won.

Paris, May 28.—"Major" Taylor, the colored American cyclist, in the return match, defeated Jacquelin, the French champion, in two out of three races. The races were at the same distances as when the riders met May 16 at the Parc des Princes—1,333 metres, one kilometre and, if necessary, 2,000 metres. Taylor reversed the position winning the first two races with comparative ease. The warm weather prevailing helped him considerably. Taylor finished the first race three and a half lengths ahead and the second a length ahead of the Frenchman. The riders crawled around the track until within 200 metres of home, when they spurted. Jacquelin says he was not well yet and had not quite recovered.

Vote on Platt Amendment Today.

Havana, May 28.—By unanimous agreement, the Cuban constitutional convention has decided to take final vote on the Platt amendment today. This decision was reached after long arguments against the acceptance of the amendment by Senores Tamayo and Portuondo, who were answered by Senores Sanguilly and Berriel. The conservatives claim that the Platt amendment will be accepted by the convention by a vote of 17 to 11. The action of the nationalist part in Havana, in coming out against the amendment threatens a bad party split which is endangering the election of Senor Goner, the candidate of the nationalists, for the mayoralty of Havana.

Bricklayers' Lockout Ended.

New York, May 28.—The joint arbitration board of the bricklayers' union and the Mason Builders' association met in conference last night. The conference lasted until nearly 2 o'clock this morning. It was then announced that all differences had been settled and that the lockout and strike had been mutually declared off. The men returned to work this morning. From June 27th the men will receive 60 cents an hour instead of 55 cents, as heretofore. This rate of wages will hold good until May 1, 1902. The settlement of the strike, which has been in force for about two weeks, will effect 20,000 to 25,000 men and will mean an increase in wages of many thousands of dollars annually.

Juvenile Discouragement.

BOILER BLEW UP.

One Man Killed and Three Others Slightly Injured.

Cass City, Mich., May 28.—Yesterday morning the boiler at the Cass City Brick & Tile Co.'s yards on the banks of Cass river, one mile south of town, exploded.

Engineer Leach had steam up to 40 pounds at 7 o'clock when the workmen arrived. Ten minutes later the explosion took place. The engineer was hurled 15 feet away and found in a dying condition with his face scalded and his tongue hanging from his mouth. He lived five minutes.

Perry Withey, George Warner and George Meiser, who were working nearby, were hurled some distance but only slightly injured. The other men were in a clay pile, three rods away, and pieces of the boiler and wood went over their heads, but none of them was injured. The top of the boiler and flues were hurled 30 rods. The cause of the explosion has not been determined, but it is thought it was caused by lack of water.

Engineer Leach was 45 years old and leaves a widow and three children. His life was insured in the Gleaner order for $1,000.

The yards were established two years ago and were doing a rushing business.

UNSATISFACTORY WITNESS.

Brewer Racquet Was Not a Good Witness for Prosecution.

Flint, Mich., May 28.—The adjourned examination in the case of the people vs. Stockwell, Warner, Taylor, et al., was called in the circuit chambers before Justices Halsey and Stevenson yesterday morning. The first witness placed on the stand was Brewer Raquet of Saginaw. His testimony was filled with denials regarding his former testimony and aided the defense. In several instances he utterly refused to answer the questions put by defendants' attorneys regarding his intention of bringing civil action for the recovery of $3,000 he claims he paid to satisfactorily settle the case. He made an unsatisfactory witness for the prosecution and himself.

Raquet's attorney was here, presumably to protect his interests against civil action, which will probably be brought against him for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution by the defendants.

Other witnesses sworn were A. R Horton, who testified that he saw George Horton board a train at Saginaw prior to June 14 en route to this city with a woman supposed to be Rose Taylor. George Caldwell took the stand to testify to the locality and inhabitants of the alleged headquarters of the blackmailers on Begole street.

Dr. McRae Is Wanted.

Petoskey, Mich., May 28.—Dr. Farquhar McRae, who for the past five years has run a "high-toned" barber shop and acquired something of a reputation on the side, left town while a warrant was being prepared for him on the ground of improper relations with the 14-year-old daughter of one of Petoskey's most respected merchants.

McRae, who used to be a physician, has been under suspicion for years. With him went his employe, a young man named Schilling. McRae is about 45 and has a wife and daughter.

A Rare Fake.

Hartford, Mich., May 28.—The story that the Pottawatomie Indians are to invade Chicago is a pure fake. No such idea was ever considered by them. The money they claim has not yet been paid, and probably their business committee will go to Chicago soon to force some kind of a settlement through the courts.

Injuries Proved Fatal.

Muskegon, Mich., May 28.—Willie Bachmann, the 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bachmann, was accidentally run down by a horse on Lake street Sunday evening while running to catch a street car. The injuries proved fatal and the boy died yesterday.

Drawing to a Close.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 28.—The grand jury investigation into the water boodling scandal seems to be nearing an end, although the prosecution still hopes to have E. H. Garman on the stand. The witnesses yesterday were unimportant and 15 minutes was the longest session any of them had.

A Highly-Colored Affair.

St. Joseph, Mich., May 28.—Miss Reack Gerber, a pretty Grand Rapids white girl, claiming to be a graduate of the University of Michigan, was married here to Edward Mitchen, a Benton Harbor negro. The bride had several suitors among the promising white men of the city, but turned them down to become the negro's wife. This is Mitchen's second white wife.

A Startling Confession.

Rome, May 28.—A newspaper published in Verona reports the attempted suicide of a youthful blacksmith named Pietrucci, who has confessed that he belonged to a society of anarchists and was chosen by lot to kill the emperor of Germany. He preferred suicide to making the attempt. In his confession he also disclosed the names of certain of his comrades who had been selected to kill Queen Helena of Italy, President Loubet of France and the czar of Russia.

Reception to a Cardinal.

Philadelphia, May 28.—Cardinal Martinelli was the center of a brilliant reception at Villa Nova college yesterday. Two thousand Catholics, including ministers and laity, assembled to honor the distinguished prelate. The reception in the new college hall was the first gathering held there. S. Edwin McGargee, consul for Greece at the port of Philadelphia, spoke for the laity. The Very Rev. L. A. Leury, O. S. A., welcomed the cardinal on behalf of the college faculty. A commemorative poem by Eleanor C. Donnelly was read.

The first royal speech transmitted by telegraph was that delivered by the late Queen Victoria when she opened parliament on Nov. 15, 1837. The speed of transmission was 55 words a minute.

The Worst of His Sort.

Wigg—Longbow is a bad case.

Wagg—I should say he is. The only time I ever saw him embarrassed was once when he was caught telling the truth.—Exchange.

HOMEWARD BOUND

Mrs. McKinley Growing Brighter as She Approaches Home

REACH THE CAPITAL THURSDAY

President McKinley Receives the Decision of the Supreme Court and He and His Cabinet Are Highly Elated Thereat.

Julesburg, Colo., May 28.—The presidential train made the third day's run on the homeward journey without incident. The trip across Wyoming was at an average elevation of over 400 feet, and at Sherman, just before the train began to descend the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains, the elevation exceeded 1,500 feet. Brief stops were made for water and to change engines at Rawlins, Laramie and Cheyenne, Wyo., and Kimball and Sidney, Neb. The president made no remarks at any of these places, but he appeared on the rear platform and shook hands with some of those nearest the car. There were crowds at every station along the route, and every cattle ranch had its little group of cowboys, sitting bolt upright on their horses and waving their sombreroes as the train went by.

Mrs. McKinley is standing the trip very well and seems rejoiced that every hour brings her nearer home. The weather has been exceedingly pleasant and that means much for her comfort. Arrangements for running the president's train from Chicago to Washington were completed yesterday. The train will arrive at the national capital at 7:30 Thursday morning. A slow run will be made to Chicago, timed to have the train arrive there early Wednesday morning instead of late tonight.

Sidney, Neb., May 28.—The president and the cabinet received the official information here that the supreme court had decided the insular cases in accordance with the contentions of the government. The news came in the shape of a telegram from Solicitor-General John K. Richards. It was brief, however, and contained no details beyond the bare announcement that the administration had been sustained.

Naturally the president and the cabinet officers were elated over the victory, although they have never doubted that the decision would be in favor of the government. The cabinet members aboard the train declined to express their opinions for publication in advance of a perusal of the text of the opinion.

Beat All Previous Records.

London, May 28.—In the Irish championship games at Dublin, P. O'Connor of Waterford covered 24 feet 9 inches in the long jump, beating all previous records.

Brutally Murdered.

Navarre, O., May 28.—Christian Stahl, a farmer living near this place was brutally murdered by two masked burglars, who broke into the house and demanded his money. On being refused, the burglars bound Stahl and other members of the family with ropes. After beating Stahl until he was unconscious the men left. Stahl's sister managed to free herself and gave the alarm. Stahl died after being freed from his bonds. No clue.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." BLISS SIGNED THEM

Ad Valorem Tax Bill and Garnishee Law

$10 A DAY FOR CHIEF CLERKS

Governor Bliss Signed the Nevins Garnishee Bill and Affixes His Signature to a Raise in Compensation For Legislative Employes.

Lansing, Mich., May 28.—Gov. Bliss last night signed the Chandler ad valorem tax bill, eliminating telegraph telephone and sleeping car companies from its provisions, as well as the Atwood-Westover bill increasing the membership of the state tax commission from three to five.

Simultaneously the governor sent to the senate the names of ex-Senator Ira T. Sayre of Flushing, and Graham Pope of Houghton to fill the two new places created on the state tax commission.

Sayre was one of the "immortals" of the 1899 state senate, and is generally regarded as a pro-railroad man.

Mr. Pope is said to be wealthy. He owns a large general store in Houghton, as well as considerable mining stock. He has managed some of the upper peninsula mines. Mr. Pope is highly spoken of, not only by upper peninsula men, but by others.

The report that Pope will resign shortly after the legislature adjourns so that the governor can appoint Geo. A. Newett without making it necessary for this senate to confirm, or turn him down, is again being revived. Mr. Pope only a few days ago declined a tender of a place on the tax commission.

Gov. Bliss signed the Nevins's garnishee bill. He says he had made up his mind to sign the measure before the large delegation of merchants, etc., from several parts of the state called upon him last Thursday and urged him to act favorably on the bill. "I do not wish people to think I signed it because those business men called and urged me to do so," said he. "I believe the law will be better for employes than the present one."

The new law provides that a man who is a homesteader shall have 80 per cent of his earnings exempt, but that that 80 per cent shall never be less than $8 nor more than $30. Unmarried persons have a $4 flat exemption, but their exemption in any case shall not exceed $15.

Gov. Pingree vetoed a bill similar to the one signed by Gov. Bliss.

Gov. Bliss signed six appropriation bills, including the one raising the compensation of employes of the house and senate. Chief Clerk Miller of the house, and Secretary Chilson of the senate will each receive $10 a day and hitherto they have been receiving ostensibly $3 a day, but in various irregular ways the compensation has been increased.

HOLD THE FORT

And His Daughter Is a Prisoner Therein.

St. Joseph, Mich., May 28.—Anna Dunham, the daughter of Mrs. John Struson of this city, is being held a prisoner in the home of her father, Ernest Dunham, a prominent farmer living near Stevensville, seven miles south of St. Joseph.

Four years ago Mrs. Dunham secured a divorce from her husband, the divorce giving her the custody of the child. She shortly afterward married Struson. After several unsuccessful attempts to secure his daughter through the agencies of the law, Dunham, Sunday morning, induced her to go riding in a carriage with him. He did not return and at midnight the mother started in pursuit. On reaching her former husband's home she attempted to break down the door. Dunham ordered her to leave the premises and threatened to use force if she refused. She finally left, swearing to return with a party of friends. In case she does Dunham promises to make things lively, and with this intention has notified neighboring men to swarm to his farm at a moment's notice. Anna is meanwhile kept a close prisoner in an upstairs chamber. Dunham claims that his former wife is not a proper custodian of the girl.

Another Body Found.

Bay City, Mich., May 28.—A piece of wreckage, consisting of a triangular section of the bow of a boat, was picked up off Wenona Beach, near the head of Saginaw bay last evening. Tightly wedged in the wreckage was the body of a man about 30 years old and weighing about 160 pounds. The body was that of a sailor. It is presumed the wreckage is part of the steamer Baltimore, lost off Au Sable last Friday morning during the storm, and that it floated over 40 miles under the force of the northeast wind, which has blown steadily since that time.

Had a Gash in Her Head.

Wayne, Mich., May 28.—A strange woman was found on the veranda of the Dr. Cumming residence. She was in her stocking feet and wore an old blue dress. She had a horrible gash on her forehead, laying the skull bare. She was unable to give an intelligible account of the accident, or tell who she was, or from whence she came. She said that she was 76 years old. Later in the day she was moved to the county house.

A Pugilistic Professor.

Howard City, Mich., May 28.—Howard City high school was the scene of much excitement yesterday. Prof. Fuller undertook to punish William Steenman, who retaliated on the professor in "John L." style, giving him three hard blows. The professor came back when he got his second wind, and blacked Steenman's eyes and put him out of school. Steenman graduates this year.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick for a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

RAY'S RECRUIT

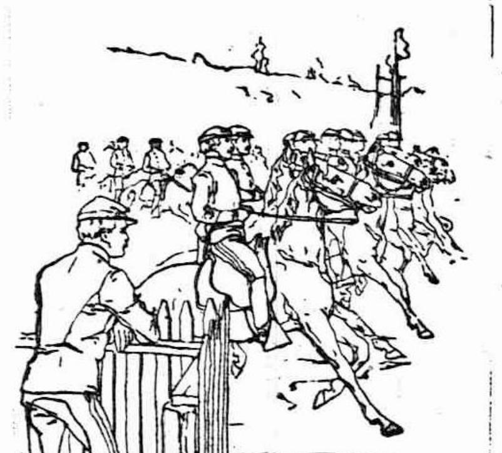
BY

CAPT. CHAS. KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

Hunter watched the man as he halted, faced outward as the nearest troop drew nigh, then snapped his carbine to the present as the head of the column turned to enter the gate, and Captain Gregg whipped out his saber, gave voice over his shoulder to the prolonged "'Tensh-o-o-on" which brought every man's head and eyes up and to the front, and then, looking square at the sentry, lowered the glittering blade in acknowledgment of the honor paid to himself and his command. Hunter's eyes kindled at the sight. No matter how humble the private soldier, there at least, on post as sentry, he could expect the recognition of the president himself, than whom in the eyes of the —th there lived no grander potentate on earth. Then, the next thing Hunter knew, the troop came tripping by the line of picket fence on which he leaned, gazing out upon the spirited scene beyond, and now it was his turn. The teachings of the old days in the famous regiment, wherein every man might be said to have worn kid gloves when not on military duty, were fresh in his mind, as he had been well schooled in the first principles of soldier duty. Yet Hunter felt the blood was mounting to his temples and his heart was beating quicker as he faced the coming column, braced his heels together and raised his hand to the cap visor as Captain Gregg came ambling by. The big troop leader glanced curiously at the lonely figure in the cheap fatigue dress and again, but with far less precision, returned the salute, and Hunter could not but note the difference. Before another troop could pass him by, he moved quickly away, 20 yards or more beyond the gate, where he still could have a good look at the returning soldiery, but was himself beyond saluting distance. One after another the seven separate compact little columns of fours marched steadily in and jogged on down the gentle slope toward the huge wooden stables. He was still gazing in some odd fascination after the last, the roan troop, when the sound of bounding hoofs, whirring wheels and gay laughter recalled his wandering thoughts, and, turning sharply to the prairie once more, his eyes fell upon the foremost of the rapidly nearing carriages.



Beyond saluting distance.

It was a light, open phaeton, drawn by two spirited bays, whose fine action and well made harness won his instant approval. Beside the carriage trotted the stocky, burly major whom he so well remembered the day of his first interview with Dana in the office. On the other side rode Dana himself, a handsome young soldier, and, far more interested in them than in the possible occupants of the vehicle, Hunter was looking upon them with a soldier's eye, keenly appreciative of Dana's graceful, easy seat and of Mainwaring's good, if bulky, horsemanship when he suddenly became aware of the fact that instead of turning in at the gate the driver was heading straight southward, evidently intending to drive around to the main gate instead of passing, as Hunter had come, through that portion of the post best known as "Sudstown."

Another minute, and they must flash past him, not ten yards away, with only that low picket fence between them. Already the sentry had halted and presented arms, both officers touching their caps in acknowledgment. Already the swift team was darting past the gate. The lady occupants of the stylish vehicle were whisking into view, and, yielding to sudden and uncontrollable impulse, Hunter whirled about, jumped the shallow ditch and sprang behind the nearest of the little houses devoted to the use of the married soldiers. In that one swift glance at the fair occupants he had seen a face at sight of which the blood went rushing to his own. There, side by side, were Mrs. Mainwaring and the young lady whom he had picked up in his arms the night of that "head on" collision at Alkali Flats.

CHAPTER VII.

Major Stannard had won his bet, and Mainwaring was more than usually "grumpy" in consequence. Ray and his men, riding like the wind, had run down the train robbers before they reached the Dry Fork, and in a long stern chase had overhauled first one man, then another, until darkness set in and hid the leading fugitives from sight. Seven lively specimens of the border ruffian were the captives of the sorrel troop by nightfall, and, closely guarded, these were the men turned over next morning to Mr. Sheriff Conway when that much fatigued official and his posse reached the spot where Ray and his men had made camp the night before. Ray himself, with a dozen troopers, had pushed on at daybreak, following the trail of the fugitives in hopes of capturing the more prominent members of the party, who, as it turned out, had most of the ill gotten booty, while his lieutenant, Mr. Scott, remained in charge of the main body and of the prisoners until the arrival of the civil authorities, who promptly demanded and obtained possession. Conway and his posse, rejoicing, turned homeward at once with their disheveled prizes, hoping to reach Butte and receive a triumph by evening of the next day. Seven train robbers were more than had ever been caught before in the history of the territory, and great would be the rejoicings. Securely bound, the luckless captives, each man lashed to the stirrup of some one of the numerous posse, trudged painfully along the homeward trail. Silent, resolute, almost defiant, no one of their number would give the whisper of a hint as to the identity of the leaders or of one another. All were strangers to Butte. Neither Conway nor his deputies had ever seen one of their faces before. Lieutenant Scott had lost no time in saddling and pushing on after his captain, two of the posse riding with him so as to give the possibly necessary civil sanction to the arrest of the robbers and to take the customary civil credit for the same, naively explaining, "You fellows in the regular army don't need it; we do, or there's no chance for Conway's crowd next election."

And on his triumphant homeward way what was more natural than that Conway should march through Ransom the following evening just as the ghostlike column in white stable frocks came swinging up to barracks through the gloaming? As the shortest road ran close to the men's quarters, it happened that the burly sheriff, with his captive train, went clattering by the long wooden porches, and such troopers as happened to be excused from stables—precious few in Atherton's regiment—came rushing out of quarters to see them. All the companies had had to "stand to heel" and have their stalls inspected before they started up the slope, but in Ray's stable were only a few horses, and the few men under charge of Sergeant Merriweather had already gone to barracks and were there when Conway came through, and of this few was the new trooper, Hunter.

Still wearing his white stable frock and looking a trifle tired and somber, the recruit had stopped at the corner of the porch and was gazing with but languid interest at Conway's motley cavalcade when Merriweather joined him. "A precious lot of jailbirds," said the sergeant, as the party came jogging by, sheriff and deputies grinning affably, and many of the latter shouting words of condolence to the stay at homes who hadn't been partakers with them in the glories of the chase and capture. Four prisoners had trudged wearily by, while Trooper Hunter replied briefly but without especial civility to the sergeant's remark. Then came the fifth, whose eyes, haggard and hunted looking, glanced up just one second at the man in stable frock at the edge of the porch and instantly there was a flash of recognition. Sergeant Merriweather, turning to his companion in surprise, saw him gazing after No. 5 with an expression of amazement and dismay upon his handsome face.

"Then you've met one of these fellows before, have you?" said Merriweather, with instant suspicion.

But Hunter answered never a word, and, turning short, plunged into the shadows of the great, gloomy barrack.

Not for 48 hours longer did Captain Ray return, and with him came the two deputies and one more prisoner. The others, so said the hoof tracks, had scattered during that first night over the face of the earth, and even the trail soon became indistinct on the hard prairie beyond the Ska, but enough was known to warrant the statement that two of the number had gone toward the agencies away to the northeast and that their mounts were evidently blooded stock, far swifter than Ray's, for never once had their leaders been in view, and there was no use in further pursuit. Huddled in the county jail, the eight malefactors were awaiting the action of the civil authorities and their identification by the railway people, while Ray and his returned men shook off the dust of travel and settled down to garrison duty again. The first thing demanded of Sergeant Merriweather was an account of his stewardship and the progress of the new trooper, and Merriweather looked solemn and mysterious and was finally understood to say that he had nothing to complain of in him, but he "reckoned other people might," whereupon Ray bade him speak out. The Kentuckian could not tolerate insinuation or innuendo in a soldier, and Merriweather told the story of the mutual recognition of Hunter and the unknown captive.

It was the evening of his return to Ransom and just before tattoo, which in those days was always accompanied by a roll call.

"See if Hunter is in quarters," said the captain, "and send him to me." And Merriweather hastened on his errand.

No. The men in barracks said the swell recruit was out somewhere. "Mabbe he's gone down to pay his respects to Mrs. Merriweather, sergeant," sneered an ill conditioned fellow, a man no other liked, yet who had served with the old troop over half a dozen years. Merriweather knew it would never do to notice the remark, but it stung him all the same. "Find him, you, and tell him the captain wants him at once," said he to the would be sneerer, then slammed the door behind him and sprang out into the night. He had not been home for nearly an hour, and he needed, he told himself, a drink, so thither he went.

Bright lights were burning in some of the quarters, dim ones in others, but in his own the light seemed lowered to the verge of darkness. Not two yards from his door the tall figure of a man in soldier overcoat loomed into view, and, peering closely at him, Merriweather discovered the recruit.

"Where you been, Hunter?" was the sharp, stern demand.

"Looking for you, sergeant," was the quiet reply.

"Who sent you?" And there were both anger and suspicion in the tone.

"Oh, no one. I wished to speak with you a moment. I want some advice."

"There is no need of your coming here, then. You've seen me a dozen times in the last two days. Why didn't you ask it then?"

For a moment the younger man was silent; surprise and disappointment clouded his face. So, too, there crept into it a shade of indignation, and it showed plainly in the tone of his reply.

"I had no need of it then," was the answer, as the younger soldier looked squarely into the eyes of the senior. Then, just as when angered by the overbearing ways of Major Mainwaring, Hunter's high spirit overmastered his resolution to take men and matters as he found them, and his eyes, too, flashed angrily. "Whatever thought I had of it ten minutes ago," he said, "is gone now. I won't trouble you."

And with that he would have gone his way, but Merriweather, smarting with jealousy and suspicion, threw himself across his path.

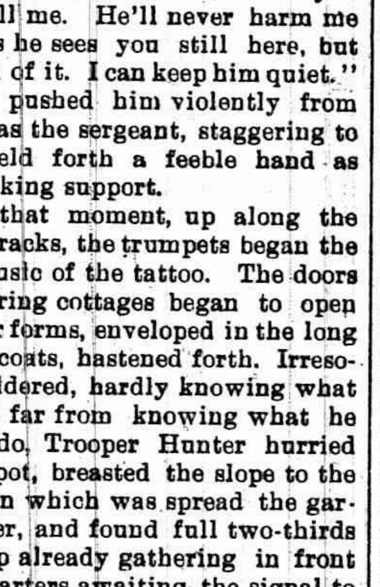
"You go no farther, young man, till you hear what I've got to say. This is the third time in less than a week you've been prowling here around my door. Keep your distance in future. D'ye understand? No man enters that house except on my invitation. Now you go to Captain Ray and tell him I sent you."

For a moment the tall young soldier stood there, too astonished to make reply. He had heard the men talk of Merriweather as "tough on recruits." He had understood that new men must take a great deal of bullying from the elders—that it was purposely done to try their temper and test their sense of subordination. Hitherto he had looked upon Merriweather's asperities as having no personal significance. Now, for the first time, it flashed upon him that he was singled out for harsh, overbearing and abusive language from a man coarse by nature, mentally, physically and socially his inferior. All on a sudden the hot blood boiled in his veins, and, forgetful of his new obligations, reckless of anything but his wrath, Trooper Hunter hit out straight, hard and well, taking Merriweather squarely between the eyes and knocking him flat. The resounding thwack of the blow, the heavy crash of the fall, were echoed from the doorway by a woman's startled cry, and the next thing Hunter knew as he stood there still quivering, his fist clinched and ready to dash again at his floored victim, now feebly struggling to his knees, the slender form of the sergeant's wife was bending over the beaten man. Then she threw herself upon her knees beside her prostrate husband.

"You've struck him cruel hard," she moaned. "Oh, you shouldn't have minded what he said, Mr. Hunter. He's awful jealous. There, Danny, sit still—sit still," she pleaded soothingly. "Run for a little water, Mr. Hunter. He's bleeding fearful. Do be still, Danny. Sure the gentleman never set foot inside your door nor spoke a word to me. You're foolish, Danny." She strove to stanch the blood with her handkerchief, but he was slowly regaining his faculties and thrust her rudely away, and then she saw he was fumbling inside the breast of his coat, and fear gave her strength. Hunter had taken a dipperful of water from the barrel at the side of the little hut and was bringing it, dripping, wondering as he came what would be the outcome of this mad impulse, but she met him half way, seized the dipper and bade him go. "Quick," she panted. "Don't stop an instant now. Get away before he comes to himself or he'll shoot. Go instantly, please, Mr. Hunter, or maybe he'll kill me too."

"I can't go if I've hurt him. I must help him up," he began, but she clutched his arm with trembling hands and whirled him about toward the barracks.

"No, no; leave everything to me. Don't come here till I tell you. Don't you speak of this to a soul, unless you want to kill me. He'll never harm me now unless he sees you still here, but not a word of it. I can keep him quiet." Then she pushed him violently from her, just as the sergeant, staggering to his feet, held forth a feeble hand as though seeking support.



"No, no; leave everything to me."

And at that moment, up along the line of barracks, the trumpets began the spirited music of the tattoo. The doors of neighboring cottages began to open and soldier forms, enveloped in the long caped overcoats, hastened forth. Irresolute, bewildered, hardly knowing what he did and far from knowing what he ought to do, Trooper Hunter hurried from the spot, breasted the slope to the "bench" on which was spread the garrison proper, and found full two-thirds of his troop already gathering in front of their quarters awaiting the signal to form ranks—the quick, stirring assembly.

"Did you see Doyle? He was looking for you, Hunter," chirruped a little Patlander. "You're blowing, man. Where you running from?"

But Hunter made no reply. Hooking the collar of his overcoat and buttoning it throughout, he stepped quietly to the point where the center of his troop usually formed for roll call, for his place in ranks was close behind a tall corporal who marked the left of the first platoon. The first sergeant, silent and solitary, his swinging lantern in his hand, stood a few yards away, gazing out across the dim parade at the bright lights in the distant quarters of the officers. The soldierly form of the second lieutenant could be dimly discerned a few yards beyond the sergeant. To the right and left, in front of the other barrack buildings, big black groups of men were gathered and sergeants' lights were gleaming, all awaiting the next signal. Suddenly it came, quick, rippling, merry. "Fall in," were the hoarse words growled from half a dozen soldier throats. The groups quickly resolved themselves into two long columns of files that faced to their left the instant the music ceased and stood motionless while, with the ease and rapidity of daily practice, the sergeant called the roll

The noncommissioned head of the sorrel troop twice repeated one name in a questioning, surprised tone, then faced his lieutenant and reported, "Sergeant Merriweather absent, sir." The officer acknowledged the salute, said, "Dismiss the troop," and, facing about, found himself confronting the unexpected apparition of Captain Ray and heard in the soft dialect of the Blue Grass his captain's words:

"Send Trooper Hunter to me, sergeant, directly you dismiss."

And while Lieutenant Scott went away to report the result of roll call to the adjutant and the sergeant again faced his company Hunter felt his heart sink within him. Already Merriweather, then, had managed to get word to his captain, and the captain was there to wreak vengeance on him, the luckless offender. In violation of the strictest articles of war he, Hunter Gray, had struck down his superior officer and was now to suffer the penalty of the law.

"You hear, Hunter, the captain wants you." Then "Break ranks! March!" was the order, and the troop, cohesive and compact but the moment before, dissolved at the word and fell to pieces, leaving the new member standing all alone. For one moment he remained there to pull himself together; then, nerved to face the worst, strode out to meet his fate, his heart thumping in his breast.

"Hunter," said the captain, "did I not understand you to say that you were a total stranger west of the Missouri and that you had neither friends nor enemies out here?"

"Yes, sir," was the trooper's reply, his hand still at the cap visor.

"Then how did you come to know that prisoner in the lot brought in by the sheriff?"

Hunter was silent.

BITTEN BY A NEVILLO

ONE OF THE TERRORS OF LIFE ON THE ISTHMUS OF TEHUANTEPEC.

A Lizard From Whose Deadly Poison Only One Man Is Known to Have Recovered—The Treatment Which Saved Him From Death.

"I guess I am the only living man that has been bitten by the nevillo, a venomous lizard of the isthmus of Tehuantepec," said William W. Cloon, a New Yorker with Central American experiences. "This lizard is of the Gila monster family and is a horrid looking reptile of a mottled liver color and is from six to ten inches long. Its bite is deadly, and, as I said, I am the only person known who has lived after being bitten. It was a case of nip and tuck, though, and I didn't get over it for two months or more.

"The brute bit me out of pure malice, for I wasn't doing a thing to it. I had a coffee plantation down on the isthmus several years ago and just before the hot season began, which was in March, I had as my guest Dr. Fergus MacDonald of the Smithsonian institution, who was in that country in the interest of science. While he was with me we received an invitation to visit the great plantation of Dr. Pedro Arguilles, one of the most prominent men of that country, and we went to his hacienda near Minititlan. The ladies of the family had all gone to Mexico City, and as the weather was hot we men loafed around in our pyjamas, the upper garment of which is a big sleeved affair called a camisa.

"One day Dr. MacDonald and I had adjourned to the patio or court of the building, and while I lay in the grass talking to him he was busy greasing and putting into shape his guns and revolvers. He was six or eight feet away from me, and I was lying with my head propped up on my arm, from which the sleeve had slipped, leaving it exposed to the elbow, which rested on the grass. Of course neither of us was thinking about reptiles or other dangers right there in the court of the building. Suddenly, as I talked, the doctor threw his hand up in warning, and I knew that whatever it was he saw there was danger in my moving, and I must keep still. So I kept as steady as I could, and then I felt something go up my arm toward my head and stop near my wrist.

"I couldn't see what it was, but I knew something about tropical reptiles and I kept perfectly quiet while the doctor caught up one of his revolvers and threw a couple of cartridges into it. He aimed across my body and fired, and as I jumped to my feet a nevillo at least seven inches long fell writhing to the ground, shot through the head. The bullet had gone on into my arm and came out at the elbow and I was bleeding. Between the bullet marks, though, were the fang marks where the nevillo had stuck its teeth into my arm, and I told the doctor I thought it had got me. As soon as he saw it he gave me some kind of a hypodermic injection in the left leg, the right arm having been bitten, and at once took his knife and slashed me across the fang marks. Into the wounds of my arm he poured a bottle of concentrated ammonia. Almost instantly after I had been bitten I began to grow dizzy and to see what seemed to me to be clouds of light smoke, and when the ammonia struck me I keeled over in a dead faint.

"Five days later I awoke in a mud bath by the riverside, my body twice its normal size and my tongue sticking out of my mouth. They had carried me there as soon as I fainted, and night and day my guide and his daughter had been watching by me, with fires at night to keep off the animals from the jungle. Every 12 hours my arm was lifted from the mud and cleansed, and on these occasions it was always found to be of a green color. As soon as I returned to consciousness I was carried to the house and put to bed, and there for two weeks I remained and then went down to the coast and up to the well known hot springs, where I was treated for two months until every bit of the venom had left my body. During it all I suffered no pain, nor have I ever felt the slightest inconvenience since. What effect the bullet wound in the arm had I don't know. Possibly the blood that came from the bullet wounds saved me. Anyhow something happened that never happened to any other person bitten by a nevillo, or I wouldn't be here to tell the story."

Mr. Cloon bared his arm for the benefit of the listeners, and if an arm ever looked as if it had been through a hard campaign that one did. It was scarred as if burnt with hot irons and covered from the elbow down with all kinds of peculiarly shaped mottled spots of about the same color as the lizard.—New York Sun.

Located the Noise.

A little 4-year-old was taken on a visit to grandmamma in the country. There for the first time he had a view of a cow. He would stand and look on while the man milked and ask all manner of questions. In this way he learned that the long crooked branches on the cow's head were horns. Now, the little fellow knew of only one kind of horn, and a few days after obtaining this information, hearing a strange kind of bellowing noise in the yard, he ran out to ascertain its cause. In a few minutes he returned with wonder and delight depicted on his countenance, exclaiming: "Mamma, mamma! Oh, do come out here! The cow's blowing her horns!"—Exchange.

Question and Answer.

A woman carrying a suit case and several umbrellas bustled up to a weary looking servant of the company in the Pennsylvania railroad ferryhouse at Jersey City the other day.

"Does it make any difference which ferry I take for New York?" she asked.

"It don't make any difference to me, ma'am," he replied.—New York Sun.

UNDEFINED.

Who can define love? Not the little child
Who lifts his soft eyes from his mother's knee,
Fulfilled with innocent tranquillity,
Nor that poor knight who went where Venus smiled
And strove, by after suffering beguiled,
To sing the meaning of its mystery;
Nor can he tell whom love hath crowned or he
From very pain of love undone made wild.
Not the wan nun who at the white Christ's feet
Offers the world as one poor sacrifice
Nor the sad tide that follows where the sweet,
Swift moon allures it from the circling skies.
Nay, not from time or joy or suffering
Is knowledge brought that we may know this thing.

—Theodosia Pickering Garrison in "Brown Book of Boston."

SNAKE, EGGS AND A JUG.

A Moccasin's Appetite and Lack of Sense Led to His Death.

A party of Jacksonville mechanics were at work on the Matanzas river raising a sunken dredgeboat. They lived on board of the big lighter on which they worked in a small house on the deck. One noon their bill of fare was somewhat strengthened by some wild turkey eggs which had been found by some of the party while hunting on shore. After the hungry engineers had destroyed a heavy dinner they left their dining room and returned to work. The doors and windows were all open, and the cook did not clear off the table for some time.

In this interval a large water moccasin of near six feet crawled on board the lighter and wriggled into the dining room through the open door. In his prospecting tour he climbed the table leg, and here, with a snake's fondness for eggs, he went in for a feast. One of the turkey eggs lay alone by a plate, and the rest were in a dish on the other side of the table. In the center stood a large water jug, and right here the wily serpent slipped up. After swallowing the lonesome egg, he started for the main supper and in his artless manner crawled through the handle of the jug. It was a rather tight fit, and he had to stop about half way through on account of the egg, which enlarged him somewhat. So, stretching forward, he bolted another egg and thereby fastened himself.

On each side of the jug handle was an egg on his inside, and he could move neither backward nor forward, practically riveted in position. He was soon found in this peculiar situation by the cook, who speedily killed him.

The reporter was shown the skin of the snake with a crease still in the middle from the tremendous pressure, and he was also permitted to gaze on the jug whose handle proved so fatal.—Florida Times-Union and Citizen.

Before 50 the most healthful occupation is that of the clergyman. The doctors and the lawyers are close together. After 50 years, according to the figures, it is more healthful to practice medicine or the law than it is to preach.

DAMAGE ENORMOUS

Which Comes from

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.

Only One Safe Way to Live.

Some weeks since a paragraph appeared calling attention to the immense amount of damage which had been done by lightning. We also spoke of the service done in this connection by our veteran lightning rod man, John F. Hicks. As nearly every exchange which comes to our table relates some fresh disaster and as the life and property of nearly every householder seems to be in jeopardy, it is but fair to suppose that our readers would be interested in an investigation into the merits of lightning rods as a protection, since they are the only means which science has yet offered as a safeguard against the omnipotent electric discharge. A little light also on the methods of handling this useful commodity would not come amiss in this connection.

The theory of lightning rod protection is founded on one of the simplest and best known laws of physical science. Every school boy knows that electricity will find and follow the best conductor. The practical part of this business is to always have the rods so adjusted as to make a perfect conductor, and then, and then only, do they afford a perfect protection.

Mr. J. F. Hicks not only erects rods with the best workmanship on scientific principles, but he guarantees to keep them in perfect repair and his guarantee is good. The two principal points in regard to a rod's conductivity are the point of tip and the ground connections. In speaking of points, Mr. Hicks showed a dozen or so which had been struck and rendered useless and which had been replaced by him. These points had been taken from the Union school, Globe Mill and the buildings of Chauncey Cooper and C. W. Greenleaf, of Cambridge, John Seeler, of Brooklyn, and others. One notable instance was the German church at Richville, Tuscola county, this state. Before rodding, the building was damaged by lightning over $1,000 worth. The church was then rodded and it has since sustained three heavy strokes without injury, each time melting the points and ornaments, which have been replaced free of charge. In regard to the ground connections, Mr. Hicks, with the advice of such men as Prof. Kedzie, of the Agricultural College, has devised a battery test by which he can instantly make a perfect and satisfactory test of this most important condition of the rod.

Concerning the experience of Mr. Hicks in this business and his methods of doing it, his integrity and responsibility and the confidence placed in the protection of lightning rods as handled by him among most practical and successful business men, we append the following:

This is to certify that I have known Mr. John F. Hicks, of Tecumseh, Mich., for a number of years, and that several years ago he erected upon my buildings his Improved Lightning Conductors, agreeing at the time to keep them in good repair, without cost to me, which he has done to my entire satisfaction, and this day he has been at my place and tested the conductors with his electric battery, to see if they were in prime order, and also to determine if the ground connections were still perfect. He has found them all in perfect working order, and I am now more satisfied than ever before that lightning rods are a protection to life and property when erected on buildings in a scientific manner and the ground connections made perfect. I have never known of any work Mr. Hicks has done which has not given good satisfaction. Nor have I ever known a building to be damaged by lightning which he has rodded. I am well pleased with the work Mr. Hicks has done for me and do not hesitate to recommend him to everyone wishing lightning conductors placed on their buildings, as perfectly reliable and trustworthy in every respect.

This is to certify that we, the undersigned trustees of School District No. 7 of Tecumseh, Mich., have had Mr. J. F. Hicks place lightning rods on the Central and East Branch school buildings, and the work has been done to our entire satisfaction. Mr. Hicks has been engaged in putting up lightning rods the past FORTY years and we have never known or heard of a building being damaged by lightning that he has placed rods on. And we gladly recommend him to anyone wishing lightning rods placed on their buildings, as a man perfectly reliable and trustworthy in every respect.

Dr. L. G. North, Director.
Dr. Geo. Howell, Moderator.
J. H. Smith, Assessor.
Seaton W. Anderson,
E. H. Halladay.

Tecumseh, Mich., May 9th, 1901.

I fully endorse the statements made the trustees of School District No. 7, of Tecumseh, Mich. L. M. Kellogg, Supt. Public Schools.

This certifies that we, the undersigned, have known Mr. J. F. Hicks, of Tecumseh, for the past 35 or 40 years. He has placed lightning rods on our buildings for us and his work has always proven satisfactory and we have never known or heard of a building being damaged by lightning that he has placed his rods upon. He has also done his banking business with us for the past thirty years and we consider him perfectly reliable and trustworthy in every respect.

Lucius Lilley, President of the Lilley State Bank, Tecumseh,
P. W. A. Fitzsimmons, Vice-president of the Lilley State Bank,
J. S. Strong, Director of the Lilley State Bank,
L. I. Bidwell, Director of the Lilley State Bank,
L. C. Bidwell, Director of the Lilley State Bank.

This is to certify that twenty-five years ago John F. Hicks placed lightning rods on my house, barn and granary. Some time last summer lightning struck the rods, melting a point on my largest barn, also one on my house, and I am satisfied if the rods had not been on my buildings, they would have been burned and some of my family injured or killed. He has since rodded two other buildings for me. I have never known or heard of a building being damaged by lightning that he has rodded and I consider him perfectly reliable and trustworthy in every respect.

J. J. Clarkson.

Beside his business relations in this section, Mr. Hicks is equally well and favorably known in this connection in Northern Michigan. For over twenty-five years he has done rodding in the Saginaw valley and adjacent country with the success which has always attended his work in this section as the following will show:

First National Bank,
East Saginaw, Mich.
July 13, 1895.

This is to certify that twenty-five years since Mr. J. F. Hicks, of Tecumseh, Mich., rodded my residence and barn in East Saginaw, and agreed to keep it in good order free of expense to me, and that he has this day examined the buildings by testing the same with his battery in my presence and finds the rods and groundings so satisfactory that I have ordered my farm house and barns at Blackmar rodded, as I consider his system of rodding a full protection against the effects of lightning. I have full confidence in his integrity and his system of rodding buildings, and can cheerfully recommend him to anyone in need of his services.

E. T. Judd, President.

It is quite a prevalent idea and one perhaps substantiated by fact, that the lightning rod business has sometimes borne the earmarks of "fake." This may even be true as practiced by some agents. Concerning their methods, we have nothing to say either for or against. In this connection we simply say that the work of Mr. Hicks as alluded to above, speaks for itself. A few of the points discovered are these: Rods properly put up are a safe protection. Properly taken care of, they continue a safe protection. Mr. Hicks does both these things and his guarantee is as good as gold. Again, no business in Michigan is conducted on sounder business principles than the manner in which he does his work. He or his representative can always be found at 51 Union street, Tecumseh, Mich., to do new work or make good that which has already been done by him.

Owing to the business connections, Mr. Hicks has with the house in Chicago, from whom he has purchased rods for the past thirty-eight years, makes it possible for him to sell rods for less money than any other man engaged in rod business in the state. And he also gives a guarantee, running ten years, to refund the money paid for said rods, should the building or buildings be damaged by lightning during that time. If a note is given in payment, it has the following clause on the back: "Within note is given for lightning rods, and it is agreed that if the buildings so rodded shall be injured by lightning to the amount of this note before its maturity, then said note will become null and void and there shall be no demand for payment."

The above should satisfy anyone purchasing rods of Mr. Hicks, that the work will be satisfactory in all particulars and that the rods will be put up in a manner to spare the buildings from loss by lightning.

An Uncouth Mode of Burial.

Of all the modes of burial ever practiced by creatures in the shape of human beings the method of the Queensland nomads is certainly the most uncouth. After drying the corpse in the sun and knocking out its teeth for keepsakes they deposit it on a framework of rough poles and bury it under a few armsful of rushes and old kangaroo skins, leaving the bush wolves to sing its requiem.

No member of the dead man's tribe will settle within a mile of his grave for fear of being haunted by the spooks making the burial place their midnight rendezvous. The metaphysical opinions of the Australian aborigines prove indeed that savages can be afflicted with an abundance of supernaturalism without betraying a trace of anything deserving the name of religious sentiment.

They believe in evil spirits whistling in the blasts of the storm wind and try to exorcise them by spitting in the direction of the sky, but for the conceptions of the deity, of future existence, of repentance, atonement and conscienoce their language has not even a definite word. From somewhere in the land of their forefathers—eastern Asia, perhaps—they have imported a notion faintly resembling the Buddhist doctrine of metempsychosis and believe that animals may be reborn as men and men as human beings of a superior rank.

Burr's Self Control.

Aaron Burr was by nature and training a man of extraordinary self control. He allowed no circumstances to throw him off his balance. An anecdote told by Rufus Choate to the late Richard H. Dana, recorded in Mr. Dana's "Diary," illustrates the callousness which aided Burr so greatly in controlling himself. Several years after the death of Hamilton, killed by Burr in a duel, Burr visited Boston, and Mr. Devereux of Salem paid him some attentions. The visitor was taken to the Boston atheneum, where, while the two men were walking through the gallery of sculpture, Mr. Devereux happened to catch sight of a bust of Hamilton.

The thought flashed across his mind that Burr might not care to be confronted with the sight of the features of the man he had slain. But no. Burr was undisturbed. He also espied the bust, and, although Mr. Devereux had instinctively turned away, he walked up to it and said in a loud tone: "Ah! Here is Hamilton!" Then, passing his fingers along certain lines of the face, he added, "There was the poetry!" Hamilton's contemporaries gave him credit for possessing a poetic mind.

Not Satisfactory.

"No," said the doctor. "I haven't voted yet, and I am not going to vote. I am not feeling well today. Isn't that a valid excuse?"

"Not at all," responded the professor severely; "that's an invalid excuse."—Chicago Tribune.

Flattery From the Mirror.

Does your mirror do you justice? You may think not. Or perhaps you would like it to flatter you just a little. If so, you can arrange it so the glass will reflect in a more complimentary manner than usual. If you do, you only have to know the milliner's oldest secret, and the thing is done.

Did you ever notice the softest drapery of pure white hung about a mirror? That is the trick. After your mirror of faultless glass is thoroughly polished frame it in pure white gauze, with the material gathered in the center at the top and falling wavelike on either side. Then notice the effect. The true tints of the complexion will be there a little emphasized. The expression of the countenance, the light of the eye, the color of the hair, will be accurately reflected, all softened and made more harmonious than your mirror showed them before the gauze was used. You may believe that that subtle bit of white materially makes the glass tell nearer the truth than it did without it.

Thoughts on Marriage.

A little girl in Ireland was asked what was the sacrament of matrimony. She said, "It's a state of torment into which souls enter to prepare them for another and a better world." "That," said the curate, "is purgatory. Put her down to the bottom of the class." "Leave her alone," said the parish priest. "For anything you or I know to the contrary, she may be perfectly right."

"Courting," said an Irishman, "is like dying. Sure, a man must do it for himself."—E. J. Hardy's "Concerning Marriage."

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Many of the Clergy in Michigan Endorse the Little Conqueror.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or sect we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our pastor. His sincerity is never doubted; that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentlemen in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings forth such testimony as follows:

The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at the time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptoms usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date, any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them."

MAYDOLE'S HAMMER.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

When Maydole was told that he made "a pretty good hammer," he said, "No, I don't make a 'pretty good hammer,' I make the best hammer that ever was made."

Every carpenter who saw a Maydole hammer wanted one. It was of the best material, perfectly balanced, and the head never flew off. Hammers were divided into two classes—1st, Maydole's; 2d, all the rest.

Plasters are separated by the same line of cleavage; 1st, Benson's Porous Plaster; 2d, all the rest. When, for rheumatic pain, a cold, a cough, kidney trouble or any other disease or ailment that may be treated externally, you ask for a plaster, any honest, reputable druggist will give you a Benson's. He knows it is incomparably the best, and he assumes that you know it too. As the name of Maydole stood for hammers the name of Benson stands for plasters—the "real thing." All the medicinal potencies that are valuable in a plaster are in Benson's. Capsicum, Strengthening and Belladonna plasters are out of date.

An army of physicians and druggists, and millions of the people, have written of Benson's Plasters as a remedy to be trusted.

Benson's Plasters have fifty-five highest awards. Accept no substitute.

For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States, on receipt of 25c. each.

MOVING PICTURES.

HOW THE SKETCHES ARE REPRODUCED UPON THE FILMS.

The Amount of Movement That May Be Crowded Into Fifty Seconds. The Greatest Successes Are Often Brought About by Accident.

"A queer thing about moving pictures," said an expert operator in that line to a New Orleans Times-Democrat reporter, "is the illusion they generally produce as to the time they occupy while on the screen. What is known as the 'standard exhibition film' is 50 feet long. It is used almost entirely for comic scenes, trick pictures and other effects that are got up in the studios of the experts who make them a specialty. Every theater goer has seen them, and I will venture the assertion that the average man will declare they take at least three or four minutes in passing before the eye. As a matter of fact the picture is on the screen less than one minute. You can easily figure it out for yourself. The ordinary 50 foot film of the kind to which I refer is put through the reproducing machine at the rate of 16 pictures to the second. Each picture is three-fourths of an inch broad, which makes the 16 measure exactly one foot, edge to edge; in other words, the film travels a foot a second—50 feet, 50 seconds. What gives it the effect of taking up so much more time is the immense lot of action that is usually crowded into the brief period it is in view. Until the moving picture was invented I don't think anybody had the least idea how much could be done in 50 seconds. It seemed hardly time enough to turn around in, yet when the experts began to study its possibilities they found it was ample for hundreds of little pictorial comedies that have since delighted audiences all over the world.

"It is entirely a matter of rehearsal. A subject is selected, generally calling for from three to four people, and every detail of the 'business' or action is carefully worked out in advance. Suppose, for illustration, that a comic burglary is the topic. The business, in skeleton, might run something like this: Old gentleman dozing in parlor; enter burglar; old gentleman awakes; burglar hides; enter policeman, searches the room, collars old gent; they fight and roll on the floor while burglar suddenly emerges and leaps out of the window. That doesn't sound particularly side splitting, but in the hands of intelligent comedians it can be made really very funny. The all essential thing is to crowd it into 50 seconds, and to that end each bit of action is carefully timed and made to fit into each other bit like so many well geared cogwheels. The old gentleman's startled yawn, the burglar's glance around the room and every step, movement and gesture from beginning to end is calculated with the utmost nicety, and at last after dozens of rehearsals the act is attempted before the recording machine. If everybody is lucky, it goes through on schedule time, but the slightest hitch is fatal, and if one occurs the film is spoiled, and they must try all over again. No wonder it seems impossible to future spectators that so much could transpire in 50 seconds.

"But some of the most telling effects in composition pictures," continued the operator, "have been the result of accident and were entirely unpremeditated. That was the case with a film that I had a hand in preparing and that afterward made a tremendous hit and proved to be one of the best sellers ever put on the market. In getting up the picture our principal purpose was to introduce a large and very intelligent bulldog I owned at the time, and we sketched out a simple little scene in which a tramp steals a pie from a kitchen window is pursued by the dog and is last seen trying to scale the back fence with the animal hanging to his coattails.

"The training of the dog was the main trouble, but I finally taught him to lay hold of anything red, and we sowed a big piece of flannel as a mark to the back of our tramp's coat. Red photographs black, so it couldn't be seen in the pictures, and after a good many rehearsals the dog learned to dash out at exactly the right moment and nail the marauder, whose cue was then to rush for the fence and consume the remaining time in making an apparently desperate effort to scramble over the top. At last we got every thing all ready, gave the word and started the record machine to take the picture.

"Immediately the little comedy began. The tramp appeared, looked around stealthily, saw the pie, hooked it and was having a feast when out sprang the bulldog and seized him by the coattails. He thereupon sprinted to the fence and was about to carry out the rest of the programme when, to our consternation, the boards gave way, and he came down bang on top of the dog. The film had about ten seconds to run, and it was occupied in recording one of the liveliest scraps that ever happened. There was no hippodrome about it. Both parties were out for blood. When the fence fell, the bulldog had promptly transferred himself from the tramp's coattail to the tramp's calf, while that unfortunate person snatched up a broomstick and tried to pry him loose. They rolled over and put about 50 times as much action and animation in the last ten seconds as had been crowded into the preceding 40. We finally pulled them apart, and it was not until the negative was developed that we realized what a prize we had accidentally secured. That earnest and impromptu wind up has convulsed audiences all over Christendom and made fully as much of a hit in Europe as it did at home."

When She Laughed.

In his volume on Ellen Terry Clement Scott tells of a somewhat self satisfied, vainglorious and grumpy actor who complained that the noted English actress continually laughed in one of his most important scenes. He had not the courage to tell her his objections, so he wrote her a letter of heartbroken complaint, in which he said: "I am extremely sorry to tell you that it is impossible for me to make any effect in such and such a scene if you persist in laughing at me on the stage and so spoiling the situation. May I ask you to change your attitude, as the scene is a most trying one?"

Miss Terry's answer was very direct and to the point, for she wrote: "You are quite mistaken. I never laugh at you on the stage. I wait till I get home."

The Retort Courteous.

"No, I have nothing for you," said the housekeeper sternly. "And don't you come here after dinner again."

"Beg pardon, lady," replied Hungry Hawkes, "but I didn't suppose you'd have dinner over dis early in de day. You ain't very stylish, are you?"—Philadelphia Press.

FLATFISHES' EYES.

A Migration Which Takes Place After the Creatures' Birth.

Flatfishes keep their white and blind side on the muddy or sandy bottom and pretend that the upper and speckled side is a part of that bottom. This they do to avoid observation, for in spite of their awkward shape they are swallowed at sight by pertinacious enemies, to the manifest discomfort of both. A greedy cormorant curling up and attempting to swallow a plaice, which tries to be as disobliging as possible, affords an object lesson not soon forgotten on the way not to behave at mealtimes. But the bird usually succeeds in its object, and the flatfish, in spite of persistent efforts to retain its natural flatness, at last disappears down the round, elastic throat of the cormorant. With a view to avoid unpleasantnesses of this kind, soles are wont to hide themselves in the sand, keeping only their eyes above the surface to act as sentinels.

In reality the dark surface of a sole, plaice or turbot is its side and not its back. It is true that both eyes are visible, which is not the case when a mackerel or a conger is laid on its side, but this is simply owing to the fact that one eye of a flatfish has since the creature's birth passed across what we may call the bridge of its nose to keep company with the other eye.

The wandering eye begins its migration at a very early age—so early, indeed, that it is a little difficult to detect it on its journey. A plaice a fifth of an inch in length and 5 days old carries one eye on each side of its nose. When three-fifths of an inch long and about 2 months old, the left eye has crossed over to the right side. Lemon soles when one inch long or 2 months old have the left eye on the edge of the head, but when double that size and 6 months old both eyes are found on the right side. A sole assumes its lopsided aspect by the time it has been hatched 2 months. When a turbot is half an inch in length, the right eye just begins to peep over the center arch of the bridge, at three-quarters of an inch it is half way across, and at an inch the passage is complete and the two eyes look out from the left side of the head. —Longman's Magazine.

AN ABANDONED FARM.

It Surely Was Hard and Stony Land, and No Exaggeration.

She was on the witness stand in her own behalf, being also defendant in the action. She was a sturdy widow, hard working, shrewd in a deal and garrulous. A landlord was suing for back rent on a little farm she had abandoned.

"You say that the land was hard and sour and sterile?" suggested the attorney for the plaintiff.

"That's what I said, only I wasn't so persnifity about it, and I'll say more"—

"Just a moment, please. We want evidence, not opinions. Did you raise anything on this land of ours?"

"Land of ours!" with a sniff. "You never owned a thimbleful of it. Yes, I did raise things on it. It took two hills to raise a bean and a whole row of corn to raise a nubbin. I raised a cabin, I raised a pigpen, and I tried to raise a goat, but it starved to death, poor thing! That ground wouldn't raise dog fennel or even Canada thistles."

"Don't exaggerate, please. You say the soil was sour?"

"I couldn't exaggerate about that ground if I was a lawyer. In the morning when the dew was steaming off in the sunshine you'd think you was living next door to a pickle factory. I kept my sugar in an airtight jar."

"Pshaw! That's ridiculous. I suppose the ground was so hard you could not blast it?"

"Nuthing of the kind. I'm here to tell the truth. But I'll tell you how hard that ground was. I had to crop my set onions out with a hatchet, and a big gander I bought broke his neck trying to pull a tuft of spear grass." The landlord did not recover.—Detroit Free Press.

Bedrooms and Breathing.

While no scientist, I think, will recommend less than seven cubic feet of air each minute for an adult, Dr. Reed gives ten as the smallest amount that will meet the wants of the body. All of this, of course, is not absolutely used, only needed that purity may be secured. The average room—12 by 10 and 8 feet high—even if the room is empty, will consume only 960 cubic feet, or enough to supply air for one person for about two hours. Now, when two or even four persons occupy such a room, the doors and windows closed to keep out the supposed "poisonous night air," it is not strange that the stench of vitiated air is overpowering to one who enters the room after breathing the pure air of heaven, such as the good Father intended for use.—Weekly Bouquet.

Juvenile Discouragement.

Elsie—Mamma, there's a funny old man in this Pickwick book that's always telling his son to beware of the widows. Why is that?

Mamma—Well, a widow is supposed to be skillful in catching a husband.

Elsie—Gracious! I wonder if I'll have to be a widow before I can get married. —Philadelphia Press.

Frozen In.

The making of postholes is an easy matter in Alaska. A mass of powder blasts out the hole in an instant, a telegraph pole is inserted, water is poured in, and the intense cold holds the pole secure in an incasement of ice.

Sterling Remedy.

Cholly Cityfeller (in country, with balky livery horse)—Beg pardon, sir, but what do you do when youah horse balks?

The Farmer—Trade him. Git up, Bill!—Puck.

Forever Dry.

There is a youngster in Girard college who combines the poetic instinct with a keen sense of humor. He is not a close student—in fact, he regards books as instruments of torture. One of the professors picked up a textbook belonging to him the other day and found on the fly leaf this bit of verse, which no doubt expressed the student's opinion of it:

> Should there be another flood,
> For refuge hither fly,
> And should the whole world be submerged
> This book would still be dry.

—Philadelphia Record.

A Pound of Cure.

"My son," said the family man, "is anxious to become a pugilist. I'm doing my best to prevent him."

"Let him go ahead," said the friend of the family, "and have some one pound him. You'll find a pound of cure worth more than an ounce of prevention."—Philadelphia Record.

No More Whispers.

"It is a great drawback to be getting deaf."

"Yes, it is; people quit telling you secrets."—Chicago Herald.

Mr. F. D. Arnold, Arnold, a., writes He was troubled with kidney disease about three years. Had to get up several times during the night but three bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure effected a complete cure, he feels better than he ever did and recommends it to his friends. J. J. Orr.

DANGER IN THE BOOK

WHY ONE MAN DREADED THE COMING INTO CAMP OF A DICTIONARY.

He Discreetly Left Before the Vociferously Applauded Sentiments He Expressed In His Speech Could Be Analyzed a la Webster.

When the son of the president of the Big Mountain Lumber company came into the mountains to learn the business, so to speak, I knew within 15 minutes that he had come to the wrong place. He was a city chap, newly graduated and thoroughly out of touch with everything mountainous. He was a bright fellow, however, and amply capable, only the mountains were not the field for his development. As time elapsed his distaste grew, and it was all he could do not to express his opinion of the mountain people, their manners, customs, homes, morals and everything connected with them. He was wise enough to confide in me alone and bided his time to get away to some more congenial clime. And he got away sooner than he expected.

It happened that there was a public meeting one night at the sawmill shed, and he was called on to make a few remarks. Every other man at the meeting except myself, who acted as chairman, was of the mountains, and their illiterate talk had roused the young college fellow to the limit. He saw a chance to get even, in his own mind at least, and when the call came for him he responded promptly. His speech, quite brief, but to the point, was as follows, copied from his own manuscript, even the [applause] part:

"My friends, I am glad to meet you on this occasion, for I have wished to say to you publicly what I think of you though our acquaintance has not been long. Coming as a stranger among you, I was only partly prepared for what was in store. Now, let me say to you that half has not been told me. [Applause.] In the internecine arena your lethiferous conduct has astounded me by the trucidation and occision characterizing it among no men I have ever known. [Loud applause.] In the diversified field of mendacity your efforts would make Machiavelli take to the tall timber. [Uproarious applause.] In all furacious, raptorial and predacious pursuits you have done such wonders that the gifted and great Jonathan Wild would have felt his latrociny was a sounding brass and his direption a tinkling cymbal. [Great applause.] In the broad expanse of labor your torpescent oscitation has made you sui generis among all pandiculate mankind. [Cheers and shouts of "Good for us!"] As good livers, your tables groan beneath their stercoraceous and impetiginous burden, and as drinkers, your temulent bibacity has made the crapulous reputation of Bacchus to be a sign of puritanical abstemiousness. [Loud applause.] As for yourselves, I take pleasure in saying here to you, without fear of successful contradiction, that your nugacity is forever established; as observers of the law, your aberrance is teratological, and personally you are a cohesive concatenation of rubigant exuviæ, that I take especial pleasure in believing does not exist elsewhere on earth. [Vociferous applause.]"

When the enthusiasm had cooled down somewhat, he proceeded to speak on the subjects before the meeting and sat down. The mountaineers were pleased to death with the college man's high flown speech about them, and though I didn't know the meaning of all the big words he used I did know that he had been calling them liars and murderers and thieves and scoundrels and drones and lawless drunkards, besides condemning their fare and anathematizing the lot of them personally. But not one of them suspected, and I was hoping nothing would come of it and they would forget, even if any of the large words were remembered, when one day a book agent drove up to the office in a buckboard and announced that he was selling Webster's Unabridged Dictionary for $2 a copy and showed a sample that was as big as a box of soap.

Nobody had ever seen so much book for the money, nor had anybody ever seen a dictionary in that neighborhood, and when the agent began to tell what a valuable thing it was to be in every family the men became interested, and it wasn't long until the agent had sold 25 copies, to be delivered the following week. When he had gone away with his sample, I called the young man into the private office for consultation.

"Don't say a word," he began, as soon as he had closed the door. "I know exactly where I am at, and I'll be some place else before Mr. Webster arrives to throw any light on my recent remarks. I am not shedding any tears, and in order that the dictionary buyers and others may know just what I think of them I shall leave two dozen copies of my speech for distribution on the morning of my departure."

He did just as he said he would, and it was a good thing for him that he never came back any more.—W. T. Lampton in Washington Star.

That's All.

"In proof of the assertion that the world is growing better," remarked Optim, "let me mention the fact that we never find stones in the coffee we buy at the grocery stores nowadays."

"No," growled Pessim. "The reason for that is that most persons who buy coffee have it ground when they buy it. The grocers pick out the stones for fear of ruining their mills. The world is growing more enlightened in its selfishness. That's all."—Chicago Tribune.

Queensland is being converted into a large orange orchard. The Australian orange ripens at a time when other countries cannot provide the fruit.

When to Select Diamonds.

"It may appear strange to you," said a diamond expert, "but damp, murky weather practically kills the diamond business. No dealer dare buy for fear of cheating himself. The purest white diamond will on one of these dark, foggy days take on a straw shade and to all appearances is off color. Always pick out a diamond on a clear day, but see to it that you have a good light on the gem, for many dealers tint their ceilings and walls a delicate hue, which gives the stone a bluish tint which it does not or should not possess in a clear light.'"—Washington Star.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good they can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonial free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

She Declined.

Few American youths have careers made for them. Those who deplore this fact and shun the stings of self effort may find tonic in the reply of a western girl to an offer of marriage.

A young man of more book learning than force of character lost the young wife who had toiled to support him, returned to his native town for consolation and found it. Some months later she, too, passed away, and the sad youth soon appealed to a well known clergyman for assistance in finding a helpmate.

The minister introduced him to a western girl of health and energy, who the next day received a plaintive note from the widower. He declared that the Lord had made great inroads upon his marital affections, and it now seemed to be his will that she would repair the breaches of his life.

The reply, which the clergyman keeps today as one of the choicest specimens of a varied collection, reads simply:

"Mend your own breeches."—Youth's Companion.

What is a "Lich Gate?"

A lich gate is a shed, generally of oak, over the entrance of a churchyard, beneath which the bearers paused when bringing a body for interment.

Here the clergyman met the body and read the introductory part of the burial service as he preceded the funeral train into the church. Examples of old lich gates are still to be seen in many country churchyards. In Wales they are more modern and are usually built of stone.

Some of the old lich gates are formed with one wide door turning on a central pivot and self closing by means of a rude pulley wheel in the roof and a stone weight inclosed in an iron frame, a primitive but effective piece of machinery.

In Herefordshire they are also called "scallage," or "scallenge gates." "Lich gate" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon lich, a corpse; hence the north country "lyke wake."—London Answers.

A Feast.

An old darky who lives in the thickets across the river came to Memphis one day to get his pension check cashed. After receiving his money, which amounted to $11, the old ex-slave sauntered down Front street to a produce house and bought three crates of cabbages. When they were delivered at the wharf late that afternoon, the old man was there and received them with a mouth watering in anticipation of the good time ahead.

"Whut yer gwine ter do wid dem cabbages?" inquired the negro drayman who delivered them.

"Eat 'em," was the quick response. "I'ze bin free 40 years, and dis is de first time I'ze had de money to buy 'nuff cabbage. I'ze gwine ter eat cabbage till I furgit de way ter my mouf."—Memphis Scimitar.

The Immensity of Space.

A photographic plate exposed to the heavens in a large telescope for any considerable length of time shows nothing but a continuous blur of light, indicating that the photographic eye sees beyond the reach of human vision such a multitude of suns that every part of space is filled. One may gain some inkling of the immensity of space by supposing the photographic plate exposed upon the remotest star it now records and looking out still farther to find the heavens still crowded with millions of millions of suns, each possibly having its quota of planets.

HONORS TO HEROES

Memorial Day Services Throughout the C untry

HALL OF FAME DEDICATED

All Over the Country Cities and Towns Vied With One Another in Revering the Memories of the Dead Heroes.

New York, May 31.—Although there were threatening signs of rain throughout the early part of yesterday, the memorial day exercises in this city were carried out with more than the usual interest. The important events on the day's program were the military parade, which was reviewed at Madison Square by Gov. Odell and Mayor Van Wyck, the exercises at Grant's tomb, where Wu Ting Fang made an address, and the dedication of the hall of fame at the New York university, at which Senator Chauncey M. Depew delivered an oration. The parade included the Old Guard acting as an escort to Gov. Odell, several detachments of United States regulars, a number of military organizations, a battalion of United States marines and all of the local posts of the G. A. R. In all there were about 15,000 men in line. A feature of the parade was the firing of a salute by the naval post opposite the statue of Farragut in Madison Square. At Grant's tomb, Wu Ting Fung, the Chinese minister, in accordance to instructions given by Li Hung Chang some years ago, placed an offering of flowers on the stone coffin containing the general's remains. Mr. Wu also delivered an address.

The ceremonies at the dedication of the hall of fame were opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hollis. Senator Chauncey M. Depew then delivered the oration.

Following the oration Chancellor McCracken of the New York university made formal declaration of the opening of the hall. The unveiling of tablets was then begun.

While the exercises at Grant's tomb were in progress, Gen. Frederick D Grant, accompanied by his wife, came through the throng to the platform. He was recognized and compelled, by repeated calls, to come to the front. He said:

"This is most unexpected. I am not a speech-maker and do not know what to say. I am overcome with emotion, and can only say that I have agreed to accept the invitation of Grant post of Brooklyn to address them soon. I shall tell them all I know about the Philippines, and I want to say right now that your boys who have been fighting over there are worthy sons and equal to their fathers."

Buffalo, N. Y., May 31.—Memorial day was observed by the veterans of the G. A. R., notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, by a short parade, after which they visited the cemeteries where the graves of the dead were covered with flowers.

Washington, May 31.—Memorial day was observed in Washington with the usual ceremonies. The weather, which has been stormy for the past week, was delightful and the exercises at the different cemeteries where soldiers are buried were large attended.

Philadelphia, May 31.—Memorial day was fittingly observed by the local Grand Army posts. The veterans of the civil war, many of them maimed and feeble, visited the various cemeteries and there paid their annual homage to their fallen brothers in arms.

Cleveland, May 31.—Memorial day exercises in this city were on an elaborate scale. The war veterans in large numbers proceeded to the various cemeteries early in the day and decorated the graves of the dead. Two plants together with two bouquets were placed on each soldier's grave. At noon the veterans met at the Central armory, where appropriate and impressive exercises were held.

Pittsburg, May 31.—The observance of Memorial day was quiet but quite general. The unsettled weather of the past week and the unpromising outlook for the day resulted in the postponement or calling off of all picnics, games, races, etc., and the day was given up to its original purpose of decorating the graves of the soldier dead Exercises were held at the various cemeteries by the G. A. R., and the bright sun and cool, fresh air made the march and the work of the veterans much pleasanter than usual.

St. Louis, May 31.—After the parade in memory of the dead of the civil war, Ransom post decorated the grave of Gen. W. T. Sherman, in Calvary cemetery, with appropriate services.

San Francisco, May 31.—Memorial day was observed with more than usual impressiveness, there being two parades, one to the national cemetery at the Presidio, the other to the Grand Army plot in Oddfellows' cemetery, under the shadow of Lone mountain.

The day was appropriately observed at other places throughout the country.

Mortgagee Shot Dead.

Platteville, Wis., May 31.—Word has just been received of the murder of Edward Otto, formerly of Platteville, in Idaho. Mr. Otto sold a large sheep ranch, which he had been running for several years, for other property and he retained a mortgage on the sheep. Hearing that the parties with whom he had made the deal intended to sell the sheep, he made a protest to them and was immediately shot and killed.

Did Business Before Death.

Goshen, Ind., May 31.—J. B. Walk, ex-mayor of Goshen, paid his monthly assessment on a $5,000 life insurance policy in the National Union and two hours afterward committed suicide by hanging himself to a gas pipe in his office. Financial troubles were the cause.

The first Rhine steamer made its trips from Rotterdam to Cologne in 1816.

If you are sick all over and don't know ust what ails you, it's ten to one your kidneys are out of order. Foley's Kidney Cure will bring you health and energy. J. J. Orr.

"I had a running sore on my breast for over a year," says Henry R. Richards of Willseyville, N. Y., "and tried a great many remedies, but got no relief until I used Banner Salve. After using one-half box, I was perfectly cured. I cannot recommend it too highly." J. J. Orr.

BURNED IN BED.

An Aged Paralytic Set Fire to Her Bed and Dies.

Detroit, Mich., May 31.—Mrs. Josephine Warn, a colored woman 50 years of age, who lived at 328 Rivard street, died at St. Mary's hospital yesterday morning as the result of injuries received in a fire.

The poor old woman had been a habitual smoker for many years. Wednesday night she was quietly smoking her pipe while she lay in bed. A spark from her pipe dropped on the bedclothes and before she could do anything to save herself she was enveloped in flames.

Other persons living in the house heard her scream fire and an alarm was turned in. Nobody seems to have done anything for the old woman, however, till Patrolman Wm. B. McAlman arrived. He smothered the fire as best he could and carried the victim out of the room. She was terribly burned and was removed without delay to St. Mary's hospital in Boyd's ambulance.

High School at Perry Burned.

Perry, Mich., May 31.—At 10 o'clock last night fire was discovered in the high school building, and at 11 o'clock it was in ruins. The loss is $12,000; insurance about $3,000. The loss includes the library of Prof. Glazier, valued at $1,500, which was totally destroyed; no insurance. All the school books were lost. The fire was probably of incendiary origin, as people living in the vicinity claim to have seen several parties come out shortly before the fire. Officers are preparing to round up the hoboes. The loss of the high school is a heavy loss to the district.

With Suicidal Intent.

Big Rapids, Mich., May 31.—During Wednesday night Josie Shattuck was discovered near the school house grounds suffering from poison. Later her companion, Vernice Davis, was found near by, also nearly dead. The girls are about 20 years old, and took the poison with suicidal intent. They are in a precarious condition. It is claimed they saw their male companions in the company of other girls and that life had no further charm for them.

A Fierce Race Riot.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 31.—About 100 coal miners, Poles on one side and Americans, Cornishmen, Irishmen and Welshmen on the other, indulged in a fierce "race" riot yesterday at Federal. Wm. Kearns was left on the battle field mortally wounded, and his brother, Robert, had his head battered and his hands cut. Wm. Kearns died within an hour after the battle and a dozen or more of his friends are in pursuit of "Shorty," a Pole, who is said to have fired the fatal shot and escaped to the hills. The pursuers are heavily armed and have threatened to kill their man if caught.

To Study American Methods.

New York, May 31.—Arthur Pearson, the millionaire newspaper and magazine proprietor of London, is coming to the United States to study American newspaper methods. Pearson owns about 30 publications, dailies, weeklies and monthlies. He has engaged passage on the White Star liner Oceanic, which will sail from Liverpool on June 5. He will spend only a week in the United States.

Stole Some Banknotes.

London, May 31.—The Daily Mail has received the following dispatch from Singapore: "Bank notes to the value of £50,000, mostly £50 notes, have been stolen from the Singapore branch of the Hong Kong and Shanghai bank. There is no trace of the thief."

Mrs. McKinley Resting Well.

Washington, May 31.—President McKinley went out driving with Secretary Root about 5 o'clock yesterday Mrs. McKinley had been resting well during the afternoon, and although visitors at the White House knew she was very weak, it was stated that she was showing slignt signs of improvement.

French Cyclist Won.

Philadelphia, May 31.—Edouard Taylore, the French cyclist, defeated Frank Cadwell of Hartford, Conn., in a 20-mile motor paced race at Woodside park. Cadwell throughout the race was unable to follow his pace while Taylore stuck to his pace beautifully. Taylore's time for the 20 miles was 36:46 2-5.

Three Men Drowned.

Cleveland, May 31.—Three unknown young men, presumably Clevelanders were drowned in Rocky river while fishing in a rowboat off Clifton park pier. The renter of the boat said the boys had not been out over an hour They were under 21 years of age.

Killed an Old Soldier.

St. Joseph, Mo., May 31.—John T. Price, an old soldier of Bethany, Mo. was murdered while in a parade on the way to the cemetery by Aut Miller, a jeweler, who was a brother-in-law of Price. Miller escaped to his home, but soon killed himself to escape capture.

Had Lost His Fourth.

One of Judge Howland's stories had to do with the old Maine farmer who had been married four times. Shortly after the death of his fourth wife a neighbor stopped him and said:

"Mornin, Cyrus. How's the wife this mornin?"

"Waal, to tell ye the truth," replied Cyrus, "I'm kinder out of wives just now."—Detroit Free Press.

Similar, but Different.

"Do you think I am capable of acting a part?" asked the stagestruck youth.

"I do," replied the busy manager, "and the farther apart we are when you act the better it will suit me."—

DRAWN TO DEATH

Boat Containing Eight People Goes Over a Dam

SEVEN MEET WATERY GRAVES

Six Girls and One Boy Meet a Watery Death on the Schuylkill River, Their Boat Going Over a Dam Near Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, May 31.—A rowboat containing a merry party of eight young persons was swept over Flat Rock dam, in the Schuylkill river, yesterday afternoon and seven of them—six girls and one boy—were drowned. The victims, all of whom were Philadelphians, were: Mazie Kennedy, 18; Maud Rutter, 19; Mamie Sullivan, 21; Florence Bond, 21; Bertram Osmond, 19; Roy Ricker, 18, and Florence Densmore, 19.

The young man saved is John Moore aged 21 years. The party was composed of members of the Elm Social club, one of the numerous associations in this city organized for the promotion of picnics and other social functions. The above named persons, with a large number of others, most of whom resided in the southern section of the city, organized a picnic. They embarked in gaily decorated wagons early and pitched their camp at Rose Glen, along the Schuylkill river, on the northern outskirts of this city.

Following their usual custom, the party split up after dinner for a row on the river, and those above mentioned decided to go in one boat. This was shortly after 2 o'clock. Boats were accordingly hired and the two parties set forth for an hour's fun on the river.

Heavy rains during the past week had made the muddy stream quite high and the current was much swifter than usual. However, the unfortunate party struck out for midstream. All the girls were huddled in the stern one of the boys was rowing and the other was sitting on the bow of the boat. After getting in the middle of the river and finding the current too swift for comfort, the boat was rowed in toward shore. During this time it was carried slowly down stream. The boy doing the rowing decided to go through the locks, and as he approached the dam he was hailed by the lockkeeper not to approatch any closer. The warning was not heeded and the young oarsman kept on rowing until he found that the lock was closed. He attempted to turn the boat, which was then about 50 feet from the dam and 25 feet from shore, but he turned the wrong way. A moment later and the boat was in the swiftly-moving current. Realizing then for the first time that they were in danger, he girls began screaming and the oarsman lost control of the boat. Swiftly it was carried toward the brink of the falling water, and just as it reached the breast of the dam, over which 30 inches of water was passing, the entire eight stood up and the boat went over stern first.

The drop to the rocks below is approximately 12 feet. The boat struck the water bottom up and as it disappeared the whole party was under it. Nothing more was seen by the few persons who saw the accident, for almost a minute, when the boat reappeared with one boy clinging to its keel. Then the other young man was seen to come to the surface and make a frantic effort to reach shore by swimming. The six girls never rose to the surface.

The boy who was swimming and who proved to be Osmond, became exhausted and sank before he could be rescued. Moore, the other boy, who was clinging to the boat, floated fully a half mile down the river, and his rescuers had an exciting time before they landed him in another boat. He was greatly exhausted and was slightly injured by the falling of the boat.

Up to a late hour last night none of the bodies of the victims had been recovered.

Pretty Far Off.

A summer resident in a New Hampshire village, a lady who, in Horace Walpole's phrase, "sits at the top of the world," was making her first friendly call of the season upon the family of an old widower.

Only the father was at home, one of the girls being absent on a visit to the other sister, who had been married during the past winter. Naturally the talk turned on the daughters.

"Yes," said the father; "Mary made out real well. But I don' know's I'll ever work Lizabeth off. There's a young man been comin here steady now for two year, an he's no further on yet, ma'am, than me an you."—

OLD BOYS IN GRAY.

Grand Parade of Confederate Veterans in Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., May 31.—Marching once more beneath their battle flags their hearts aflame with the glorious memories of 40 years, their advance and halt once more regulated by the bugle's blast, their steps again timed by the tap of drums, 4,000 of the south's immortals marched through the streets of Memphis.

That the recollection of what they dared, of what they suffered and endured, that the appreciation of their constancy, their triumphs and their valor, are still as fresh in the hearts of their people as ever they have been in the past, the old soldiers received ample evidence. It was a day ideal for a parade. A detail of mounted police led the way and cleared the streets for a clattering squadron of horsemen, acting as escort to Gen. Gordon, who, proceeded by the Mammoth band of Fifth Ohio infantry from Cincinnati, rode slowly along, his form as erect, his head as high and his hand on the bridle as tight and firm as in his younger days. His right hand was in almost ceaseless motion as he raised his hat to acknowledge the cheers that came to him from all sides.

Behind Gen. Gordon came carriages containing the Southern Mothers. In the ranks the veterans of the army of Northern Virginia were given right of line and Virginia had the lead. First among them came the Monticello Guards, acting as escort for the sponsors of all other divisions, in carriages gay with the confederate colors and bearing on the sides shields of red, white and blue, on which appeared the name of their state.

Then came Generals Fitzhugh Lee and Joseph Wheeler. The welcome accorded them rivalled that extended to Gen. Gordon. The parade took one hour and forty minutes in passing a given point.

DON'T LOOK SO ROSY.

Employers' Ultimatum May Precipitate a Long Strike.

Chicago, May 31.—The total breakdown of the attempts at arbitration had been announced early in the evening at the Great Northern hotel, where the joint arbitration board of the union and the manufacturers' association had been in session for five hours in the afternoon.

The issue up for arbitration was the question of fixing a wage scale per hour for the new nine-hour day, inaugurated May 20 in place of the ten-hour day, then abrogated. Efforts at effecting a compromise were made by both sides, but this failing a general strike was regarded as inevitable from the moment that a deadlock became apparent.

Far-reaching consequences are to follow in the machinist trade throughout the country because of the rupture in the Chicago negotiations for arbitration. One of the immediate and most important results is that the New York agreement for a permanent arbitration board to settle differences was declared abrogated by the administrative council of the National Metal Trade Manufacturers in session at the Great Northern hotel. Still another important sequel was that the failure of arbitration was followed by the promulgation of an "open shop" or anti union ultimatum by the same body. This ultimatum is akin in many ways to the famous ultimatum issued by the Chicago building contractors at the outbreak of the great labor war of last year.

Hartford, Conn., May 31.—A meeting of striking machinists and allied mechanics employed by the American Bicycle company and the Pratt & Whitney Co. was held to hear the report of a conference committee which had an interview with their employers Wednesday, and it was unanimously voted to accept concessions granted by both companies and to return to work on Monday next. It is understood that the companies grant the nine-hour day with ten hours' pay without formal recognition of the union. The shops employ over 1,400 men.

Cornell Victorious.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 31.—Cornell oarsmen proved their worth once more yesterday, and in the two-mile race on Lake Cayuga their second crew rowed across the finish easy winners over the second crews of Columbia and Pennsylvania. Coach Courtney's men showed splendid form and in addition possessed weight and power superior to their opponents. They rowed to victory in the excellent time of 10 minutes and 52 seconds, lowering the record for the course made two years ago by 34 seconds. Columbia was second, finishing in 11:02, and Pennsylvania made the distance in 11:08½. The Ithacans had a lead of two and a half lengths on Columbia, and the New York crew had about the same advantage over the Pennsylvania oars men.

A Courageous Woman.

Anderson, Ind., May 31.—Mrs. Chas. O. Curtis shot a burglar last night. She was alone in the house with her baby when she heard a noise in the cellar. Mrs. Curtis took a revolver in one hand and carrying a young baby on her left arm reached the dining room in time to see the burglar coming from the cellar into the kitchen. He turned and tried to get out of the door when she shot. The man fell down stairs, but escaped, although badly wounded.

Flirting With Men in Front.

New York, May 31.—"Flirting with men in front" is a misdemeanor in the eyes of two young women of the New York stage. Because she thinks that Lulu Glaser accused her of it Mazie Foullette, a pretty understudy, began a suit in the supreme court to recover $10,000 damages. Miss Follette says she not only lost her position because of the accusation of the prima donna, but lost her fiance as well.

Count William Bismarck Dead.

Varzin, Prussia, May 31.—Count William Bismarck, second son of the late Prince Bismarck, died yesterday after a brief illness. He was born in 1852.

Forethought.

"Your letters to me," said his affianced bride one day, "are so cold and formal."

TO MEMORY DEAR

Michigan Does Honor to the Men Who Died

FIGHTING FOR THE OLD FLAG

Capt. Hobson Spoke at Orion Lake and Made a Good Impression—The Day Generally Celebrated Throughout the State.

Detroit, Mich., May 31.—The memorial exercises in honor of the nation's soldier dead yesterday afternoon, and the parade by which these exercises were prefaced, passed off finely with faultless weather. The parade formed at 2 o'clock on Woodward avenue at Grand Circus park, Chief Marshal Geo. W. Chandler directing the organization.

Thousands viewed the moving ranks of men as they passed in review Marching to the music of many bands the soldiers of today, represented by the regular army, the state troops, the Naval Reserves and the members of other orders, formed the vanguard. They marched as a guard of honor for the heroes of 1861-65, who followed closely, stepping off with foot yet firm and carriage still retaining its military bearing.

Following the veterans of the civil war and the men of the Spanish-American war came carriages bearing the speakers of the day, Mayor Maybury and the members of the common council. The parade was flanked by a detachment of cavalry from Orchard Lake and squads of police officers.

The line of march was down Woodward to Jefferson, to Russell and to the Light Guard armory on Larned street, where a packed audience listened to the exercises of the afternoon.

Upon the stage were the school children, comprising the large chorus their seats rising tier above tier, while below were seated those who took part in the exercises, and the guests of honor. Down the aisles came the veterans who had marched in the parade These were seated directly in front of the platform in places reserved for them.

One of the oldest of the G. A. R. veterans, and a hero of three wars, is James D. Elderkin, now in his 84th year. He gave the "assembly" call The service was formally opened by Major George W. Chandler, who introduced William T. Gage as chairman.

Rev. Charles E. Woodcock opened with prayer and Mayor Maybury made a short address, followed by the speaker of the day, Hon. E. P. Allen of Ypsilanti, who was frequently applauded during his effort.

Appropriate exercises also marked the dedication of a beautiful vase placed in Soldiers and Sailors' plat, Elmwood cemetery, in memory of the sailors who have passed away. The presentation speech was made by James M. Mandeville. The vase was accepted on behalf of the Michigan Naval Veterans' association.

Lake Orion, Mich., May 31.—When the managers of Lake Orion assembly invited Capt. Richmond P. Hobson to deliver the Memorial day address, and he accepted, they knew they had a fine attraction. The crowd which gathered in the big assembly hall was large enough to delight Richard Mansfield. Capt. Hobson made an impressive address and was well received.

A monument to the memory of Gen Macomb was unveiled at Mt. Clemens, and other places in the state observed the day in a fitting manner.

WOULDN'T BE SAT ON.

So He Plunged a Knife Into a Butcher's Side.

Monroe, Mich., May 31.—During the course of a saloon row here, William Rudert, a butcher, was stabbed by a negro named "Doc" Stokes, and the victim may die. Stokes is in jail awaiting the result of the butcher's injuries.

Rudert, it is alleged, seized a chair and pounded Stokes over the head with it, knocking the negro down. While Rudert was engaged in sitting on Stokes, the negro pulled out a putty knife and thrust it into Rudert's side. The knife entered just below the fifth rib on the left side and made a gash five inches long. Physicians say Rudert is in a critical condition.

Died from His Injuries.

Pontiac, Mich., May 31.—Fred Newbirth, who was assaulted during a drunken row a week ago Saturday night, died last night from his injuries It is claimed that Albert Stroud of this city jumped on him, and during the melee Newbirth's head was cut open resulting in death. Stroud is now serving a 30-day sentence in the county jail for being drunk and disorderly. It is probable that a charge of manslaughter will be preferred against him. Cyrus Windiate, who, is is alleged, was closely concerned in the row, will be a witness. He is out on suspended sentence for being drunk and disorderly.

Promoters in Jeopardy.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 31.—It is now stated that the grand jury will probably indict at least two of the principal eastern men engaged in the water deal. While the jury did not at first start in with the idea of purifying New York as well as Grand Rapids, the failure of the promoters thus far to respond to summons to testify has led them to decide to corral the entire bunch if possible.

Well-Known Professor Dead.

Adrian, Mich., May 31.—Dr. D. C. Thomas, ex-president of Adrian college, dropped dead in the Lima Northern station just after purchasing his ticket to Sand Lake, where he was to make a Decoration day speech yesterday morning. He was well known all over the country among literary and college people.

CONFER TOGETHER

President McKinley and His Advisors Talk on Cuba

SOME PERPLEXING PROBLEMS

Secretary Root Has Been Kept Fully Advised by Gov.-Gen. Wood Regarding the Progress of Events in Cuba Up to Date.

Washington, May 31.—An important conference on Cuban relations took place at the White House yesterday afternoon. There were present with President McKinley, Secretary Root, Senator O. H. Platt, chairman of the senate committee on relations with Cuba, and Senator Spooner of Wisconsin. For more than an hour and a half the situation in Cuba was considered and when the conference broke up no determination had been reached. It is expected that the whole matter will be brought before the cabinet today, and possibly will be further discussed with those who have had much to do with shaping Cuban relations thus far.

Secretary Root has been fully advised by Gov.-Gen. Wood regarding the progress of events in Cuba and has been informed of the action of the convention in its successive stages, together with the final action of the convention in adopting the Platt amendment and the interpretation placed upon it by the convention, as well as the interpretation of the interviews between the Cuban commissioners and the president and secretary of war. He was thus able to inform the president fully of the definite results of the convention in adopting the Platt amendment as amended or interpreted by the delegates. This information was the basis of the discussion during the conference yesterday.

The president and his advisors must determine whether the Platt amendment has been substantially adopted by the convention. This is preliminary to the withdrawal of the United States authority and forces from the island of Cuba. If it should be found that the interpretation of the convention is not satisfactory to this government, quite a difficult problem arises, as it seems to be the intention of the Cubans to proceed to form a government, and that government must be recognized or rejected by the president, as he has full power to determine whether the act of congress has been complied with by the convention.

Another problem which has been discussed by those interested in Cuban affairs relates to what would follow should the new Cuban government be recognized. The Cuban government, it is asserted, will be for some time without the machinery to execute its own laws and put in operation its own edicts. It is held by some lawyers that the moment the Cuban government is recognized the authority of the United States ceases, and there is some question as to who would be responsible for the preservation of law and order, as the new government would have no troops and no police force and would be practically powerless should there be any opposition to its decrees and orders. The question whether United States forces would be warranted in upholding the government in executing its orders has been raised; also whether the president of the United States would be authorized as commander-in-chief of the army to give orders to our troops further than their recall from foreign territory.

Before the Cuban convention acted these subjects were under consideration to some extent, but as a new government is in process of formation, with the Platt amendment adopted, with certain reservations, they become vitally interesting. That the president and secretary of war regard the whole Cuban problem a serious one was shown in the consultation with the senators who were largely responsible for the legislation.

An impression gained currency that the Philippine situation and the effect on it of the supreme court decisions was the subject of the conference yesterday, but this was denied by those who participated in it. The complete opinions of the court have not been read and considered with the care necessary to arrive at any fruitful results as to their bearing upon the Philippines.

Gave Fortune to His Slayer.

Moberly, Mo., May 31.—It developed here in the probating of a will of Carl Dolhoff that he had willed the bulk of his estate to Omer Cook, the man who shot and fatally wounded him in a dispute several months ago. After the affray Cook took his wounded victim to his home and nursed him carefully night and day in the hope that he would recover. Dolhoff lingered for several months, but finally succumbed to his injury. Before dying Dolhoff made a statement in which he said that he was to blame for the tragedy and that he fully forgave Cook.

Bank President Goes to Prison.

Kansas City, Mo., May 31.—D. V. Rieger, whose conviction and sentence to six years in the penitentiary for wrecking the Missouri National bank while president of that institution has been affirmed by the highest courts, will leave New York Saturday, unaccompanied by an officer, to deliver himself into the custody of the United States marshal for this district. He will not come to Kansas City, but will go direct to Jefferson City, where he will be met by an officer with a copy of the mandate committing him to prison.

Rich Burglar Stays In Prison.

Waupun, Wis., May 31.—J. H. Stokes has inherited $50,000, but for the next two years he will be forced to be the guest of the state at the prison in this city. He was convicted of a charge of burglary in Dane county and was sent up to serve a sentence. That was before he fell heir to the fortune.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY

CAPT. CHAS. KING, U.S.A.

"You admit having seen him before?"

"I do, sir."

"Where and when?"

"Before I joined the regiment, sir. I met him with another man at Pawnee."

Captain Ray was silent a moment. He stood scrutinizing in deep concern the pale, clear cut face before him.

"When I vouched for you in the adjutant's office the day of your enlistment, I felt somehow that you were a truthful man and not a runagate, and I don't wish to be disappointed in you. I don't want to find a man with a clouded record in my troop. What do you know about that robbery?"

"Nothing more than everybody else, sir—that it took place and that"— But here again he hesitated.

"Well, that what, Hunter?" said Captain Ray, noting the soldier's significant pause.

"Nothing more, sir. I met one of the prisoners at Pawnee in a restaurant some few weeks ago. I never saw him before, and I've never seen him since—except that day."

Ray stood calmly studying his man. "I told you it was taking chances to enlist an applicant who looked as though he might have been a man of high social standing," said he presently, "and you looked me in the eye and said I shouldn't regret taking you in my troop. You've been with me barely a week, and already you are the object of suspicion. How long will it be before I hear you directly accused of something to make me deeply regret my overconfidence?"

Hunter started as though to speak, but the words died on his lips. From the direction of the barracks a soldierly step was swiftly approaching. The turf beneath their feet began to light up with the gleam of a nearing lantern. It was the first sergeant again, and Hunter heard him abruptly halt, true to the formal etiquette of the old cavalry days, and await his captain's signal to approach.

"Remain here a moment," said Ray to his anxious recruit. "What is it, sergeant?"

"I found Sergeant Merriweather, who was absent from roll call, at his quarters, sir."

"What excuse had he for his absence?" was the brief question.

"Well, sir, his wife says that he had met with a mishap—had a fall in the dark. But it looked to me more like a blow, and he couldn't deny it, sir."

"A blow? Assaulted? When, and by whom?"

"Just a few minutes ago, sir. Close to his own door, I think."

Ray's head went back with a jerk, an odd old trick of his when mentally aroused. "He must know who did it, unless he was struck from behind. Did you ask him?"

"Certainly, sir, and he declares he didn't see, and Mrs. Merriweather declares it was two men, and they ran away toward barracks the moment they downed him."

For a few seconds the sergeant stood looking at his captain's perplexed face. Then the recruit suddenly and impulsively stepped forward. Before he could speak Captain Ray threw up his hand in warning gesture, as though commanding silence. The first sergeant whirled abruptly and stood facing toward the distant south gate. Borne on the night wind came a confused medley of hoarse murmurs, of distant shouts, of rapid running feet, then from far out across the townward stretch of prairie the muffled report of firearms, one, two, three, and from the direction of the guardhouse a soldier came rushing like a Wyoming gale.

"What is it, Kid?" sang out the sergeant to the sprinter.

"Sheriff Conway—stabbed, and his prisoners loose. They want the doctor."

"Why," said Ray in surprise, "what business could he have out here? What does it mean?"

"They were telling me just before tattoo, captain, that Conway came out with a warrant for some one here at the fort, but asked to see Prisoner Healy, one of the two that escaped the night of the train robbery—the one of the two that was recaptured. The man must have knifed him and got away."

"Is Captain Ray there?" came a call from the darkness in the deep, well known voice of the colonel, and Ray sprang to answer. Then the sergeant turned on Trooper Hunter.

"Look here, young feller," said he. "They tell me you're the chap Conway wanted."

CHAPTER VIII.

A general court martial had convened at Ransom for the trial of such enlisted men as should be brought before it, and the president thereof looked out from behind his newspaper during a lull in the proceedings, and, with the characteristic expression which seemed to say, "Don't you dare lie to me now," popped the following question:

"Blake, what's the name of the Three Guardsmen?"

And Blake, never laying down his paper or changing a muscle of his long, sallow countenance, placidly and promptly responded, "Clotho, Lachesis and Atropos."

Captain Gregg, sitting at the right of the presiding officer, after reflecting profoundly a moment, slowly nodded, as though to say, "Right, though I didn't think you knew." Captain Truscott, sitting opposite Gregg and busily occupied with a letter, glanced quickly from under his heavy lashes and compressed his lips. Some of the youngsters farther down the long table looked a bit mystified, but Blake's balance wheel, Captain Ray, was not a member of the court and probably would have accepted the reply as authoritative had he been there, for Ray was no reader. It was the questioner who looked dissatisfied, and the questioner, as usual, was Mainwaring.

For a moment he pondered, scowling at Blake the while, then outspoke:

"Well, that's all right, probably, but what I want to get at is the name of that other fellow with 'em—Dee—something—how do you pronounce it?"

"Depends on whether you're in a salon or a saloon, major," answered Blake. "Dartanyan in one case and Dee Artagnan in t'other. What have you stumbled on now?"

"Nothing much. Reading about a fellow that named his horse that and thinks he's going to sweep the race tracks from Jerome park to Jerusalem. Dee—what d'you call him? I wouldn't ride one of their steeplechases on an English saddle if you'd give me $1,000."

"I wouldn't care to ride one on any other kind—certainly not on one of our service saddles," said Blake, whose long legs could wrap around any horse in the regiment. Those high, sharp pommels are the worst kind of thing to use cross country."

"Not if you know how to ride," said the major, who loyally stood by everything that was regulation. "I'll bet you any real cavalryman will tell you that he'd rather use a McClellan for any kind of riding than any other kind of saddle."

"Done," said Blake, "and leave it to Stannard or Ray." And here he kicked across under the table to rouse his opposite fellow member to full rejoicing in the colloquy, for Mainwaring couldn't bear to hear Stannard quoted as authority on any subject and was sure that Ray was a vastly overrated officer.

"What does Stannard know about it anyhow?" bristled Mainwaring. "He never rode anything but a McClellan. And as for Ray, I know a dozen better riders and cavalrymen who agree with me."

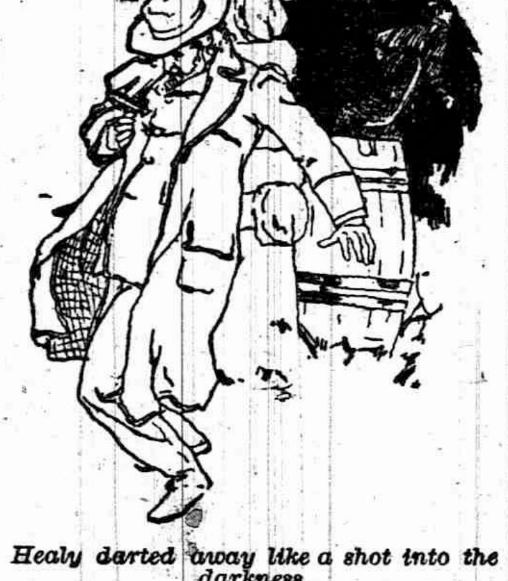
"All right. You come out to the hurdles after court adjourns, major, and we'll give you a chance to see the difference. That pretty mare of Mrs. Ray's is to have a jumping lesson this afternoon, and you can try both saddles and systems if you like."

But the re-entrance of the judge advocate with the prisoner put a stop to the chat, and Mainwaring called the court to order.

A week had rolled by since the night of the assault on Sergeant Merriweather and the stabbing of Sheriff Conway. The first episode seemed to have died out of the interest of even the few who knew of it, for Merriweather's lips were sealed, but the second was still the topic of excited talk.

And well it might be. Armed with a warrant, so he claimed, for the arrest of certain soldiers of the garrison, Conway had come to the post about tattoo that evening, had stopped at the guardhouse and asked to see Prisoner Healy, a soldier under charges of assault and robbery of a fellow trooper only a few weeks before. Healy and a companion confined as an accomplice had sawed their way out and escaped, as has been told, but the former was recaptured and brought back. He was a merry little Irishman, an almost universal favorite before the trouble occurred. The garrison declared to a man he couldn't have had a hand in the robbery, though it was probable he couldn't have kept out of the assault. But evidence of a serious character was piled up against him when he made the suspicious attempt to get away. Conway was possessed with the idea that Healy knew something about the train robbery. No one could surely identify any of the seven languishing in Butte's stronghold, and the sheriff was at his wits' end. The officer of the guard had gone over to get his heavy coat and to change into rough rig for the night when Conway appeared, and an overconfident sergeant, detailing a sentry to stand close by, permitted Healy to come out of the prison room and be questioned. At first the young Irishman was stubborn and would tell nothing, but gradually he made admissions and kept glancing fearfully over his shoulder as though he thought the sentry might hear. So Conway drew him around behind the portico of the heavy log structure and told the sentry to come no nearer; he would be responsible. The very next minute the sentry heard a stifled cry, a scuffle. Healy darted away like a shot into the darkness. The sentry and the guard pursued in vain, and Conway lay stabbed to the hilt of a ghastly looking knife. He had bled almost to death before the surgeon reached him or unskilled hands could check the flow. Now he was lying at the post hospital, slowly convalescing, but very weak and dazed.

The question was, what had become of Healy? Where was he in hiding, for no man answering his description had boarded the transcontinental trains far or near. Butte was a big, straggling frontier town, illimitable in its future possibilities, said the "promoters," and equally illimitable in present devices for concealing stolen property or stealing practitioners. Butte had a large floating population and small sinking fund, the latter devoted to rewards for capture of malefactors, and Conway had a widespread reputation for sleepless vigilance and luckless ventures. He made many arrests, and nearly as many errors in the eyes of the law, since convictions were few and far between. He had gloried in his seven desperadoes just about 48 hours. Then as man after man looked them over and said he couldn't testify against them, as they proved to be perfect strangers, Conway's face grew lined and anxious. It began to look as though failure were again about to stamp him, when some one suggested that Pat Healy at the post could tell him all he wanted to know, and somebody else whispered that the sooner he got every man even remotely connected with the robbery the better would it be for his chance of re-election. Then he came to Ransom trebly armed, but his very first victim proved far too clever, adroit and dangerous. The knife was driven furiously, and it was God's mercy the sheriff was not killed outright.



Healy darted away like a shot into the darkness.

And then Miss Leroy, the Mainwarings' guest, had developed an odd fad for an eastern girl. A more independent young woman had never been seen at Ransom. She was always unlike other girls, said Mrs. Mainwaring. She had always visited the poor and needy at home, had headed all manner of charitable schemes as a young girl and had a mania for reading aloud to the sick. Few of the ladies of the —th, deeply imbued though some of them were with religious faith, had ever thought it their duty to visit the patients in the big post hospital. The surgeon and the steward did all that. The young assistant surgeon was a bachelor and susceptible. Miss Leroy's plea to be allowed to visit the hospital was eagerly granted, and he himself was there to escort her.

One of the first patients to interest her was Sheriff Conway, to whom she was now reading aloud an hour every morning. Mild raillery had no effect upon her. Expostulation was not resorted to, for it speedily developed that, with all her slender, dainty physique, Miss Leroy had a vigorous, if placid, will of her own. The post surgeon had said there was no harm whatever, in fact it was a blessing to more patients than one, therefore by all means let Miss Leroy keep it up. Thereafter there was no one to say her nay. Secretly Mrs. Mainwaring had hoped the colonel and her husband would express disapproval, but, with the perversity of their sex, they persisted in saying to Miss Leroy that she was an angel of goodness and it was a wonder that other women had not done likewise long before. By the time she had been three weeks at Ransom Kate Leroy was better known and infinitely better loved in the quarters of the married soldiers whose little ones were ailing and in the wards of the big hospital than all but two or three of the ladies of the regiment. It was a new departure at the post.

Day after day, then, was she to be seen, each morning about 10 o'clock, on her way to her patients, and with them she would stay until orderly call sounded at noon. There were four men in hospital when she began; there were seven men at the end of the week, and the doctor said she was making it too attractive a place after all.

"Next thing," said Wilkins, "she'll be after beatifying the gyardhouse."

Mrs. Mainwaring found that telling her niece what people said about this fad of hers had no effect whatever. So she went a bit further and told her things people really had not said, but might say. This, too, fell harmless. Afternoons and evenings Miss Leroy was ready to devote to social duties and Mrs. Mainwaring, but the morning readings to the men in the convalescent ward went on without interruption or noteworthy incident an entire week. Then came a change in the arrangement.

True to his colors, Mainwaring was out at the hurdles ten minutes before anybody else that afternoon, and loudly calling for Blake to come and make good his word. He came soon enough, Mrs. Ray and Mrs. Blake, two charming women, with him. Presently out rode Captain Billy on his old favorite Dandy, now a sedate steed over 10 years of age, after him strode his Irish groom Hogan, leading a beautiful little bay mare, all points and elasticity, a spirited, dancing creature, with dainty head and legs, brilliant eyes, pretty pointed ears and a satin coat that fairly glistened. The hurdles were at the edge of the drill ground on the northeast side of the post, and no sooner was the party sighted from the barracks than a number of troopers made their way to the fence, and with appreciative eyes stood watching at respectful distance the preparation for Stella's first lesson with sidesaddle and skirt.

Among the men was Sergeant Merriweather, still discolored as to his face, but an interested spectator for all that. Mainwaring, Ray and Blake were in riding dress, Mainwaring and Ray in saddle, and Mainwaring's first bellow was, "Now, where's your English saddle?"

"Coming," said Blake coolly, and pointed toward the stables, whence, at easy gait, a tall, slender soldier came riding a troop horse, carrying something over his arm. Blake recognized at once Ray's recent acquisition, Hunter. Mainwaring stopped glaring at Blake, turned and gazed at the newcomer with all his eyes, and then whirled in saddle toward Ray and ejaculated, "Well, I'll be d——d!" There were times when even the presence of ladies couldn't restrain Mainwaring's impulse to verbal outbreaks.

"Thought you had a whole troop of rough riders, Ray," said he, after again glowering at the newcomer until he grew tired of the calm indifference which rewarded his gaze. "This ain't one of your lot, is it? I've seen him before."

"Yes, the day you persuaded him not to enlist," laughed Ray good naturedly. "I roped him in afterward." Then, lowering his voice, "He's got a hand on a horse's mouth as light as a child's."

The tall recruit had dismounted from his own troop horse, and, having thrown the reins over a picket of the fence, was now quietly approaching Stella, with a light English saddle in his hand. Hogan, dismounted, was petting her glossy neck and speaking soothingly, but the pretty creature, with ears erect, was switching about, apparently hunting for something at which to shy, and the ladies' furs gave her ready excuse. The moment Mrs. Ray stepped forward to pat her, Stella backed vigorously, dragging Hogan with her, and, despite Ray's practiced hand extended to aid, back she persisted in going until she bumped into the hurdle post. This furnished excuse for a kick and a plunge. Ray sprang from his saddle, and, telling Hogan to look after Dandy, himself took Stella's bit and began Blue Grass expostulation, which seemed more intelligible than Irish. At all events, the mettlesome creature quieted down long enough to admit of Hunter's approach, and that tall, silent young soldier quickly set and girthed the saddle, and then, at a nod from his captain, vaulted on her back, Ray letting go the moment the reins were gathered.

And then did Stella dance nimbly, daintily about, playful and spirited, but not in the least vicious, Hunter giving her head abundant room to toss and maintaining only light and easy pressure on the bit. Mainwaring sniffed disdainfully at the uncavalrylike pose, the long, flat seat, the knees far to the front, the feet set home in the stirrups and away forward. He sniffed still more when Stella began to bound and curvet, and Hunter rose slightly in his stirrups, riding lightly, springingly and never thinking of sitting fast. Ray called to Merriweather to bring one or two men and come over to the hurdles, and, without an audible word, the order was obeyed, though it was remarked at the time that the sergeant hesitated a bit, possibly because of his disfigured face.

"Try her over the bar first, Ray," said Mainwaring. And, with a man stationed at each post and the bar set easily nearly three feet from the ground, Hunter guided his pretty mount to the spot, let her sniff at and examine the strange affair, then as quietly rode her a dozen yards away, turned her head to the bar, and relaxing the reins gave her the hint to go, his long sinewy legs close pressed to the saddle. Stella came at it delightedly, but changed her mind with the second stride and would have flown the track but for the firm hand and closed leg. Finding she couldn't dodge and had to do it, she rose high, and, half affrighted, cleared the bar and came bounding lightly to the turf, then bolted away with blood in her eye and the bit in her teeth. Only a few rods, however. Hunter, sitting her like wax now, reined her round in broad circle, headed her back for the group, gradually checking her speed as he neared the party.

IT MADE HIM A HERO.

AN ACT THAT BROUGHT A LAWYER FAME AND FORTUNE.

It Looked Like an Exhibition of Pure Nerve and Daring, but In Reality It Was Simply an Outcome of His Nearsightedness.

"A person who enjoys good eyesight," said a man who most decidedly does not, "would be greatly astonished to know how little is seen by those who are nearsighted even to a moderate degree. The average shortsighted man, of whom there are hundreds in every large city, sees nothing distinctly more than a foot away from his nose. Beyond that distance the outline of objects becomes hazy and indistinct, growing rapidly more and more so until everything is finally merged into one general blur. The faces of people across the street are mere pink blotches, their figures are destitute of detail, signs are indecipherable 30 feet away, and the whole movement of traffic and passing shows in the thoroughfare is a misty panorama, in which nothing much smaller than a cab can be definitely distinguished.

"Of course a nearsighted person can see as well as anybody through properly fitted glasses, but a great many folks regard them as such a disfigurement that they prefer to do without their aid. That kind of pride is certainly very foolish because it causes one to miss at least nine-tenths of what is going on, to say nothing of being an open invitation to accident. Yet, oddly enough, I know of a case in which it actually saved a man's life and laid the foundation of a fortune.

"The hero of the episode was a lawyer in a city in Ohio where I spent my boyhood. He was beyond middle age at the time, but was straight as an arrow and a decidedly handsome, soldierly looking personage. These good looks of his were his weak point, and although he was extremely nearsighted he was vain enough to deny himself glasses and kept the fact of his infirmity a secret. The consequence of this folly was a wide reputation for haughtiness, as he rarely recognized anybody on the street, and it undoubtedly damaged him in his practice. At any rate, he had never made anything more than a very modest living when the curious incident I have in mind occurred.

"The city government had been for a long time under ring rule," continued the story teller, "and it finally became so bad that the decent people revolted and organized a reform movement. The good looking lawyer—call him Colonel Jones for convenience—was one of the reformers, and, among other things, he made himself active in securing indictments against a number of gambling house keepers.

"The boss ringster of the place was a typical bully and ward politician named Harding, who was financially interested in several of the games and naturally furious at any interference. He was a giant physically, he would fight at the drop of a hat and the personal fear he inspired was really the secret of his influence. After the gambling indictments were found he proceeded to use his 'pull' to have them pigeonholed, and, learning what was going on, Colonel Jones was rash enough to write a newspaper card in which he scored the authorities for allowing such a ruffian to defeat the ends of justice.

"The colonel looked like a soldier, but he was really a very bland and peaceable gentleman, and he never dreamed that his little effusion would get him into personal difficulty. On the morning the card appeared he was walking calmly to his office when Harding rushed out of a bar across the street, called him by name and at the same time leveled a six shooter at his head. At that distance all coons looked alike to the nearsighted lawyer, and, turning in the direction of the voice, he made out the vague figure of a man with outstretched arm apparently beckoning him to come over.

"A little surprised, but still perfectly placid, he started to cross the street. Harding glared at him in amazement and once or twice was on the point of pulling the trigger, but the spectacle of that serene and dignified figure calmly advancing straight on the muzzle of the gun was too much for his nerves, and before the colonel traversed half the distance he dropped the weapon and ignominiously fled.

"Needless to say, the episode made a tremendous sensation, and Jones, who had sense enough to hold his tongue, was the popular hero of the hour. Harding, on the contrary, was ruined, for his prestige had disappeared like a flash of lightning, and, unable to stand the disgrace of the affair, he quietly sold out his belongings and left the city. That broke the back of the ring, the reformers went into control, and the colonel was elected mayor by a tremendous majority. He served two terms, built up one of the biggest law practices in that part of the state and died worth nearly a quarter of a million dollars.
